Cohasset girls youth lax teams beat the heat

Big wins over Braintree and Norwell highlight week

The heat was brutal, but the Cohasset youth girls lacrosse teams worked through it on June 8, fighting for wins in Braintree and Norwell.

At the 15-and-Under level (grades 7 and 8), Cohasset White had its unbeaten season on the line against Braintree on the steamy turf of Thayer Academy. Whitney Jaffe scored the game's first two goals on penalty shots, only to see Braintree come right back to tie the score. Jenna Reece, who arrived late to give Cohasset its one and only substitute, came off the bench to spark the team, scoring two goals to break the deadlock and give the White team a lead it would never relinquish. Nicole Farren finished the first-half scoring, controlling the draw after Reece's second score and driving all the way to the net for the score.

Cohasset extended a 5-2 halftime lead to 8-2 thanks to Jaffe and Sarah Evans. First, Evans assisted Jaffe, then Evans knocked down the goalie's pass after Braintree had stopped her shot, scooped up the loose ball and fired it home, and then Jaffe netted her fourth goal of the game. A three-goal Braintree run made it look like this game might get close, but Evans fed Reece to stop the momentum. Jaffe converted a slick pass from Nicole Farren and then scored an unassisted goal to put the game out of reach. Two late Braintree goals made the final 11-7, but Cohasset escaped the heat with its undefeated record intact.

Anna Seraikas, Eloise Lucas and Julia Canney played every minute of this scorcher on defense, and did a great job sparking the transition game. Kylie Coffman, Amanda Farren and Abby Carrier ran the midfield and came up with solid plays at both ends of the field to allow Cohasset to play the controlled, slow style necessary to win a game when badly outnumbered in such heat.

In Norwell, the Cohasset Blue team showed up light for the game, which was bad news on a day of such unrelenting heat. It didn't seem to matter much early in the first half; after trading the first four goals of the game, Cohasset scored three in a row to take control of the contest, and should have extended its lead, but for some savvy goalkeeping by Norwell. The home team, however, scored three of the half's final four goals to make it 6-5 at the break.

Whitney Jaffe scored five of the Blue team's first-half goals, with Danielle Frederick netting her very first career goal. Isabella Flibotte picked up an assist on a long feed to Jaffe.

In the second half, the teams took the goalies out of the net to beat the heat, and switched to shooting nets – with cutout tar-

Historic season for baseball team in the books

Four Skippers named to all-star team during tourney bound 2008

"I'm extremely pleased with the season. We really had a strong commitment from everyone on the team."
–Cohasset baseball coach Al Gallotta

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

A year combined with great pitching and fantastic hitting led the way for the local nine to make history. The Cohasset varsity baseball team became the first team to win the South Shore League title in 49 years, and one of only three teams in the last 36 years to make the tournament for Cohasset.

Eight returning seniors, three of whom made up the team's pitching staff, led the 2008 Skippers. Cohasset High head coach Al Gallotta spoke highly of his seven seniors saying that the, "senior leadership was excellent."

Brian Hill, Dave Snowdale, and Sam DeGiacomo were Cohasset's three main starters, and sometimes relief pitchers. Hill led all pitchers with 58 and 2/3 innings, 6 wins, 68 strikeouts, and compiled a 2.51 earned run average as the ace of the team. Snowdale led the team in ERA, by pitchers with over twenty innings thrown, with a 2.27 ERA. Both he and DeGiacomo had three wins on the season.

The pitching staff also got some much needed help from sophomore Brendan Doonan when Cohasset had stretches of multiple games in a row. Doonan allowed only nine hits in 16 innings pitched and had a superb 2.19 ERA. As a whole, Cohasset had an amazing team ERA of only 2.97, one of the best in the league.

The remaining five seniors on the team were key components to the team's overall performance.

Kyle Pinkus played all but one game and was the team's starting catcher. He did most of his damage on the base paths where he tallied 11 total steals. Kenny Muir played every game at first base for Cohasset and went on to score 14 runs on the season. Left fielder Alex Goetz led the team with two home runs and four triples, and also missed only one game the whole season.

Seniors Chris Rose, at shortstop, and Pat Doonan, at second base, were not only a fantastic middle infield duo, but also were the top two senior hitters on the team.

Rose Hit .333 while racking up 13 runs batted in. He also drew a team leading 14 walks on the year and was third on the team in hits with 22. Pat Doonan led the team in at bats with 74 and was second on the team in almost every offensive category. He had 27 hits, batted .365, had 14 RBI's, stole 16

Weymouth Club to hold wooden racket round-robin

To be held in conjunction with opening weekend of Wimbledon

Fans of the "Good Old days of tennis" will have a chance to turn back the pages on June 27th when the Weymouth Club hosts a Wooden Racquet Round-Robin Tournament.

Not only must participants use wooden racquets but they are encouraged to wear the traditional whites. That means white shirts, white shorts, white socks, and white sneakers. Players may wear their regular tennis attire, but those who wear the traditional whites will receive a $5.00 coupon that can be used toward the next round robin in which they compete.

Players will be divided by tiers based on their skill level from a 2.5 to a 4.5 rating. The competition will begin at 7:00 p.m. and conclude at 9:00 p.m. During this two-hour period, there will be 20-minute matches as each player is virtually guaranteed four matches.

Then, at 9:00 p.m., there will be a fish and chips dinner for all players. During the dinner, players will be able to watch on TV, the highlights of that day's play at Wimbledon.

The competition is open to both Weymouth Club members and non-members, and the cost is $30.00 per person. For those interested, please contact Jennifer Brams at the Weymouth Club (781-682-5859). Deadline for sign-up is June 25th.

If interested, and you don't have a wooden racquet, the Weymouth Club does have a limited supply of the vintage racquets.

bases, and scored 21 runs, and also had a home run.

Despite these already great offensive numbers by these seniors, the most valuable player of the team may just have been sophomore Brendan Doonan, who just happens to take after his older brother Pat. Brendan led the team in five major offensive categories.

He drove in 19 runs, compiled 31 hits, hit and an amazing .470, stole 17 bases, scored 22 runs, hit three triples and one round tripper. Brendan appears to be the future of the team over the next two years.

Cohasset's offense is truly what fueled this Skipper ship.

Seven total batters had at least 10 runs batted in, and four batters hit over the .300 average mark. Also, seven different batters hit home runs for the team. Although the team's pitching was great, this potent Skipper line-up really steered the way.

Although Cohasset's season ended a bit earlier than hoped after losing its first game in the state tournament, Gallotta was proud of the boys.

"I'm extremely pleased with the season," he said. "We really had a strong commitment from everyone on the team."

He also wanted to give special thanks due to the great success the team had and the league championship.

"I just want to give credit to anyone over the years who worked with these players," Gallotta said. "All the way back to little league for instilling the love of the game into these kids."

On a special note, this 16-5 Cohasset team had four Skippers named to the South Shore League All-Star team: Senior Pat Doonan, senior Kyle Pinkus, senior Brian Hill, and sophomore Brendan Doonan.

gets – which seemed to favor the home team, as it recognized the benefits of shooting low and aiming under the target rather than trying to squeeze theball through the holes. Despite dominating play, Cohasset had a tough time scoring. Jaffe added two more goals, but Norwell went on a run to take a 9-8 lead before Kristen Alexander – frustrated all day by the heat, the goaltending and the target net – broke free and tied the game with under a minute remaining. The goal allowed the game to end in a tie, which was important to the Cohasset coaches; in their last year at the helm of the youth teams, Chuck Jaffe and Jennifer Palmer had never lost to a team from Norwell, and were happy to escape with a lifetime record of 19-0-1 against Norwell teams.

At the 13-U level (grades 5 and 6), the White team enjoyed its sweltering day on the Braintree turf, against a home team that never gave up despite field conditions that reportedly recorded the field temperature at 120 degrees. The girls broke out quickly from the first draw, with Mackenzie Axelson assisting Maddie Curley's first of four goals on the day playing at both attack and middie. Soon others got into the act with Isabelle Dunne having her biggest outing of the season with four goals and several key clears from the defensive end.

The Braintree girls never backed down and stayed within two goals throughout the first half. With slightly less than a full compliment of players, the attack and defensive sides essentially played the entire game with substitutions limited to the midfield positions. On defense, Maggie Littlejohn made several important clears and Cassandra Lieberman and Caroline Prescott worked coverage and ground balls very tenaciously.

Goalie Taylor Frederick earned her stripes just for putting on the pads and risking heat stroke, and made six saves and several excellent clearing passes while playing the entire game in net. At attack, Alison Bodner had several nice passes and Allie O'Callaghan had her first shot of the season, nearly sneaking it past the Braintree goalie.

There was spirited play from Charlotte Allard, who shelled the goal with four shots and one goal in addition to keeping the pace of play very high the entire game. Erin Driscoll scored one goal on her two shots. In addition to bearing the brunt of the draw duties, Mackenzie Axelson was a reliable defensive player and with her stick skills even served us in attack for a period of time. Also in the midfield Katie McCabe, Lilly McCarthy, Isabelle McCarthy, Caroline and Valerie Farren, Hanna Cooper and Meredith Corry all ran their hearts out, scooped and fought for ground balls and helped make the last regular season game the best one of the season.

The 13-U Blue team played late in the day in Norwell, which was not much relief from the heat, but neither the weather nor Norwell could stop the Cohasset girls from picking up their seventh consecutive win. Cohasset jumped out to an early lead, as Molly Fitzgerald ripped two quick ones into the cage and Lexa Grasz scored her first of the day to make it 3-1. Several of the Blue players had already played multiple games at a tournament earlier in the day, and the fatigue started to show, as Norwell tied the game at three just before halftime.

The game went back and forth for the first fifteen minutes of the second half until Cohasset took control and scored the last four goals of the game to make the final 9-6. During that scoring burst, Grasz scored three more times, with great passes from Emily Robbins and Eliza Murphy making two of those goals possible. Kathryn Dunn picked up two scores in the second half, one coming on a great feed from Grasz. Annie McElgunn rounded out the scoring with a single marker and Shannon McGowan was her usual dominating force on defense.

The Blue team finished the regular season with a 7-1 record and takes its winning streak into the first ever Girls South Shore Lax Jam on Saturday, June 14th.

In 11-and-Under action (grades 3 and 4), the White team got to enjoy the blistering heat on the turf at Braintree, where they faced a team with a formidable goalie, good speed and solid ground-ball skills. The home team led Cohasset by one throughout the half and moved ahead with a 5 – 2 lead by the end of the third quarter; the teams played quarters, instead of the regular halves, to get some respite from the weather. However, in the fourth quarter, the White girls, more comfortable with the heat and playing surface, were determined to turn things around, and scored three times in the last two minutes of play to escape with a 5-5 tie.

Midfielder Alexandra Leahy, had her best game of the season. Leahy won five face-offs in the first half (8 total in the game); turning one of them into a quick goal after a rapid passing series with fellow middie, Corey Golden, who scored. The duo had several other nice series and two shots on goal which were thwarted by Braintree's goalie. Cohasset's second goal was scored after Kara Nelson had a nice ground ball pick, passed smoothly to Emma Humphrey, who passed to Olivia Gomez behind the net who, although frustrated three times by a wall of Braintree players, forcing whistles, finally connected with the back of the net on a swift, low shot. As the girls got used to the turf, ground balls began to go more in their favor as they were scooped up by Nonie Thomas, Kaitlan McGovern, Humphrey and Leahy. Gomez had a nice interception shortly after her goal and Madeline Littlejohn and Julia Richardson led the charge on defense. Goalie Katie McKeon made several key saves to keep the score close at the half.

Leahy started the late rally for Cohasset with a rush to the net after passes from Madelyn Schwandt, another interception by an alert Gomez and an extended scuffle in which Vivien Littlejohn came up with a key ground ball which she swiftly sent to Leahy who beat the goalie with a bouncing shot to make the score 5-3. Quickly thereafter, Humphrey scored on a high shot just inside the post and cut the deficit to 5-4 with under a minute to play in the contest. Ginny Alex and Leahy recorded assists on the play. With time against them, White won the draw again and promptly set up in the Braintree zone for one last chance. Leahy found McGovern who raced to the net, shooting a laser right past the goalie to tie the game as time expired. Thomas deserves kudos for volunteer goaltending in the second half. She had to withstand the heat even if there wasn't much action on her end of the field.

LIFE AT CHS

LAUREN MACK

Mrs. Berman has definitely a presence at the school that will be missed.

As the messenger of all things good and exciting at CHS, I'm extremely delighted to say that at long last, it's finally summer vacation! Sports are all finished, as are all finals and report cards are due out in the near future. There wasn't a whole lot of news this week, seeing as it was a very short one.

Monday and Tuesday were full of finals, celebration, and movies as students returned their books and got ready to close out the year. And Wednesday the 18th was an early dismissal due to it being the last day of the year.

For my last teacher quote of the '07-'08 school year, it is my pleasure to place the spotlight on a CHS favorite who will unfortunately be retiring after this year. Known by her journalism expertise and exceptionally thick Boston accent, Mrs. Berman has definitely a presence at the school that will be missed. When asked what advice she could give to any upcoming students in the future years, she replied "They gottah have alottah chutzpah…yah know, CHUTZPAH. Itz'a Yiddish word, in the dictionary it probably says bold, but I think it means GUTS. Except yah don't wanna have too much chutzpah, cause then that'za little pushy." Mrs Berman will be genuinely missed.

In other news, this will be my last article until September rolls around again. So until September, everyone have a safe and fun summer! And remember, as Mrs. Berman would say, "Don't drink and drive or get in cahz with people who do!" See you in the fall!

Giving Extra Credit to Cohasset teachers

Looking for the perfect gift to thank a teacher or school secretary? Cohasset Education Foundation offers a solution with a tax-deductible donation to the CEF's Teacher Appreciation Program, in which parents can send any Cohasset teacher, administrator or school staff member Extra Credit.

Each recipient of an Extra Credit gift will receive a card acknowledging that a donation has been made in his or her honor, along with a personalized message. The amount of the gift is not disclosed.

With each Extra Credit donation, CEF will mail an acknowledgement card to the teacher or other recipient in the Cohasset schools. Cards are available with a suggested minimum donation of $15 each, $50 for five cards; larger donations are always appreciated. All proceeds of the Extra Credit program go toward funding professional development in Cohasset schools. CEF accepts donations for the Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit throughout the school year.

Donations may be made in honor of relatives, friends, coaches, grandparents and any other special people or as a memorial remembrance. Checks should be made payable to: Cohasset Education Foundation and mailed to: Cohasset Education Foundation, P.O Box 309, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, contact sarah.murphy@comcast.net or visit the Web site at cohassete-ducation.org.

Cohasset tennis benefit for Children's Hospital

Save the date for Cohasset's longest-running tennis tradition, which swings into action again this summer to benefit Children's Hospital Boston beginning Friday, July 18th through Sunday, July 20th. The popular weekend tennis tournament dates back to the 1950's, when Cohasset's legendary philanthropist Jesse Cox gathered family and friends for a charitable game of tennis to benefit some of the neediest children and their families at Children's Hospital.

This year all proceeds will help fund the Pediatric Trauma Program, with 100 percent of the proceeds paying for transportation, lodging and personal care packages for families of trauma patients.

This summer's benefit kicks off with an evening reception on Friday, July 18th at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor.

For reception, tennis and registration information, or to learn about sponsorship opportunities, lob on to www.cohassettennisbene-fit.org.

Best & Brightest take home awards

12 winners chosen by community leaders

By Beth Doyle
BDOYLE@CNC.COM

NORWELL –Community Newspaper Company honored 12 local students as The Best & The Brightest in an award ceremony last week.

The Best & The Brightest is a recognition program designed to spotlight outstanding young adults in communities covered by CNC's local newspapers. Readers were invited to nominate individuals between the ages of 16 and 21 who deserved to be honored, whether for academic achievement, volunteerism, athletic prowess, artistic acumen or the pursuit of excellence in another field. The program was sponsored this year by Derby Street Shoppes.

The 12 winners, chosen by a selection committee of community leaders, were featured in a special section that was published the last week of May.

The winners are: Ryan Brenner, of Hanover; Matthew Carleton, of Scituate; Evan Deutsch, of Cohasset; Samuel Goldman, of Weymouth; Alicia Gratta, of Kingston; Lauren Maloney, of Plymouth; Anthony Melchionda, of Braintree; Prashanth Rau, of Hingham; Kristin Schreiber, of Pembroke; Todd Selby, of Norwell; Jillian Smith, of Duxbury; and Erin White, of Marshfield.

Boston media personality Scott Wahle was the keynote speaker at the ceremony, held at the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

"Growing up isn't easy," Wahle told the students in his address. "It's tough to be a teenager – so much change, happening so fast. And young adults today are looking at a world that has become very complicated and stressful. But the people we honor this evening have navigated those waters successfully to this point, and have made a mark they can be proud of.

"You may never know how the example you are setting by your achievements will ripple out to touch others, but they will. It's like the rock you throw in the pond, and the water just ripples on and on without end. I'm sure you've all heard this before, maybe as recently as your high school commencement exercises: you – individually and collectively – can make a difference. And it's true! But I'll take that one step further: You HAVE to make a difference!"

Wahle encouraged the students to embrace new experiences and not to be afraid of failure.

"I can only encourage you to continue down the paths you have set for yourselves, be it service, or volunteerism, or research or adventure, or whatever it is that brings you here today," he said.

The students received gifts from CNC and Derby Street Shoppes and a citation of recognition from the Massachusetts Senate.

Discovering another Britain

Francis Ma
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

It hit me on the shuttle bus from the airport in Manchester: This wasn't the England I knew. Absent were the red double-decker buses, Big Ben and the robotic female voice on the Tube (subway) telling me to "mind the gap."

Instead, I was seeing trees -- endless miles of trees.

I was learning England is more than just bustling London. This felt like Vermont, but with an English accent -- we were driving on the left on roads with strange names like "M62." And in a week of touring, I would discover there is much of interest in the north, in the smaller, historic cities of Chester, Durham and York.

Chester is a mere 30 minutes from Manchester Airport. The first things a city tour guide pointed out were the medieval walls that surround it and that Chester was originally built by the Romans.

In fact, Roman history is scattered all around, including Britain's largest Roman amphitheatre on the edge of town. The other big attraction is Chester's famous 13th-century "Rows," a seemingly never-ending line of connected black and white buildings. Today they house the main shopping district.

I was told that one particular fast-food chain, called Spud-u-Like, has an ancient Roman bathhouse in the back. That is the charm of Chester, blurring the lines between the historical with the commercial to a point where it is one seamless experience to the next.

Located high above Eastgate Street, the elaborately decorated Eastgate Clock towers over the whole scene. It was built in 1897 to celebrate Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee. Today it celebrates the fact that it's the second-most photographed clock in England.

That's one of the many odd facts Chester locals volunteer. Ask for more and you are likely to get a story about the city's rivalry with nearby Wales: Residents are quick to cite a city bylaw that allows them to shoot a Welsh person with a crossbow if they are seen within the city walls after sunset.

"And you see that clock tower?" said a man on the street pointing to the Victorian Town Hall. "It's only got three sides. The side facing Wales is blank because Chester won't give the Welsh the time of day!"

This was just like small-town American rivalries. And that thought stayed with me during the three-hour ride north to Durham, a quaint, hilly city close to the border with Scotland, where the massive Durham Cathedral is visible wherever you walk.

I found no Scot-bashing here, but I did hear plenty about local hero St. Cuthbert of Lindisfarne, while exploring the cathedral.

Still a house of worship, the cathedral dates to 1093, and is home to a shrine to the 7th century Anglo-Saxon monk and bishop, whose remains also lie here. There are stories of St. Cuthbert as a miracle worker to the sick, giving him the nickname "Wonder Worker of Britain." It was made clear he is still adored by locals.

There was one subject my tour guide was rather mum about: the cathedral's appearance in the first two Harry Potter movies -- where it doubled as a classroom at Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry (only the cloisters area that appeared briefly in the films is visible on the tour).

Only about an hour south of Durham is the bigger historic walled city of York, home to York Minster, the largest Gothic cathedral in northern Europe.

Walk up to the top of the Central Tower and you can see all of York, the narrow streets, the surrounding wall, and the countryside off in the distance.

For more views, I strolled along the path on the city wall, from the Minster to the opposite end of the city, bringing me to the Micklegate

Bar Museum (the word "bar" in York means "gateway into a city").

The museum is at the gate where kings and queens of the past first entered the city, and also where the heads of traitors were put on pikes and displayed on the roof, left for crows to pick at. Yuck. Needless to say, there's a certain haunting feeling there, but the museum staff is quick to make you laugh with comments like, "Take care on the stairs. We have enough ghosts here."

Another York attraction, touristy yet intriguing, is the Jorvik Viking Centre, a museum dedicated to the city's Viking past -- Jorvik was York's original name. There's a mechanical ride that takes you through an imagined Viking settlement (showing the everyday life of its inhabitants), and there's a computer in the main gallery that can determine if you have any Viking blood -- I disappointingly don't.

After finding out this fact, I wandered over to the Shambles, known as one of Europe's best-preserved medieval streets, now bustling with shoppers and bookshops.

I made my way over to the Ye Old Pub, a couple of blocks away from the Minster, and sat to have a pint, reflecting on my whirlwind week as I listened to a local band covering the Rolling Stones. I don't have any British blood either, but I still somehow felt right at home.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 16, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your creative side is enhanced by indulging yourself in as much artistic inspiration (music, art, dance, etc.) as you can fit into your schedule. Take someone special with you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take a little restorative time out of your busy life. Go somewhere quiet this weekend. Or just close the door, turn on the answering machine and pretend you're away.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your advice might be much in demand by family and friends this week. But reserve time for yourself to investigate a project that could have some unexpected potential.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Work-related issues demand your attention in the early part of the week. Family matters dominate Thursday and Friday. But the weekend is yours to spend as you please.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your temper in check as you deal with someone who seems to enjoy showing disrespect. Losing your Le onine cool might be just what the goader hopes to see.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A heated confrontation needs some cool-off time before it boils over. Better to step away than to try to win an argument where emotions overrule the facts.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone very special in your life finally sends that reassuring message you've been hoping for. You can now devote more time to the tasks you had put aside.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Job pressures begin to ease by the week's end, leaving you time to relax and restore your energy levels before you face next week's emerging challenges.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual strength helps calm a friend who might be facing an unsettling change in his or her life. An offer to help comes from a surprising source.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) By midweek you could learn some surprising facts about an associate that might cause you to reconsider a long-held view about someone in your past.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) One of those rare-for-you darker moods sets in in the early part of the week. But by Thursday, the clouds lift and you're back doing nice things for people in need.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use that sharp Piscean perceptiveness to reel in more information about a promising offer so that you have the facts to back up whatever decision you make.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you prefer the status quo, you easily can adapt to change when it's called for.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Girl of many talents

Wrentham teen, American Idol contestant puts basketball career on hold for 'Joseph' performance

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Making it to the semi-finals of Fox-TVs "American Idol" two years ago was a life-changing experience for singer and athlete Ayla Brown. The Wrentham teenager interrupted a burgeoning NCAA basketball career to appear on the Fox reality show, however, so being sent home before the talent competition's final round wasn't as bad as it might sound.

"I really wanted to keep going and be in the top 12. At the same time, I knew if I made it to the finals it would mean I would have to postpone my first year in the basketball program at Boston College," explained Brown during a recent rehearsal break from Reagle Players' production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," which opens next week in Waltham. "Even after I was eliminated, I was almost 'redshirted' and made to sit out the season because the coach wasn't sure I was ready to play. We had no height on the team that year, though, so she put me in as a forward. 'Idol' was an amazing experience and it has given me many, many wonderful opportunities. Right now in my life, however, I just want to play basketball."

Ayla Brown, of Wrentham, will perform in Waltham's Reagle Player's presentation of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" at Waltham's Reagle Players.

At 6 feet, Brown may not be the tallest of the Boston College Lady Eagles, but she just may be one of the more experienced team members. Brown dribbled her first basketball down the court when she was in fifth grade and went on to complete her high school career as one of the top female basketball players in Massachusetts history, scoring 2,358 career points to make her the sixth place all-time leading scorer in Massachusetts basketball history, male or female. She is also a two-time Gatorade Player of the Year as the top female basketball player in Massachusetts. The daughter of State Senator Scott P. Brown (R-Wrentham) and WCVB-TV reporter Gail Huff, Brown finished her senior year in high school as captain of the girls' basketball team at Dedham's Noble and Greenough School — missing her last few games to compete on the fifth season of "Idol."

Scouted by Boston College, beginning when she was just 15 years old, Brown now attends the college on a full athletic scholarship. Just finishing her sophomore year, she plays the guard position.

Brown is taking some time this summer to once again pursue her performing career by playing the narrator in the Andrew Lloyd Webber musical for Reagle Players.

"This is my first musical theater project. Bob Eagle, Reagle's founder and artistic director, directed my mother in a Waltham High School production of 'Mame' many years ago and she still talks about that experience all the time. When he made the connection with my mom and me, from seeing me on 'Idol,' he got in touch and asked me to do something with them. I had wanted to do my high school production of 'Chicago,' but basketball got in the way, so when this professional opportunity came along I couldn't say no."

For her musical theater debut, Brown has chosen to tackle a large role in one of Lloyd Webber's earliest shows which sets the biblical tale of Joseph and his coat of many colors to music. The show was first produced on Broadway in 1982 and revived 11 years later with soap star Michael Damian ("The Young and the Restless") in the title role. In recent years, touring productions of the show, first starring Donny Osmond and later Patrick Cassidy, have played Boston. In Waltham, the role of Joseph will be played by Broadway veteran Eric Kunze, last seen at Boston's Wang Theatre this past season in the ill-fated national tour of Lloyd Webber's "Whistle Down the Wind."

Boston's own American Idol semi-finalist Ayla Brown (center) appears opposite Broadway's Eric Kunze (standing) in Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat at Waltham's Reagle Players. With them are some members of the 50 strong children's chorus. Opening the group's 40th anniversary season, the theatrical Andrew Lloyd Webber Biblical romp plays June 12 to 21.

"My character, the narrator, is the bible studies teacher about to tell the story of Joseph to a group of young children," says Brown. "I knew it would be hard to learn a script, but this show is sung-through which makes it a little bit easier. I'm in 16 songs in the show, which has been a lot to learn, but it gets easier every day that we rehearse it. I've come to really love the show. It is so weird, but I can't stop thinking about the songs. I even hear them in my head when I'm asleep."

That shouldn't be too much of a problem for the young performer who may not be getting much sleep while she is doing "Joseph" and also continuing with rigorous daily workouts to get her ready for the upcoming basketball season. Brown's debut album, "Forward," on the Double Deal label, was recorded in August 2006, before Brown started her studies at Boston College, to ensure that she was in compliance with NCAA regulations. The completed CD was released in October of that year. Although her college basketball career precludes another recording project, the idea remains on Brown's mind.

"I'm restricted right now by NCAA rules about what I can do, but later I definitely want to sing. I'm almost 20 now and my music is definitely changing. My first CD was recorded when I was just 17. It was a very pop-oriented project with plenty of dance songs and a few ballads."

A communications major, Brown says she also is attracted to the work her mother does, but less to her father's chosen profession.

"I'm intrigued by television and television production, but with an emphasis on sports and entertainment reporting. I am not intrigued by politics in the slightest. My sister, Arianna, is completely the opposite. She is 17 and will debate anyone at any time. My dad calls her his Young Republican."

Ayla Brown will appear in "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" at the Robinson Theatre, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, June 12 to 21. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-891-5600 or visit www.reagleplayers.com

Novel idea about interfaith dating

Local author pens young adult book

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Growing up in New York City, Melissa Schorr was a typical rebellious teenager. Her Jewish parents told her to date nice Jewish boys so, of course, she did the exact opposite.

Little did she know two decades later her humorous and enlightening escapades with interfaith dating would be the building blocks to her first published novel.

"Goy Crazy," a young adult book, is the story of a fictionalized version of Schorr teenage self — 15-year-old Rachel Lowenstein — a she falls for and dates Luke Christiansen, the star of a Catholic high School basketball team.

"This is one girl's story. I never want to tell people what is the right thing to do," says Schorr, a Cohasset resident. "The larger story is about a universal issue of wanting to date someone your parents don't approve of."

In the end, she said individuals have to figure out what is right for them. The title "Goy Crazy" is a play on words for "boy crazy," a "goy" is a term used to describe anybody who's not Jewish.

Schorr, 36, comes from a

The idea for the book was born many years ago when Melissa Schorr was working at GQ magazine in New York and wrote an article called "The Joys of Goys," a non-fiction account of her experiences as a Jewish woman dating non-Jewish men.

Tri time Sunday

Second annual event is June 29

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

About 950 athletes will descend on Sandy Beach on Sunday morning, each one with drive, endurance and a goal to complete the race. While the athletes have been swimming, biking and running to prepare their minds and bodies, the town of Cohasset has been preparing for the event in a much different way.

With the second triathlon, Race Director Bill Burnett is out to prove his race is one of the premiere triathlon in the area and cement its place on the town and triathlon community's calendar. In just a year's time, the Triathlon has grown by leaps and bounds — and Burnett is quick to recognize the community effort it has taken to get to this point.

"It's all a tribute to Cohasset. It's been a true community effort," said Burnett. "Almost everything I've asked for I've received."

More than an athletic event, the Cohasset Triathlon is a fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). As the Mariner went to press, the Triathlon has raised $198,420 and is on track to raise well

Village design

Workshop slated for Monday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last summer, there was much debate on how to best tailor the town's zoning bylaws to create the opportunities for appropriate mixed-use development and re-development in th· village. A year later the project still is on-going as the Planning Board, with the help of its consultant, is developing design guidelines to complement the recent bylaw amendments.

Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development, the town planning consulting firm that helped draft the village zoning bylaw amendments, has been working on a draft of design guidelines for the village business district.

"The design guidelines intend to give applicants a clear understanding of the design objectives of new development or renovation of existing property," said Jennings. A workshop will be held to discuss the design guidelines on Monday, June 30 at 7p.m., at Town Hall.

The village business district roughly includes the former Carousel Antique building, Smith Place, Depot Court and Main Street down to the Red Lion Inn. It is home to roughly 50 businesses.

The vision that came along with the village bylaw amendments, which passed muster with voters at the 2007 Special Town Meeting, was to create a framework where a mixed-use (retail and residential), pedestrian friendly and economically stable business center. The Planning Board wanted to encour-

Local man hit by lightning

O'Day sustains minor injuries

By Brian P. Nanos
BNANOS@CNC.COM

Now that Scott O'Day has survived being stuck by lightning June 20, with long-term effects limited to sore muscles and a bruised face, he and his wife hope others will learn from what he called "my moment of enlightenment."

The Cohasset resident was struck by lightning while walking along the Scituate coastline with his wife Tucker and their two dogs.

"You see a lot of soccer games and other games where people stay out there when the weather's getting inclement," O'Day said. "I think there's a lot of, 'It won't happen to me.'"

Last Friday, O'Day's 49th birthday, he and his wife were walking near the Spit, a Scituate sandbar in the mouth of the North River, when they noticed that the rain was picking up and decided to head home. Friends would later tell O'Day that from Peggotty Beach they saw a single bolt of lightning strike near the shore.

The next thing O'Day remembers is waking up on the ground, his head in his wife's lap. He had been knocked out of his shoes and onto the rocks five or six feet away.

"I said, 'I can't feel my legs, I can't feel my legs,'" he recalled.

The storm that struck O'Day also hit husband and wife Ralph Potter and Kimmarie Roy of Methuen. Potter, 47, was killed.

With the help of some local boaters, who refused to give their names, rescuers from the Scituate harbormaster's

Traffic plan still in 'pilot' stage

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police Chief James Hussey is pleased with the way the new traffic plan following the Music Circus shows worked last weekend. However, he is hesitant to dub the plan "final" until it is tried following a sell-out performance.

"We were generally pleased and we are going to continue with it – but I am still calling it a 'pilot' plan," Hussey said. He explained that the shows over the past weekend were not at full capacity.

Police also learned that most of the traffic, all of which was directed westbound on Sohier Street toward Route 3A, headed north once it reached 3A.

Along Sohier Street, which was made one-way temporarily until the traffic cleared, police put up signs asking motorists to stay in the right lane if they intended to turn north (making a right) onto Route 3A and the left lane if they were turning south.

"Less than 20 percent made a left onto 3A," Hussey said, explaining that scenario makes it easier for emergency vehicles should the need arise.

In the event of an emergency, police can also hold traffic inside the parking lot to allow vehicles to pass.

"But it gives us more of a comfort level, knowing the left lane is used much less," he said.

Hussey expects to make a final determination on the traffic exit plan in the next few weeks.

The reason for the plan is to prevent cars exiting the Music Circus from turning right toward the railroad tracks. Commuter trains run about 10 minutes after the evening shows.

Car break-ins

Police are investigating a host of car break-ins reported over the past week along the 700 block of Jerusalem Road, Tad Lane and Howe Road. In all cases, the vehicles were left unlocked.

Chief Hussey urges residents to lock their cars but also take valuables such as iPods and GPS devices out of the vehicle or put them out of view or lock them in the trunk. In several of the cases, the cars were rifled through but nothing was taken.

In one case, a woman's brown leather bag was taken and later found in the area. The woman's checkbook and sunglasses were missing.

Courtesy booking

Cohasset police took a Cohasset resident into custody after she was allegedly hit an ex-boyfriend with a bottle in Marshfield last week. Cohasset police booked her on probable cause and then Marshfield police took her into custody. She was charged with assault and battery.

Speeder

A Mill Lane resident has complained to police about a motor vehicle that continues to speed down the street.

The resident was able to provide a plate number and police spoke with the motorist about slowing down. Chief Hussey said the motorist was warned that police could seek civil citations if the speeding continues.

No detail

A group of workers painting lines on the road was warned to hire a detail officer if the road is blocked again. Several callers complained to police that the crew had one side of Beechwood Street closed. Cashman, which is the MBTA contractor, said the crew was not working for them. An officer went to the scene while the crew was finishing up, Chief Hussey said.

Accident

On Saturday (June 21) at 8:45 a.m., police responded to a motor vehicle accident at West Corner.

The victim, who is a Hingham resident, told police her vehicle was hit from behind while she was waiting to turn left off Hull Street. The investigating officer saw damage to the rear of the vehicle on the driver's side. The woman was not injured. The motorist who hit her vehicle was described as being in his 50s and not being able to speak English. Apparently he got out of his older model red Ford Ranger but got back into the vehicle and left without providing any information. The victim and witnesses did not get the Ford's plate number. The man drove toward Hull and Cohasset police have contacted Hull police with a description of the motorist and the Ford Ranger.

Paintballs

Police spoke to some teens with paintball guns in the reservoir area after receiving a complaint last week. Police said the boys would have to stay on their own property or get permission to use the paintball guns on private property but they could not shoot them off on town property.

Stolen purse

An employee in a business on Route 3A called police to report that her wallet had been taken from an office. She had taken her wallet out of her pocketbook and put it back and an hour later noticed that her wallet was taken. The incident is under investigation. The victim suspects another employee might have taken her wallet.

Suspended license

A 24-year-old Cohasset man was arrested for operating after license revocation following a traffic stop at about 5:43 p.m. on Sohier Street. An officer was monitoring traffic near the Deer Hill School when he saw a man, who is known to police, drive by in a motor vehicle with New Hampshire plates. The officer knew that his license had been revoked for being an "immediate threat." He pulled the vehicle over, confirmed that the operator's license had been revoked, and placed him under arrest.

Solicitors

Another group of solicitors came to town Saturday and after being informed by police about the town bylaw requiring registration, left town, police said. Multiple callers along Beechwood Street complained to police.

Police arrest suspect in car theft

On June 20, detectives assigned to the Cohasset Police Criminal Investigation Division (CID), assisted by officers from the Patrol Division, executed a search warrant at 3 Grace Drive in furtherance of an investigation into the larceny of a motor vehicle from Grace Drive on May 29. During the search, evidence related to the on-going investigation was seized. Simultaneous with the execution of the search warrant, James N. Reichardt, age 17, of 3 Grace Drive was arrested near his residence and was subsequently charged with larceny of a motor vehicle, malicious damage to a motor vehicle and larceny under $250. Cohasset Police CID continues to investigate this case and expects to file additional charges against other subjects involved in this larceny in the near future.

The Cohasset Police Department is aggressively investigating the series of motor vehicle breaks and larcenies that have occurred in the north Cohasset area over the course of the last few weeks.

The Cohasset Police Department is aggressively investigating the series of motor vehicle breaks and larcenies that have occurred in the north Cohasset area over the course of the last few weeks. Residents are also requested to call the police department at any time if they observe any individuals behaving suspiciously in their neighborhood. Anyone with information concerning the motor vehicle breaks is asked to call Cohasset Police CID at (781) 383-1055 extension 1047.

"The Cohasset Police Department continues to investigate the rash of cars breaks during the past couple of weeks," Chief James Hussey said. "We are gathering information that will eventually lead to suspects being charged for these crimes. We encourage all residents to safeguard their property and lock their car doors."

Stormwater Committee in flux

THE PAST
-Established in Fall 2006 as a Selectmen-appointed advisory board.
-Worked to draft and gain public support for a Stormwater Management bylaw.
-The Stormwater Management bylaw passed at the 2008 Annual Town Meeting. The bylaw creates a framework of regulations and permitting process to control the town-wide issue of flooding and stormwater runoff for the future.
-The Conservation Commission is the stormwater permit granting authority.
-With the support of stormwater consultant and other committees, the Stormwater Committee was the leader in getting five stormwater project related grants for the town.

THE PRESENT
-Members of the Stormwater Committee feel they have accomplished their initial objectives given by the Selectmen and are looking for new direction and possibly a new member composition.
-Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would like to see the committee work on very specific, fact-finding efforts and not politicize the issue.
-Some of the charges discussed at Monday night's Selectmen's meeting were to lead public outreach and education as well as be a place where the public can come and air their stormwater issues.

THE FUTURE
-Several proposals were given to re-populate the committee.
-The Selectmen seemed to favor the approach of having five citizen volunteers as the core of the committee with liaisons from elected boards, like the Board of Health and Planning Board. Citizens with specific knowledge on the issue would be valuable.
-The Stormwater Committee would be completely advisory in nature and not be a decision-making body.
-Members of the Stormwater Committee will draft a new charge and return to the Selectmen for approval.

Treat's Pond gets personal

Dormitzer accused of disturbing plover habitat

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The controversial issue of Treat's Pond has gotten overtly personal.

At Monday night's Selectmen meeting, the public comment heated up when resident Jim Drysdale made some pointed accusations at Selectman Ralph Dormitzer.

Both Dormitzer and Drysdale have been prominent voices weighing in on the Treat's Pond issue, their opinions often falling on opposite ends of the spectrum.

Dormitzer, who lives on Sandy Cove where a drainage pipe from Treat's Pond outfalls, has recused himself from participating in the Selectmen's discussions on Treat's Pond, but has often spoke as a private citizen on the matter. He has supported the Army Corps proposed Treat's Pond salt marsh restoration project.

Drysdale, a member of the Stormwater Committee, has repeatedly said there is a cheaper and more effective solution to Treat's Pond and Atlantic Avenue flooding.

At the previous meeting of the Board of Selectmen held on June 9 there was extensive discussion on the town's deeded easement to Treat's Pond and its related drainage pipe.

During that meeting John Connolly, a Sandy Cove resident, stated he was concerned if the town utilized their easement it would disturb wildlife, including piping plovers, a threatened bird species.

Currently, a gate is placed on Connolly's property to prevent the town, or other cars, from accessing the beach over his property. Near the gate, the pathway to the beach is overgrown with vegetation.

Reading from a written copy, Drysdale said while he was on a tour of Sandy Cove, the drainage easement and Treat's Pond, where the Mariner and other town officials were present, he observed Dormitzer and Connolly driving a tractor on the beach where he believed the plovers nested.

"It is deplorable that individuals [Dormitzer and Connolly] who profess to be concerned with protecting wildlife should show such callous disregard for these delightful, but very vulnerable birds," said Drysdale. "It is particularly disturbing that a selectman should set such a poor example."

He requested the Board of Selectmen demand Dormitzer and Connolly desist immediately from driving the tractor over the beach until the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) can identify and fence off the plover nesting areas.

When asked by Selectman Karen Quigley if he had contacted the EPA concerning the matter Drysdale said he had not.

In addition, Drysdale requested the town enforce its existing easement rights to maintain the drainage pipe. "It's long past time to stop the silly games," said Drysdale.

Dormitzer chose not to respond to Drysdale's comments at the meeting.

"I will not comment on something so outrageous," said Dormitzer. With the exception of Quigley's question, none of the Selectmen responded.

When reached by phone on Tuesday, Dormitzer said he did not feel it was appropriate for him to get into an argument with Drysdale at a public meeting.

"I don't think the Board of Selectmen should allow personal attacks to be heard," said Dormitzer, adding the chairman should have stopped Drysdale from continuing his comment once it was clear the comment was personal in nature.

Dormitzer said Drysdale's comments were off base.

"The residents of Sandy Cove are in fact very good stewards of the beach," said Dormitzer. The tractor Drysdale referred to is used to routinely pick up debris, planks, seaweed and other objects washed ashore. "We do everything by hand. It's a remarkably natural and productive area."

Dormitzer said the nesting place for the piping plovers is located to the right of the town's easement if facing the ocean. Sandy Cove is one of the few places in Cohasset where piping plovers are nesting.

"We're successful…we get [piping plover] chicks every spring," said Dormitzer. "This was a personal attack, no more, no less."

As the exterior work is completed on the Depot Court building, the contractors are turning to major interior work and landscaping.

New owner, new shops for Depot Court building

September opening planned

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Residents have likely noticed the flurry of work being done on the building at the corner of Depot Court and Ripley Road. A new owner and new tenants are hoping to be ready for business by September 1.

Sean Cunning, a village business and property owner, has recently purchased the 22 Depot Court building with construction under way. Cunning operates Sullivan, Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agency out of the 21B South Main Street.

"The majority of the building is already leased up," said Cunning in a phone interview. Both new and familiar faces will find their home in the new building.

"Right now, it's really a shell," said Cunning. In finishing the building Cunning is using local contractors and making the building as environmental friendly as possible.

"Everything will be new and not drafty," said Cunning. Making the building as energy efficient as possible from the lighting to heat to insulation is one of his central concern. On a community level, Cunning hopes to provide more options for location shopping.

"With the price of fuel rising, I think more people are going to start shopping more locally," said Cunning.

The building, formerly owned by Richard Brown for more than 25 years, suffered a two-alarm fire in February 2007. The fire, water and smoke damage were too much and subsequently, the building was torn down and a new building rose from the ashes.

Pink Tulip, a new women's clothing store owned by a Scituate woman, will be leasing space on the first floor of the building. The Focus Gallery, currently housed at 115 Ripley Road, is moving over to the Depot Court building.

"This space is two times what they have now," said Cunning, adding the Focus Gallery owners plan to use the space to host parties.

Cunning's insurance business will occupy a first-floor space on the left hand side. The space is bigger and he is hiring more employees.

Upstairs Cohasset resident Kelly Lynch will open a yoga and pilates studio complete with facilities for hot yoga. On the third floor, there will an apartment and 600 square feet of office space.

His building will make two choices for women's clothing — Ports & Company and Pink Tulip.

In addition to offering more shopping choices in the village, the opening of the building will fill a hole currently in the village. Cunning hopes the building will connect the North Main Street portion of the village to the shops on Ripley Road and James Brook Crossing — one of the central goals of the village bylaw revisions passed at last year's Special Town Meeting.

Although Cunning owns the building, SG&D Insurance Agency currently occupies, this is his first foray into construction.

As the exterior work is completed on the building, the contractors are turning to major interior work and landscaping. The lot which currently looks a construction site, will have a lot of landscaping done before the building opens for business.

The building will be fully handicap accessible with an elevator and a fire sprinkler system. A horseshoe shaped lot will be in front of the building with parking and five additional parking spaces will be located to the right of the building.

Cunning is hoping to have a big grand opening in conjunction with "Cohasset Day" planned for Saturday, Sept. 20.

Sunlight power for Deer Hill School

Grant to purchase daylight pipes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

School's out and Cohasset students will spend the summer drinking in the sun (hopefully with sunblock) at the beach, ballpark and pool. When students return in the fall, at least one school building will be harnessing the power of the sun to light the learning environment.

In a slight change of plans, a $17,050 municipal sustainability grant will be used to install several "daylight pipes" at Deer Hill School. The daylight pipes were originally slated to be installed at the DPW garage, but Facilities Manager Brian Adams said more daylight pipes than the grant allowed would be needed for the town to see cost savings.

The Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) applied for the grant with the help of its professional consultants. The committee is focused on investigating and implementing alternative energy sources that can be used by throughout the municipality.

Daylight pipes are stainless steel tubes, with an acrylic dome cap placed in the roof to allow sunlight into the room below, much light a skylight but more energy efficient.

"The daylight pipes, or sunpipes, capture a lot of light and spread it out" more efficiently than a sky light, said Alternative Energy Committee consultant Judeth Van Hamm.

"On a cloudy day or at nighttime, these aren't going to do anything," said Adams, so there is still a need for traditional lights. But, if it is sunny, there will be enough light generated to leave the lights off hopefully leading to a cost saving on the school's electric bill.

The daylight pipes will be installed in the Deer Hill cafeteria near the small stage area. If Adams is happy with the daylight pipes, it could lead to the installation of more in school buildings. Another prime place for the daylight pipes is the currently dark high school cafeteria, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said.

Adams visited a bank in Newton who had installed the pipes to see firsthand what they looked like.

"I was impressed with how they looked," said Adams. His only concern was opening up the possibility for roof leaks, but he said that issue goes with any type of roof penetration. With proper installation and flashing, he said the potential problem would be minimized.

"I am so pleased it's going to happen in a school," said Van Hamm. The location will allow for more visibility of the technology than there might have been at the DPW garage.

Cohasset was one out of only six towns in the state to receive the grant, said Van Hamm. The grant will cover the purchase and installation of the daylight pipes.

The School Committee accepted the grant and supported the project in a unanimous vote.

A call for policy

Schools revamp cell phone guidelines for classroom

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Phones much be kept in a place where they are not visible and be turned off.

When students return to the Middle-High School in the fall, a new cell phone policy will be in place. As a sign of the pervasiveness of cell phones in our culture, the school handbook will allow cell phones into the classroom, but require them to be out of sight and turned off. As a trade-off for the privilege, the consequences for cell phone use has increased.

The issue of cell phones in the classroom is facing schools everywhere. As technology gets more advanced, schools have to worry about the use of internet access on the phone to cheat. But, in the same token, cell phones could be used a learning tool or as a means of communication in the event of an emergency.

High School Assistant Principal Mike Gill said the current policy instituted in September 2007 on cell phones requires student to store the phones in their lockers. However, Gill said in the day-to-day practice, the vast majority of kids carry their phone — turned off — in their backpacks.

The issue came up as the School Committee reviewed proposed school handbook amendments and additions at their meeting on Wednesday, June 18.

In discussions with the faculty, Gill said many teachers found the current policy of no cell phones difficult to enforce. He said the teachers would prefer to have the authority to allow cell phone use on an individual classroom basis. Phones much be kept in a place where they are not visible and be turned off.

"Many of the students use calculators and other functions of their cell phone in the classroom," said Gill.

If a student is caught using his/her cell phone during school hours or if the phone rings during class disciplinary action will be taken on the first time — the phone will be confiscated and turned in to the main office, a detention served and the phone will be returned. On the second offense, a detention and a parent must pick up the device. The third offense will be a office detention and a parent meeting with an administrator.

"We know that there is no reason at anytime for a phone in the classroom, but this new rule will reflect what is already going on," said Gill and give the teachers the flexibility to establish cell phone rules on a classroom basis.

For example, one of the problems Gill has seen with the cell phone is students asking to use the bathroom and instead "giving a scenic tour around the building while talking on the phone."

If a teacher or administrator sees this, the phone will be confiscated and considered to be cutting class.

In this day in age, having a cell phone can also give students and their parents some piece of mind.

"Ever since Columbine, parents really want their child to have a means of communication to the outside world," said Gill.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said there was a growing trend in education to include the use of everyday technology, like cell phones, into the classroom.

"It's part of our world and it's not going away. It's part of the global perspective," said Antolini. "It could be used as a learning tool."

Although some members of the School Committee didn't see the need to have the cell phones in the learning environment at all, they deferred to the school administrators and approved the changes proposed for the cell phone policy.

Clarification on Carillon story

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

Last week's article on the Cohasset Carillon "Cohasset Carillon in a class by itself" incorrect information was included indicating the carillon belonged to the town, not St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

According to historical record, the Cohasset Carillon was given to St Stephen's Church in 1923 by Mrs. Hugh ("Jane") Bancroft, in memory of her mother, Mrs. Clarence W. ("Jessie") Barron.

As recorded in the vestry minutes of St Stephen's dated Sunday, August 12, 1923: "The Rector stated that he had called the Vestry together to inform them of a very princely gift which Mrs. Bancroft had offered to make to the church in memory of her mother, Mrs. Barron, of a set of chimes, of English manufacture, consisting of thirty-one bells, together with whatever it would cost to install them in the tower…After discussion it was voted: That the church accept Mrs. Bancroft's very generous offer and gift, and that the Rector be requested to write a letter to Mrs. Bancroft appropriately expressing to her the deep appreciation of the Vestry."

Two years later, in honor of her mother's birthday, Mrs. Bancroft wrote to the church offering a gift of 16 more bells, which the Vestry voted to accept on January 11th, 1925. Four more bells were added between 1925 and 1928, bringing the total to 51 bells. By 1989, the carillon had a total of 57 bells.

"While St. Stephen's shares [Assistant Carillonneur] Mary Kennedy's belief that in spirit the carillon belongs to the whole town of Cohasset (and we're grateful for the town's support over the years) we do need to be clear for the historical record that technically, the Carillon is the property of St Stephen's Church," said Margot Critchfield, rector of St. Stephen's.

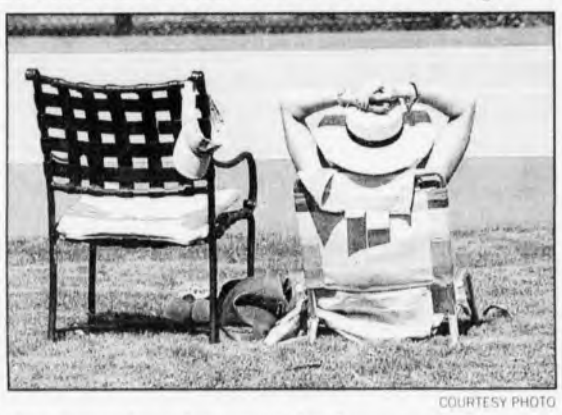
Guests enjoy socializing outside the Bellarmine House last week.

Bellarmine House tour a hit!

On Friday June 20th and Saturday, June 21st the Cohasset Historical Society had a most enjoyable fundraising event including a Silent Auction at Bellarmine House at Hominy Point in Cohasset. The house is now owned by the Jesuit Community at Boston College who purchased it in 1932 from Adelaide M. Brown, later Adelaide Brown Pratt. It is the second time that the Society has been invited to hold an event there, the last in 1990. This time by invitation of Fr. William C. Russell, S.J. of Boston College, a most gracious host.



One of the guests who attended was Ginny Gray whose parents Adelaide Brown and Louis Stoughton Bell were married there and where she was born.

The Cohasset Jazz Combo, comprised of Cohasset school students and graduates, provided entertainment.

Tennis anyone? Event benefits Children's Hospital

Limited spaces are available for the annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit, scheduled for July 18-20. The weekend includes a summer reception at the Lightkeeper's Friday, July 18, followed by mixed-doubles tennis Saturday and Sunday on private courts throughout Cohasset. Players of all levels and abilities are evenly matched.

Tournament proceeds this summer will help fund the Pediatric Trauma Program at Children's Hospital. In addition to unsurpassed urgent care, the Children's staff go to great lengths to accommodate the unimaginable needs of immediate family members of trauma patients. Yet often these people need a support system themselves. The funds will pay for transportation, lodging and other expenses for friends and extended family members, who go to Children's to help care for the parents and guardians of patients.

Cohasset author pens young adult book on interfaith dating background of non-fiction writing, having worked as a journalist in magazines and newspapers and until "Goy Crazy" she had never ventured into fiction writing. Having been a voracious reader of young adult literature as a teenager, writing and publishing the book was a dream come true for her.

"I think the voice really works for me," says Schorr.

Friends and former classmates often ask her "how do you remember all that stuff from high school?" But, Schorr asks them "how can you not?"

"I think high school experiences are imprinted in you," says Schorr. If she does needs help remembering the raw emotion of her teenage years, she turns to her primary source material — a collection of five diaries from those influential years. Some of Schorr's dating experiences are directly lifted from her teenage diaries and into the book.

"The bands and brands change, but the feelings and emotions don't," says Schorr, who relies on current teenagers to ensure her characters live in today's world.

The idea for the book was born many years ago when Schorr was working at GQ magazine in New York and wrote an article called "The Joys of Goys," a non-fiction account of her experiences as a Jewish woman dating non-Jewish men.

Following its publication, a literary agent contacted her about writing a non-fiction book drawing on her experiences. "It was going to be sort of a Jewish version of 'Sex in the City,' " she jokes. As luck would have it, the very same month she met a nice Jewish guy and fell in love. Since she was no longer dating, she felt she couldn't write the book. Later, that nice Jewish guy became her husband.

"I think high school experiences are imprinted in you."

— Melissa Schorr, author

"I joke with him now that he killed my first book," says Schorr with a laugh. Nearly 10 years later, her agent suggested she try the book again, except as fiction. Like a Cinderella story, she sold the idea for her book quickly and was given nine months to finish it.

Around the same time, she found out she was pregnant. Up against two looming deadlines, Schorr wrote the book as her stomach grew bigger and bigger. She was able to pass in the book on a Friday afternoon and then, two days later, her daughter, Alexa, was born.

"Goy Crazy" came out as a hardcover in 2006, then in paperback just this month.

With the novel, she hopes the book will help parents and kids communicate about interfaith dating. She says the book addresses the issue with humor and doesn't preach one way or the other.

"Things are changing, the world is getting a little bit more accepting [of interfaith dating," says Schorr. But, she can see why some in the Jewish community is worried about the children of interfaith marriages not having a Jewish identity.

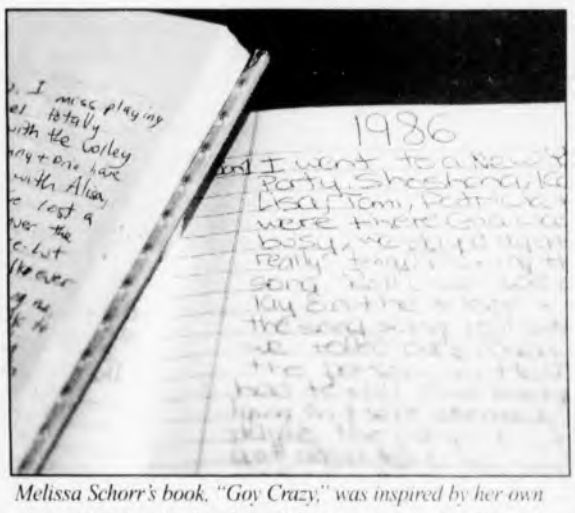
"It's a tough questions each person has to ask themselves," says Schorr.

With the wisdom that comes with age, Schorr now sees the point her parents and other family members were trying to impress upon her growing up. During a wedding ceremony and certain times of the year, a marriage of different faith traditions can make things a little more difficult, she says.

"There is a value in dating someone with a different background, it can really expand your world view," says Schorr. "Teens are smart these days, they know the person they are dating in high school is likely not going to be the person they will marry. The book lets teenagers know they are not the only one going through this struggle."

Melissa Schorr's first book, "Goy Crazy," was inspired by her own experience growing up in a Jewish family in New York. Goy is Hebrew/Yiddish slang for someone who is non Jewish.

Currently, Schorr is working on a second young adult novel during her daughter's nap times.



"Goy Crazy" is available at Storybook Cove in Hanover, Barnes &Nobles at Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham and Amazon.com. To find out more about "Goy Crazy" visit, www.goycrazy.com.

Melissa Schorr, 36, comes from a background of non-fiction writing, having worked as a journalist in magazines and newspapers and until "Goy Crazy" she had never ventured into fiction writing.

Melissa Schorr's book, "Goy Crazy," was inspired by her own diaries that date back to her adolescent years in the 80's and her own experience of wanting to date non Jewish boys despite her parents' wishes.

Town is ready for second annual triathlon over $200,000 for the cause. Donations will be accepted for 30 days after the race.

The number alone is indicative of how big the Triathlon has become — the donation is over four times more than what the event raised last year (just over $50,000). The Cohasset Triathlon is one of the largest JDRF third-party events in New England.

Before 2008 even began the Cohasset Triathlon reached its participant capacity and despite being able to get over 100 athletes off the waiting list, there are still more people who want to race, said Burnett.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is making efforts to ensure the village looks its best and athletes feel welcomed to town.

The success of the inaugural triathlon was tempered by the death of one of its participants, Joe Lyons of Newton, who suffered a fatal heart attack during the swim portion of the race. In tribute to him Team Lyons — 52 family members, friends and co-workers of Joe's, including his wife, Karen Lyons — will finish the race in his honor. Together Team Lyons has raised over $58,000 for JDRF. Joe and Karen's son, Sam, will start the first wave of the Triathlon.

Town agencies like the police, fire and harbormaster departments have traded thousands of e-mails with race organizers in an effort to make the race as safe as possible for the athletes and spectators and be as considerate as possible to the greater community. Scores of residents have lent particular skills and time to the Triathlon.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is making efforts to ensure the village looks its best and athletes feel welcomed to town. A sign is up on the former Cohasset Hardware building welcoming triathletes and the Chamber will have a table with information about Cohasset at racer registration on Saturday. Planters were filled with flowers donated by the Village Greenery.

"Over 950 racers and their families are going to be in Cohasset and they might want to take advantage of the restaurants, shops and charm in Cohasset," said Darilynn Evans, owner of Darilynn's and secretary for the chamber. "We wanted to partner with the Triathlon and get people to take advantage of what Cohasset has to offer."

The Sandy Beach Association is delighted to be host to the event once again.

"We look at it as a community affair, so, as a community beach, it was a natural for us," said Robin Lawrence, president of the Sandy Beach Association, adding after 12 noon the beach will be available for regular beach goers.

Burnett said over 125 people have volunteered to help in making the race a smooth one.

"Last year because no one knew what the triathlon was all about we were clawing for people to help at the last minute," said Burnett. This year, he and his team are finding new jobs for volunteers to do.

"What gives me great satisfaction is people want to be a part of this event. That's something I never imagined. People are proud to be a part of the triathlon and that just blows me away," says Burnett.

The event has gone outside town borders and attracted big name national sponsors like Dunkin' Donuts and Nike. Athletes are coming from 15 states and three different countries, but many are from right here in Cohasset. Wide receiver for the Arizona Cardinals Sean Morey, who is a Marshfield native, will be participating in the event.

Race Director Bill Burnett is counting on his team of Cohasset residents to pull off a successful triathlon Sunday morning. In the bottom row (left to right), Donald St. Sauveur, entertainment coordinator; Matt Herndon, parking coordinator; Des Havlicek, Parking Coordinator; Bill Burnett, Race Director; Steve Upson, transition coordinator; and Joe Mahoney, logistics coordinator. In the top row, Suzy Doherty, JDRF liaison; Kari O'Donnell, volunteer coordinator; Sigrid Burnett, registration coordinator; Kate Simmons, run coordinator; and Deb Thomas, swim coordinator.

Thirty-five ranked elite triathletes, including Jarrod Shoemaker, a member of the 2008 USA Olympic Team, will fall into the ranks with local athletes.

"We really have the cream of the crop as far as triathletes," says Burnett, adding with a smile the inclusion of Team Psycho, a group of elite athletes, gives the Cohasset Triathlon 'street credit' with the triathlon community across the country.

"I am excited to race the Cohasset Triathlon. I enjoy racing local races and meeting local athletes. Bill [Burnett] puts on a great race and it should be a fun day for all racers," says Shoemaker, a Sudbury native.

Safety is foremost

From almost the minute the Triathlon finished (or maybe even before) Burnett has been tweaking the race logistics in his mind. With the help of police and fire officials as well as members of the community, a revised safety plan has been put together for the second annual Cohasset Triathlon.

"We reviewed the safety plan after last year's event and tried to improve upon it and bring in additional resources we thought were necessary," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

Silvia has coordinated with Plymouth County and the state to have additional assets on the beach and in the parking lot. Plymouth County rescue swimmer/divers will be on hand in two boats, over and above the boats the Harbormaster is providing. The Massachusetts Emergency Mobile Emergency Operations Center will be in the parking lot to help coordinate all the equipment and personnel the town has on the course. South Shore Hospital is providing resources an ambulance.

While the Fire Department is focused on providing the medical support needed for the race, the Police Department play a major role in keeping the roads safe for racers, spectators and the general public.

"We wanted to create a safe environment for the bike and run while maintaining a safe pathway for cars to get about town," said Police Chief James Hussey. A total of 25 detail officers will be on hand to handle the traffic and answer driver concerns.

"The town agencies really worked together to put on a pretty awesome event," said Hussey. "Cohasset's name is attached to this race and it will bring over a thousand athletes and spectators to town. Once people discover Cohasset, it has the potential to bring people back to town...it's an opportunity to start a great tradition in Cohasset."

Although the breadth of the Triathlon makes for a significant amount of planning and stress on town resources, Silvia said the planned event is an exercise in action for an unplanned disaster event.

"Coordinating with state and county agencies benefits the department. It's nice to have a planned event to get familiar with the resources out there," said Silvia.

Although Burnett said the town has been more than supportive of the event, he has a final request to make of the community come Sunday morning.

"I want everyone in Cohasset to enjoy the race and cheer the athletes on — that would mean the most," says Burnett, who envisions families gathering in lawn chairs lining the racecourse. Last year, he heard from some racers that the roar of the crowd was on par with the Boston Marathon.

"I think the community spirit around this race is what really makes it."

A good bylaw

When daylight saving time and long summer evenings return so do the door-to-door solicitors.

Ranking at the top of most people's "pet peeves" right along with unsolicited telephone sales calls has got to be strangers coming to your door selling something.

Two years ago, Cohasset voters approved a new bylaw modeled after one in the town of Duxbury requiring solicitors to register with the Cohasset Police Department.

Under the bylaw, solicitors are required to register with the police where they apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Violators of any provision of the bylaw could be subject to loss of solicitation license and fines.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Police have said once they issue licenses that will have a photo ID, residents should have a better sense of security that the solicitors have been checked out.

The bylaw that went into effect in July 2006 has definitely had an effect but perhaps not the one that was anticipated.

The bylaw appears to have had a chilling effect on door-to-door solicitation in town. Rather than go through the registration process, the salespeople are avoiding Cohasset completely.

Solicitation complaints are way down. In years past, the only thing that rivaled the number of complaints about door-to-door solicitors in the weekly police log was the number of bridge jumpers in the harbor.

In fact, a recent complaint to police involved a group selling magazines that had mistakenly crossed the border from Hull into Cohasset. They did not register and were sent on their way.

Tune in

Those of you who might be "pack rats" out there might pull out a Cohasset Mariner from years ago and see that we looked quite different. For example, we were a "tab" not a broadsheet and there were no color photographs.

We have changed over the years to reflect improvements in the newspaper industry in terms of layout, design and print capabilities.

Today we are also "on line." Our "on line" presence is evolving. We want our print readers (people who get the paper) and our web readers (people who read on line) to be one and the same. In other words, we want our audience to have a different experience with the paper and on line, so they will read the paper and visit our web site.

The really great part of the Internet is that we can get "breaking news" to you right away and follow up with more complete coverage in the paper.

We are also putting slide shows, photo galleries and videos "on line."

We are hoping to take videos of local people to enhance our newspaper coverage.

Please tune in starting Monday to www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset for our first local video. You can watch Chief James Hussey explain why police are trying to deter kids and young adults from jumping off the Border Street bridge.

We are open to suggestions for more video ideas. We want the paper and our on-line web site to be a true reflection of Cohasset.

We are open to feedback and suggestions. Contact: Mary Ford by email at mford@cnc.com

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Selectman Quigley faulted for Treat's Pond 'bias'

TO THE EDITOR:

On June 13, 2008 Selectman Karen Quigley, in company with a private citizen subgroup and a reporter form the Mariner, entered onto our property, acknowledging she ignored No Trespassing signs to hold an unannounced meeting on private property. Ms. Quigley has allied herself with this subgroup to advance her long-standing, publicly articulated personal agenda to extend the Treat's Pond drainage pipe onto Sandy Cove. This subgroup has rejected the recommendations of the Army Corps of Engineers and Coughlin Engineering which have proposed other solutions based on sound, unbiased environmental and engineering standards.

Ms. Quigley certainly has a right as a citizen to express her views, but it is inappropriate now as a Selectman that she continue her alliance with the subgroup. Moreover, while professing to advocate openness and transparency at Selectmen's meetings she has met privately as a Selectman with this special interest group to advance her views. She has clearly exercised extremely poor and biased judgment in partaking in the private meeting on June 13, 2008 and, in particular in bringing along a Cohasset Mariner reporter to promote her views. It is very clear that Ms. Quigley is using her influence inappropriately to advance her longstanding position on the matter.

On June 10, 2008 at a Selectmen's meeting, Atty. Lou Ross, representing Town Counsel, reviewed the various deeds and easements associated with the Bigelow property and its subdivisions. He rightly concluded that neither the deeds, nor the easements granted access rights for the town to Sandy Cove for any purpose and he recommended that the town work with the property owners for access to the pipe to facilitate drainage. Incidentally, Sandy Cove is accessible via Lothrop Lane, while a private lane it is also noted to be a Right of Way on town maps and has been used by town trucks for the past 30 years to access Sandy Cove to dig out the drainage pipe as required with heavy rainfall. I believe Ms. Quigley's inappropriate actions are in direct contradiction to Town Counsel's recommendations to work with property owners and clearly indicates the extent for which she will go to advance her personal agenda. I ask that Selectman Quigley cease abusing her position on the Board of Selectmen and recuse herself from any further discussions and votes on the Sandy Cove and Treat's Pond issue.

Fantastic season for Cohasset Lacrosse

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters, I want to thank everyone in our community who helped make our third annual South Shore Lax Jam another tremendous success and showcase for Cohasset Youth Lacrosse. On June 14 and June 15, we hosted one of the largest girls and boys youth lacrosse events ever seen on the South Shore on Milliken and Alumni fields. Two days of nonstop action featured over 60 teams from a dozen different towns and over 1,200 players and their families. We had equipment vendors from the top companies in the sport, skills contests and raffles, summer camp sponsors, local merchants, and of course, some of the best youth lacrosse in the area to wrap up our spring season.

As you know, a two-day event like this takes a lot of planning and a lot of community support to have it run as well as it did. This year we would especially like to thank the following groups for their continued support of our efforts: Shaw's Supermarkets, Del's Lemonade, SportsStop, Kinneally Meats, Millennium Printing, Good Sport and Atlantic Bagel whose generous donations made it all possible. We would like to thank Cohasset Youth Baseball, Cohasset Youth Soccer, Cohasset Middle High School, the DPW and the Cohasset Police whose support and cooperation in coordinating the event were greatly appreciated.

We also wish to recognize all of our parent and high school volunteers from the "grill masters" to the "apparel sales group" to the "clean-up crew" that took time out of their Father's Day weekend to make sure that the kids had as much fun on the fields as off. Special thanks are owed to Maria and Curt Mills, Kirk Bukowski, and Joe Fitzgerald for their outstanding planning efforts and tireless work during the jamboree. Lastly, we want to thank all of our youth coaches (and their spouses) for the countless hours that they put in throughout the season to provide the kids with a positive team and athletic experience week in and week out.

It has been another fantastic season for Cohasset Lacrosse and we wish everyone a great summer and look forward to seeing those lacrosse sticks out on the beach and all of you back out on the fields next year. Thank you!

William R. Grimm, President
Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters

Arts Festival is a community effort

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of South Shore Art Center, we'd like to thank the entire community of Cohasset for its support of the 53rd annual Arts Festival. We could not pull off such an undertaking without truly extraordinary support from the town and its residents: special thanks to Bob Egan, Jennifer Oram, Bill Griffin, Carl Sestito, Sgt. Quigley and everyone at the Town Hall, DPW and Police and Fire departments who help to make our jobs easier.

Shining thanks to our Gold Sponsors: Image Resolutions and BMW Gallery; Silver Sponsors: Adrian Morris Salon, Renewal by Andersen; and Bronze Sponsors: Boston Private Bank & Trust Company, Tanglewood, South Shore Music Circus, Dean & Hamilton Realtors, Roomscapes & Kitchen Concepts, and Owens Corning Basement Finishing Systems.

Additional thanks to Atlantica, Atlantic Bagel, Bia, Bose Corporation, Building #19 Foundation, Lois and Bruce Cameron, Pat Cammett, L.P. Carpenter Interiors Inc., Cohasset Collision Center, Heidi Condon, Conway Insurance Agency, Derby Street Shoppes, Bill Earon, Flemings, Hingham Dentistry, Goodwin Graphics, Graham Waste Services, Hingham Institution for Savings, Hingham Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Judy and Rob Kasameyer, Martignetti Liquors, Pilgrim Bank, Plymouth County Convention & Visitors Bureau, Linda and Glenn Pratt, RBC Wealth Management, Shaw Glass Company, Smith Print Inc. and Tina Watson.

We are grateful for the support of the local cultural councils of Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Rockland and Scituate. The cultural councils are all local agencies supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

Finally, thank you to the many volunteers and amazing youth crew who kept things running smoothly throughout the weekend. The pride everyone shares in this special event is remarkable and allows us to enjoy every minute of Festival weekend. Save the dates for 2009 – June 19 through 21.

Route 3A project begins in earnest

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Work on Route 3A – As we mentioned last week the construction has started for the Greenbush widening project on Route 3A. The jersey barriers are up on the side of Route 3A from Rose Hill to the Brass Kettle Building. At present, the work consists of ripping up the old pavement edge behind the barriers to prepare a base for constructing a wider road with turning lanes.

This widening project will extend approximately from Rose Hill to Hingham Lumber. Almost all of the construction will take place on the "west" side of 3A. So the question is: What does this mean to you? First of all, as you can see now, the traffic is constricted in the 3A roadway to two narrow lanes, one in each direction. But an important consideration will be that each of the driveways and roads from the Brass Kettle Building to the Hingham Lumber building will be under construction at some point. We are in communication with the CBB superintendent for this part of the work and they will let us know how they plan to deal with each of these roads and driveways. When the plans are developed, we will be in touch with the building and business owners and bring them up to date as construction progresses.

The largest impacts will be at Crocker Lane, which serves several high traffic installations on Crocker Lane, including the medical office building, the State Highway garage and the Graham Waste garage facility. Another high traffic area is the Hingham Lumber facility. Again, when the plans and time tables are known better we will be in contact with these businesses.

Little Harbor Project- Whitehead Road — Last week a meeting was held for the Whitehead Residents at the Water Facility offices to discuss the reconstruction of their roadway. Prior to construction Whitehead Road was a narrow road varying from a little over eight feet in width to a maximum of just over 14 feet wide. The meeting was very well attended and the residents shared their thoughts about the reconstruction. The safety offices of the Town were aptly represented by Fire Chief, Bob Silvia, since his equipment has the most demanding requirements for roadway access.

It was generally agreed at the meeting that the roadway would end up being 12 feet wide, since that was the minimum width that the Fire Chief felt comfortable with for reasonable access, especially in the winter with snow piles to contend with. The DPW had also reviewed the roadway from one end to the other and felt that this width would enable them to plow the road in the winter

At the meeting another topic came up that was actually unrelated to the Little Harbor Project; gas leaks along Whitehead Road. There was very spirited discussion in that the residents felt that the gas company was unresponsive in fixing the leaks. (Actually, the gas company does have a database of known leaks in Town and ranks them in order of severity. Their repair schedule is based on this overall list. However, when the whole line has leaks, they generally only repair the leaks as required rather than replace the whole line.)

Fire Chief Silvia said he had some contact at the gas company that had been quite responsive and would exercise those contacts to see if perhaps, from an overall standpoint, would they consider line replacement while the road is under construction and before paving is done. This really makes a lot of sense if it could happen. Well, this week we got the news. The gas company will do some pipe replacement. We don't have any idea of schedule or project details to share with you, yet. The downside is that it will be a while longer before we will be able to pave the road. Of course, the upside is that the gas leak situation will be considerably better.

Route 3A work is under way on the right side of Route 3A from Rose Hill to the Brass Kettle office building.

Other Little Harbor Project info – Pressure testing of both the water and sewer lines is still in progress. All of the new water lines have successfully passed their pressure tests. The new water lines are presently being flushed and chlorinated. After this, the new lines are ready for service and can be cut over to individual homes.

The sewer pressure testing is ongoing. As of this past Wednesday afternoon, all of Deep Run, except for a small portion of sewer line in front of 6 Deep Run has passed the pressure test. Sewer lines in Rust Way and Jerusalem Road from Rust Way to Deep Run have also passed the pressure test.

A grader is due this Thursday to grade Deep Run ion preparation for paving.

We were driving to Holbrook, my friend and I, to catch the late lunch or early bird dinner at Smith's Restaurant when my friend spotted something that sent shivers and tingles up her shapely spine.

It was gas at $3.99 a gallon.

I won't mention the name of the station to avoid causing a traffic jam on Franklin Street and, besides, this was last Friday so by the time you read this the price may be nudging $5 a gallon for all I know.

Whatever, of course, we stopped to "top off the tank," a phrase I hadn't heard since the good old days of the '70s when Jimmy Carter was getting yelled at for the long lines that formed to fill'r up at 75 cents a gallon.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, I could pretty near fill the tank of the old '37 Ford for $3.99, a difficult task sometimes when you're making 50 cents for a morning or $1 for a full day of picking beans on Old Man Arnold's Farm.

The price of gas made little difference after Pearl Harbor since just to get as little as 3 gallons also required little bits of paper marked A, B, C or T. Of course, upgrading your A ration book to a T required a little cash outlay, too.

I can recall skipping school and driving to New York with Gordon Stovall and Holly Black and being stopped by the cops in Providence. Our main concern was hiding our T stamps so we wouldn't have to explain what three high school kids were doing with a ration book restricted to truckers.

But I digress . . .

Now that gas has topped the $4 a gallon mark, what do we do about it?

For one thing, we can apologize to the caribou and the polar bears and open the Alaskan National Wildlife Refuge to drilling for oil. The problem with that is that gas from ANWR won't reach the pumps for 10 years and the motor car may have joined the horse and wagon in the museum by then.

For another thing, we can drill off the coast of Florida and California, but that would spoil the view for the tourists who go there for the scenery, little realizing that unless a few oil rigs are added, they may not be able to get there in the first place.

We could turn to corn-based ethanol, which, when mixed with gas, forms a biofuel that's cheaper. But every farm acre devoted to ethanol takes an acre out of food production, so you will be told that every time you drive to Humarock you deprive a Third World kid of his breakfast.

And then there's the Jatropha bean ... huh?

I'm not sure what the Arabs and their cohorts in OPEC are getting for a barrel of oil right now but the last time I looked it was around $130 a barrel, which is enough to keep the sheik's whole harem in breakfasts.

In 1901, according to the People's Almanac, "a major oil discovery in Beaumont, Texas, pushed oil prices down to about 5 cents a barrel."

No kidding!

HEALTH NOTES

Thunderstorms can be dangerous

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This spring the Nation has been exposed to unusually harsh weather and it looks like we're in for an unusual summer weather-wise. Recently, we've seen some particularly violent thunderstorms and despite their small size, in comparison to hurricanes and blizzards, all thunderstorms are potentially dangerous.

According to Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) Director Don Boyce, "Every thunderstorm produces lightning and has the potential to produce associated dangers such as tornadoes, destructive winds, hail and flash flooding. Lightning strikes throughout Massachusetts have proven deadly, reinforcing the fact that the threat of a thunderstorm must be taken seriously."

Of the estimated 100,000 thunderstorms each year in the U.S., about 10 percent are classified as severe, meaning they produce hail, at leas3/4 ins. in diameter, have winds of 58mph or higher, or produce a tornado.

Before the Thunderstorm

Know the terms used by weather forecasters:

Severe Thunderstorm Watch — Tells where and when severe thunderstorms are likely to occur. Watch the sky and stay tuned to the Media.

Severe Thunderstorm Warning – Issued when severe weather has been reported by spotters or indicated on radar. Warnings indicate imminent danger to life and property to those in the path of the storm.

Before a thunderstorm strikes, keep an eye on the sky. Look for darkening skies, flashes of light or increasing wind. If you can hear thunder, you are close enough to the storm to be affected by lightning and should go inside to safe shelter immediately. Thunderstorms can occur singly, in clusters or in lines. The typical thunderstorm is 15 miles in diameter, producing heavy rain for a brief period from 30 to 60 minutes. When a thunderstorm approaches, secure outdoor objects that could be blown away or cause damage. Shutter windows, if possible, and secure outside doors. Remember that lightning can strike up to 10 miles ahead of or after the arrival of the storm. In general, lightning will travel the easiest route from the clouds to the ground, which means it often strikes the tallest object.

Listen to weather forecasts on NOAA Weather Radio or to local radio and television stations for the latest information. The Weather Channel Desktop is a free downloadable application one can find on the web. It provides substantially the same hourly weather information the news media provide, but in a more timely manner..

During this season people are taking part in activities that place them in locations most vulnerable to being struck by lightning, such as on golf courses, ball fields, beaches and large bodies of water. In the U.S., an average of 300 people are injured and 80 killed each year by lightning, which is more than tornadoes or hurricanes.

During the Thunderstorm

If you are caught outside during a thunderstorm, you should protect yourself from lightning by going to a low-lying, open place away from trees, poles or metal objects, which can serve as a natural lightning rod. (Make sure the place you pick is not subject to flooding).

Make yourself the smallest target possible by squatting low to the ground and by placing your hands on your knees with your head between them. Be as low to the ground as possible, with as little of your body touching the ground as possible. (Don't lie flat; this will make you a larger target!).

• Do not stand on a hilltop, in an open field, on a beach or in a boat on the water.

• If boating or swimming, get to land immediately.

• Avoid isolated sheds or small structures in open areas.

• Get away from anything metal such as tractors, farm equipment, motorcycles, golf carts, golf clubs, bicycles, wire fences, clotheslines, metal pipes, rails and other metallic paths that could carry lightning to you from a distance.

• In a forest, seek shelter in a low area under a growth of smaller trees.

• If indoors, avoid metallic objects and fixtures.

• Avoid showering or bathing. Plumbing and bathroom fixtures can conduct electricity.

• Avoid using a corded telephone, except for emergencies. Cordless or cellular telephones are safe to use.

• Unplug appliances and other electrical items such as computers. Turn off air conditioners. Power surges from lightning can cause serious damage.

• Use your battery operated NOAA Weather Radio for updates from local officials.

Note that rubber-soled shoes and rubber tires provide NO protection from lightning. However, the steel frame of a hard-topped vehicle provides increased protection, if you are not touching metal. Although you may be injured if lightning strikes you car, you are much safer inside a vehicle than outside.

Library stretches resources

Keeping up with technology a challenge

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is a hub of activity all year long — and each year it gets busier. While the library lends out more materials annually, the library is operating with a lower percentage of the town's operating budget. In 1988, the library budget was 2.2 percent of the operation budget, last year it was 1.5 percent.

Library Director Jackie Rafferty and Library Trustee Stacey Weaver met with the Selectmen to give an overview of their department. The presentation is part of an on-going effort to have the Selectmen meet with each department head over the next two months to report on the trends, major challenges, grant opportunities and generally give a "big picture" perspective of their department.

"A significant point is we are doing a lot more with the same staffing levels as the old library. It's not a complaint, it's a fact," said Rafferty. The library moved out of their former home on South Main Street into the former Osgood School in 2003.

The town library operating budget is supplemented by grants, fundraising by the Friends of the Library and other library advocates, "they all chip in to keep up with the demand of our department," said Rafferty.

Like other town service budgets, keeping up with the cost of doing business is a constant challenge.

Many residents rely on the library services for computer and internet access and keeping up with the constant technological advancements is a struggle.

"The more [computers] we get, the more people use them," said Weaver. The number one use for the library computers is to access the internet.

Like other town service budgets, keeping up with the cost of doing business is a constant challenge.

The staff also relies heavily on computers to communicate with area libraries and share materials. In the fall, Town Meeting allocated $15,000 for the purchase of 11 staff computers. Without the new computers, the library would have been unable to handle an upgrade to the Old Colony Library Network.

Weaver said the library is looking and implementing ways to extend services and save the town money. Over the past four years, they have received over $65,000 in grant money and returned over $60,000 from fees and fines to the town's general fund in the last four years.

The library changed its schedule to operate more days without adding additional hours.

As far as the book and materials, Rafferty said Cohasset has a heavily used collection. In fact, they lend out more books to other communities than they borrow for their own residents.

"Obviously, our collection is at the core of what we do," said Rafferty, but the book and material budget has decreased over the years. Despite being in a much bigger building, the library staff has had to begin weeding their collection to make room for new books.

"We've grown into the new library," said Weaver.

Selectman Karen Quigley said she was most impressed with the efforts the library makes to work with the schools and the outreach program to the homebound.

Rafferty said the volunteer coordinator for the outreach program, Marjorie Murphy, has taken a typical outreach program to great heights. She runs book discussion groups with the elderly in the community as well as home visits.

"She is a lifeline [for the homebound], it has changed lives," said Rafferty.

Rafferty said they hope to expand the library's connection with the schools by creating a "homework center" staffed by high school honor students in the fall.

"You continually do a lot with what you have," said Quigley.

South Shore Playhouse Associates donates $100K to Cohasset Library Trust

At a special awards ceremony recently at Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset, South Shore Playhouse Associates and South Shore Music Circus, represented by Bruce T. Cameron, president of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, and Vincent G. Longo, chief operating officer and executive producer for the South Shore Music Circus and Cape Cod Melody Tent, presented a check for $100,000 to Cohasset Library Trust. The grant money will benefit the library's endowment as well as fund a new Music Circus lecture at the library, which will feature a nationally recognized speaker.

"The South Shore Playhouse Associates is delighted to award this grant to the Cohasset Library Trust. We are proud to be able to support arts and education in Southeastern Massachusetts, as we have done for nearly 60 years," said Cameron. "Especially in these tough economic times, it is incumbent upon organizations such as the SSPA to provide financial support to organizations in need."

Jane Goedecke, president of the Cohasset Library Trust, accepted the award on behalf of the Library Trust. "We are extremely grateful for this very generous gift from the South Shore Playhouse Associates and the South Shore Music Circus. It will provide the Library Trust with a larger endowment to improve and expand the library's services and horizons."

Cohasset Library Trust was established in 2006 in response to declining tax support for the library. Its mission is to increase and prudently manage the library's endowment.

"As one of Cohasset's longstanding businesses, the South Shore Music Circus is thrilled to help support our neighbor, the Cohasset Library, " said Longo. "Our mission is to support the arts and education, and what better way to inspire interest in the arts and encourage education than to support the library by a gift to the Library Trust."

South Shore Playhouse Associates, a nonprofit organization, owns and operates South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis. A portion of both theater's ticket sales are reinvested into the communities served by the theatres, through grants and donations to other nonprofit groups to promote cultural activities, arts and education. The SSPA has donated more than $2.5 million over the past 10 years.

Cohasset Library Trust was established in 2006 in response to declining tax support for the library. Its mission is to increase and prudently manage the library's endowment. The Music Circus grant represents the beginning of this fundraising effort. The trust's board members include Linda Litchfield, Bernadette Faulkner, Brian Murphy, Chris Oddleifson, Debbie Shadd, Patience Towle, Sarah Pease, Sheila Evans, Rod Hobson, Sally Morton, Bob Riley, John Flanagan, Jim McKenna and Jack Reardon.

An Endowment Donor Wall in the library's entrance honors those who have, over more than 100 years, made significant gifts to the library. These gifts, made through bequests in a donor's will or through gifts to memorialize and honor individuals, have funded the library's endowment. SSPA's gift to the Cohasset Library Trust will be added to the Donor Wall.

Hingham boat ridership down 14 percent

From the State House News Service

Eleven MBTA commuter boats are now equipped with free wireless service, a new option that Lt. Gov. Tim Murray says will enable those riding to and from the city to "make the most of their commute." About 4,500 individuals commute daily to Boston from Hingham, Hull and Quincy, with ridership on the rise on two of those three lines.

According to an MBTA press release, overall MBTA ridership is up 6.2 percent this year and ridership to Boston is up 9 percent from Hull and 3 percent from Quincy. Ridership trends on one of the most heavily used water routes – Hingham to Boston – were not mentioned in the release, but in an interview, MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas said ridership was down 14 percent this year. Grabauskas said South Shore commuters are "experimenting" with the new Greenbush line commuter rail option.

"The promise of having seats available, whether it's the boat or train, from the South Shore to Boston, that's being realized, which is great."
— MBTA General Manager Daniel Grabauskas

"There's period where people are adjusting to and changing patterns. It's not a bad thing," Grabauskas said. "The promise of having seats available, whether it's the boat or train, from the South Shore to Boston, that's being realized, which is great."

Greenbush ridership has grown from the "hundreds" to nearly 2,000 riders daily, Grabauskas said. High gas prices are prompting more individuals to consider public transportation and both Grabauskas and Murray said wi-fi access facilitates productivity and represents an enticement that those who drive to work should consider. The commuter boats also feature other enticements like snacks and beverages, including beer and wine, Grabauskas noted.

Both Murray and Grabauskas said they hoped to eventually see wi-fi across the system, but neither warmed to the idea of adding refreshments, including beer and wine, on commuter rail cars. "I've never heard it being discussed for commuter trains," Grabauskas said. Murray said the focus is on wi-fi first. "As a state that's known for innovation and high tech, connectivity is increasingly important. It adds to productivity. That's what we're working towards."

Road closings for Cohasset Triathlon

The following temporary road closures are part of the overall traffic safety plan for the Cohasset Triathlon at Sandy Beach on Sunday morning, June 29. These closures are necessary to provide safety for race participants and spectators as well as providing an orderly flow of vehicle traffic around the race route. Although residents impacted by these closures will be allowed access to and from their properties when necessary, everyone is encouraged to plan ahead and avoid using vehicles in the race area. Check the times and locations of closures to see how they may impact travel plans the morning of Sunday, June 29.

During road closures, the best route to take to go to Scituate would be Route 3A. Access 3A by way of Route 228, Hull Street; Forest Avenue/Lower King Street, where there will be a police officer present to assist at 3A; Sohier Street and Pond Street. This is best because Border Street will close temporarily outbound toward Scituate, and both North and South Main streets will only be open for one way traffic from the Scituate line to the Hingham line during race time.

Those attending church services during race time should allow a little extra time. If traveling to St. Stephen's Church or Second Congregational Church from the north side of town, access to the common will be from Depot Court. Access to Depot Court is Ripley Road by way of Jerusalem Road/North Main Street or 3A/Sohier Street. Ripley Road can also be accessed from Pleasant Street. Those traveling from the south side of town will be able to use North and South Main streets. Those traveling to St. Anthony Church can take Summer Street from the harbor, Spring Street from Pond Street/Cushing Road, or South Main Street from the Scituate line.

Contact Cohasset Police Department at trafficquestions@cohassetpolice.com for any assistance with travel plans.

No parking zones:

- Cohasset Village: South Main Street, between Brook Street and Elm Street, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.
- Cohasset Common: North Main Street, between Depot Court and Highland Avenue, even numbered side of the road, from 7 to 10 a.m.

Museums open for the summer

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Board of Directors of the Cohasset Historical Society, I wish to thank Stuart Ivimey, Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, and its members as well as the residents of the town of Cohasset for continuing to support projects that restore, protect and preserve Cohasset's historic buildings and artifacts.

To date with CPC funding the Society has been able to restore our two museums, the Captain John Wilson House and the Bates' Ship Chandlery (Maritime Museum), both of which are centrally located on Elm Street in the Village. These facilities are now open for the summer, Tuesday through Friday from 1 until 4:30 p.m., Saturdays from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. or by appointment. The Pratt Building at 106 South Main St., our headquarters, is open Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Here we have changing exhibits and house our extensive archives of Cohasset history.

We are proud of our buildings and exhibits and invite you to visit.

These buildings belong to everyone. We are only the stewards.

Healing Field flags may be picked up

Thomas Wigmore of the Sons of the American Legion announces that those who purchased flags for the 2008 Healing Field on display last month as part of Cohasset's Memorial Day observances may pick them up from 8 to 11 a.m., Saturday (July 12) behind the Paul Pratt Library. Please pull into the parking lot off Sohier Street.

This was the second year, the "Healing Field," was installed at the intersection of Border Street and Summer Street across from Veterans Memorial Park. The striking visual of over 400 waving American flags was meant to honor all servicemen and women who have served, continue to serve and those who have paid the ultimate price to keep America free.

Local man hit by lightning

office and emergency responders, O'Day was rushed first by boat to Mary's Landing, and then by ambulance to South Shore Hospital, where it was determined his heart and brain had not been seriously damaged.

By Monday, O'Day had regained feeling in his legs and was home from the hospital. At that point, he said, the worst injuries were strained muscles and bruises from being thrown into the rocks. Since he said every muscle in his body contracted when he was struck, every muscle was sore.

"I'll be forever grateful for (the actions of) those boaters and my wife," O'Day said.

O'Day is keeping an eye out for unusual side effects; reading material he was given at the hospital told him to watch for a change in personality. Aside from that, he said he was doing well.

"I'm better, every day is better," he said Monday. "I'm not as achy today as I was yesterday."

As it has become clearer to O'Day that he may not experience long-term effects from being struck, he and his wife have even started to joke about the event.

"She calls me Sparky," he said.

The O'Days are counting their blessings and focusing on warning others to stay out of storms.

"We're trying to pull something positive out of a bad scenario," he said. "(My wife) hopes that people will learn from this. We both do."

In the meantime, he said, he'll continue to keep an eye out for any long-term side effects.

"I don't think I'm going to develop 100 extra points on my I.Q," he said.

Be safe during storms

In the wake of recent storms, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency released a list of lightning safety guidelines.

"Every thunderstorm produces lightning and has the potential to produce associated dangers such as tornadoes, destructive winds, hail and flash flooding," MEMA director Don Boyce wrote in the release. "As we have witnessed, lightning strikes throughout Massachusetts have proved deadly, reinforcing the fact that the threat of a thunderstorm must be taken seriously."

During the spring and summer, major seasons for storms, many people take part in activities that place them in vulnerable locations — golf courses, ball fields, beaches and large bodies of water, according to MEMA.

The agency suggested residents practice to the following precautions.

Before the thunderstorm:

- Know terms known by weather forecasters. "Severe Thunderstorm Watch" indicates where the thunderstorms are likely to occur. "Severe Thunderstorm Warning" is used when the storm has already been reported or spotted.
- Look for darkening skies, flashes of light or increasing wind.
- If you can hear thunder, you are within the range of lightning.
- The typical thunderstorm is 15 miles in diameter and produces heavy rain for 30 to 60 minutes.
- When the storm approaches, secure outdoor objects that could be blown away or cause damage. Shutter windows, if possible, and secure outside doors.
- Remember that lightning can strike up to 10 miles ahead of or after the storm.

During the thunderstorm:

- If you are caught outside, protect yourself by going to a low-lying, open place away from trees, metal objects or poles.
- Make yourself a small target. Squat low to the ground and place your hands on your knees with your head between them. Don't lie flat on the ground.
- Do not stand in an open field, on a hilltop, on a beach, in a boat. Do not stay in water.
- Avoid small structures in open areas.
- Get away from anything metal
- In a forest, go to a low area under a growth of smaller trees.
- Indoors, avoid metal objects.
- Avoid showering or bathing
- Unplug appliances and electrical items.
- Note that rubber-soled shoes and rubber tires provide no protection from lightning. If lightning strikes your car, however, you are safer inside it than outside.

Village design guidelines ready for workshop age growth and development in a good way by keeping the charm of the village while maximizing its potential.

Unlike the zoning bylaws, which can only be amended by a vote at Town Meeting, the design guidelines are adopted and changed by the Planning Board. The design guidelines are referred within the village zoning bylaw amendments, but are not described in detail.

The to-be-approved design guidelines will work together with the zoning bylaws and Jennings said will give a clear picture to potential applicants what is expected out of a project. A set of guiding principles, much like vision statements, guide the much more specific requirements on structure and landscaping. The guidelines cover items such as rooflines, building materials, textures and colors, sidewalks, lighting, parking, screening and signage, to name a few.

"They are pretty specific in nature so during the permitting process, the Planning Board can say it either meets or doesn't meet the guideline," says Jennings. "I think the town will end up with a higher quality plan than what they might have had without the guidelines."

"The design guidelines intend to give applicants a clear understanding of the design objectives of new development or renovation of existing property."

— Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development

The village inherently posed a challenge in drafting the design guidelines because one end of the village is drastically different than the other. As a result, the design guidelines will address different areas of the village to ensure new development and redevelopment adheres to the broader vision for the business district.

"We carved out specific planning areas within the village," said Jennings. For example, lots fronting on South Main Street and parking way are asked to ensure the building has good visibility on both sides.

"We really want that location to activate the town parking lot and create a main street façade," said Jennings. "That same principle is not going to apply to Depot Court or Smith Place."

Part of the reason the design guidelines are separated out of the zoning bylaws was because of their length, "they would have added a lot of text to the bylaws," said Jennings, adding it is typical for zoning to be accompanied by regulations like the design guidelines because it gives the ruling board a little more flexibility.

With zoning, there is a high legal threshold to both change the bylaw or for an applicant to get a variance.

"The design guidelines are very detailed and by their nature are very subjective," said Jennings. "We don't want to impede creativity by being too prescriptive, [with the design guidelines] we want to give enough latitude for to allow for creativity in development."

Draft copies of the design guidelines will be available at the meeting.

If you plan on attending the June 30 workshop, please contact Jo-Ann Pilczak in the Planning Board office, 781-383-3517.

Softball team hit mark in second half

Young Skippers will return a strong core next season

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

It was a tale of two seasons for the Cohasset High softball team during 2008. After starting the year with a tough-luck 1-10 record, the Skippers managed to win five of their last nine games to finish with a 6-14 record.

That second half performance should be a precursor for success next season. Cohasset is young and only lost one senior to graduation, Anna Haggerty, although her presence will be missed greatly.

Haggerty batted .387, slugged .500 and had a .472 on base percentage. She came through with some of the biggest hits of the season and played excellent at third base.

First-year Cohasset head coach Rob Spofford was grateful for what Haggerty brought on and off the softball field.

"She will be sorely missed," Spofford said. "You can't replace senior leadership. She brought a maturity level, an effort and an understanding of the game, everyday."

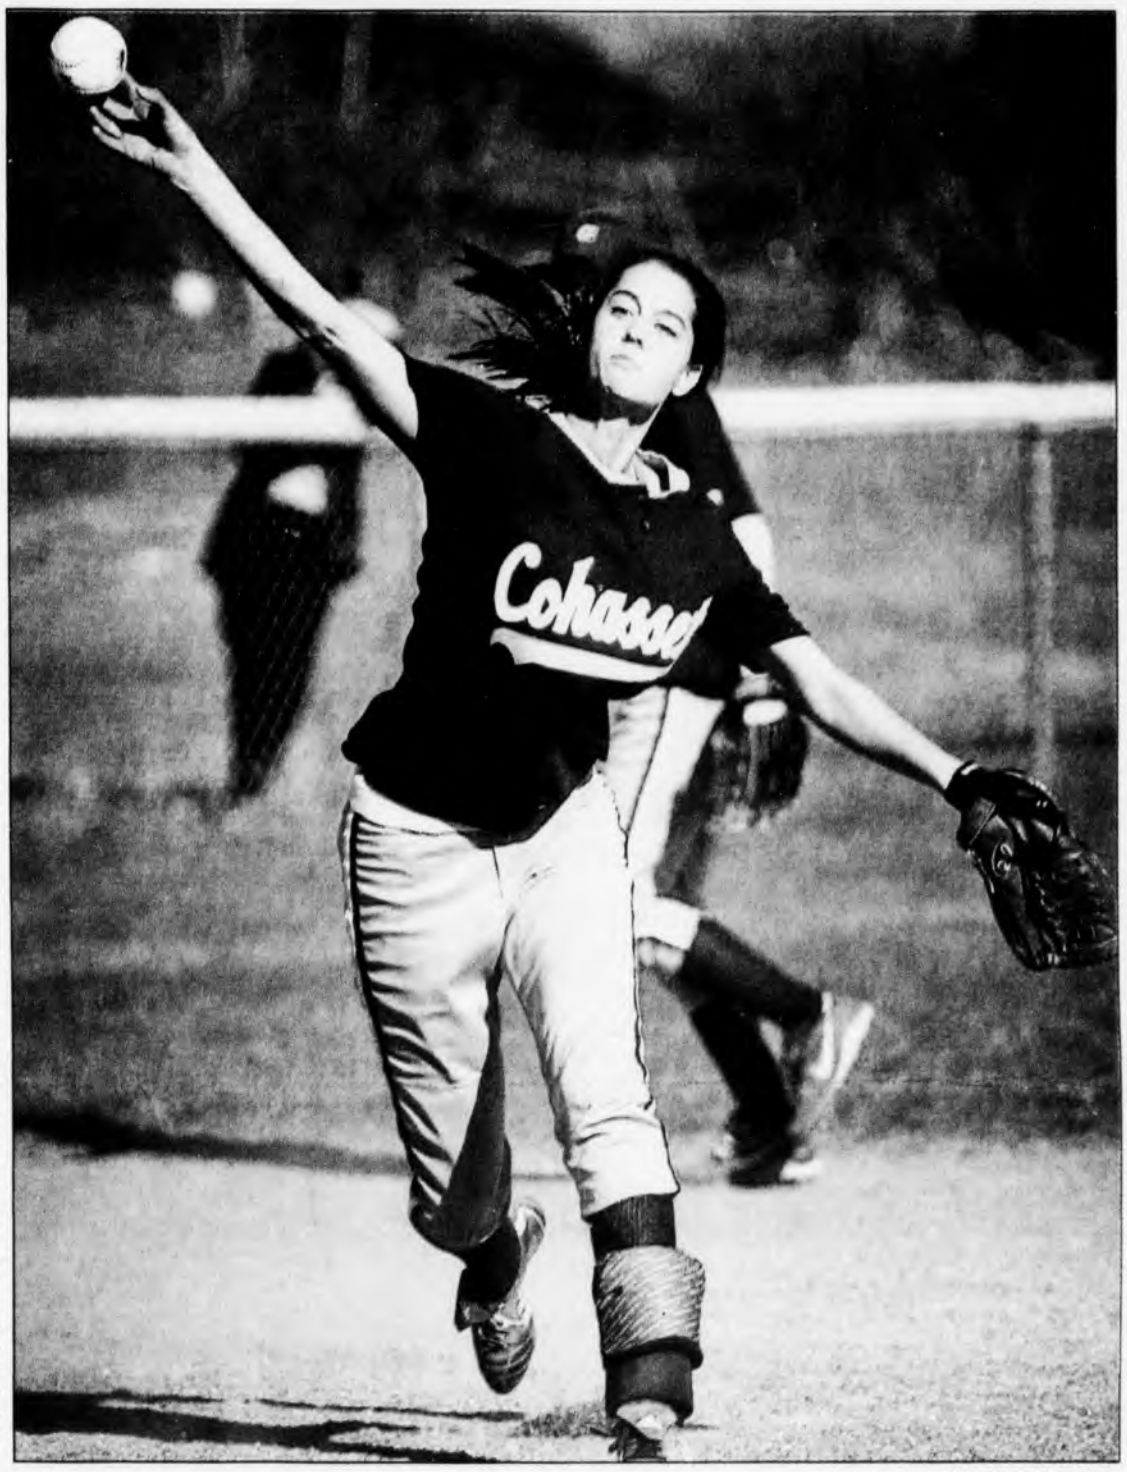
Spofford acknowledged it is hard for any senior to go through the rebuilding process and tipped his hat to Haggerty for the class she showed all season. During her first three years of varsity softball, Haggerty played on tournament teams.

"For her to say, 'I'm going to sacrifice' and step up like she did will show in years to come," Spofford said. "If this program takes off she will be a big part of that."

"There was truly excitement at the end of the year. We were wishing we could play more games."
— Cohasset softball coach Rob Spofford

Other key players this season included South Shore League all-stars Meredith Kelly and Carly Salerno.

Kelly batted .565, slugged 1.032, had six homeruns, 3 triples, 8 doubles and 17 singles. The sophomore played first base and provided great power from the corner infield.



"The future is only going to get brighter for her," Spofford said. "She embraced the new hitting concepts and is a very athletic young lady. There is nothing harder than hitting a moving ball and her [success] was due in part that Anna [Haggerty] hit behind her."

Kelly also finished with 28 RBI, 24 runs, a .625 OBP and struck out only five times in 72 at bats.

Salerno batted .267 and slugged .500 but was chosen as an all-star mainly for her great defense at shortstop. With two young pitchers starting for the Skippers, a lot of balls were hit Salerno's way.

"She made a ton of spectacular

Cohasset U15 laxers capture championship

June 19, 2008

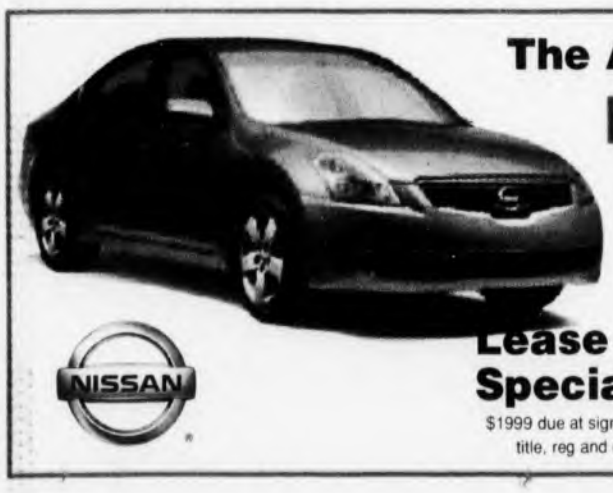
In a rematch of the recent state high school final, the 7th/8th grade boys lacrosse teams from Cohasset and Scituate battled it out last Thursday for the Town Tournament League Championship (TTL). In it's second year, the TTL is a regional select lacrosse program that features the best lacrosse players at a U13 and U15 level from South Shore towns playing in an eight game season throughout the spring as a compliment to their regular town lacrosse programs.

This year, the Cohasset U15 TTL Team dominated the regional competition and after an undefeated regular season, they defeated Marshfield in the semifinals for a chance to play in the title game versus perennial archrival, Scituate.

In a much anticipated title game that was made even more electrifying being played on Scituate's new turf field and under the lights, the Cohasset crew brought their "A" game to the field and quickly set the tone for the night's success by putting on a college-level "clinic" on how to play this great American game.

The first half looked like an ESPN highlight reel with the hometown laxers dominating every facet of the game from faceoff to ground balls, defensive strips, and picture-perfect offensive execution that put this game out of reach by the first intermission with the score 7 – 0 after the first quarter.

A few of the highlights from the game included: 17 saves by Willy Brown that stifled every offensive charge; multiple rocket-snipes by Kyle Livingstone, Danny Czerkawski, and Robbie Mahoney; a behind the back flip-shot by John Collins; a full field clear and score by Dean McNary; ankle- breaking deeks and laser-like feeds from Mitch McNary and Charlie Neaves; and Alex Evans picking a shot's rebound "out of the air" and stuffing it back where it belonged.



Derek Froio and Geoff Swain anchored an unbeatable defensive corps while underclassmen, Ryan McGovern, Teddy Patsos, and Nick Tangherlini kept Scituate under wraps defensively with John Mills and Andrew Fontaine adding to the point tally to insure that the victory was preserved.

In the end, Cohasset posted a very impressive 15-5 victory that provided the perfect ending to a perfect season (9-0) as the Cohasset kids hosted their trophies in celebration and socked away some great memories for the future.

plays," Spofford said. "Shortstop is usually the hardest position to make an all-star team because there are so many good players there."

Prior to this season only two home runs had been hit out of Freedom Field, according to Spofford. Six girls went yard in 2008, including, Kelly, Salerno, Marissa Tangherlini, Christine Conor, Kristin Monaco and Carley Zappolo. A new hitting style helped. Cohasset also tweaked its defense, playing much more aggressive this year. The changes caused some growing pains, but if the second half of the season is any indicator, the sky is the limit for this team next year.

"The future looks bright," Spofford said.

With Brittney Pinkus, Haley Wheelwright and Conor getting more and more mound experience the pitching should really improve next year. Wheelwright helped the junior varsity team go 15-1 this year.

"There was truly excitement at the end of the year," Spofford said. "We were wishing we could play more games."

Pierce-d through the heart

JOEL RACICOT

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Here goes nothing. You can have Larry Bird. I'm just fine with Paul Pierce (as the Steinway delicately hangs over my head, one fiber of the already thinning rope coils violently upward).

It is what it is.

Ten years ago I sat in the Fleet Center during the 1998 Draft Party and watched the draft board with disbelief. Guys like Raef LaFrentz, Jason Williams and Robert Traylor were going before our beloved Pierce at the 10th pick. We all now know about those guys. We saw the LaFrentz bore-fest in first person; J-Dub belongs in the D-League and Traylor made enough rounds at the buffet table to make Takeru Kobayashi jealous.

We watched aghast as the unconventional Kansas star was passed over time and again. When Rick Pitino (the guy with the pasta sauce) came to the podium and announced that, with the 10th pick we were getting Paul Pierce, we were all thrilled.

At the very least, everyone there had heard of Paul Pierce. We were getting the most NBA ready guy in the draft. There was some hope for the Celtics now just a year removed from the 1997 Draft Party, and the backcourt of the future debacle that was Ron Mercer and Chauncey Billups.

Since the Celtics drafted his rights, Pierce has taken his fans on an odyssey that would make Lewis and Clark take pause. We loved him, hated him, wanted him to go and wanted him to stay. He was riveting against the Nets in the 2002 playoffs and equally as despicable and unwatchable against the Pacers in the 2005 playoffs.

He never carried the aura from the old Celtics teams of the past, because he never won. To mention Bird and Pierce in the same breath was blasphemy.

His talent is undeniable. An awkward mix of ying and yang that is Pierce's game has kept the points coming through the years. There was never any doubt about his scoring abilities. Both he and Bird have that scoring touch in common. That's about it, most would argue.

The pictures hanging on the kitchen walls in Boston are of Jesus Christ, John F. Kennedy and Larry Bird. Paul Pierce? C'mon. Really? I mean, Larry Bird is the best Celtic ever, right?

Yeah, probably, I'm certainly no judge; I wasn't even born when Bird had his rookie camp in Marshfield in 1979.

But here is The Truth. My life as an NBA fan started with an old blond haired, stiff backed icon, doing double pumped three pointers against Jerome Kersey and Chuck Person. My buddy's older brother had a Bird rookie card, the tri-perforated Topps edition with Magic Johnson and Julius Erving on it. I stared at the French Lick Hick until I went blind one afternoon, wondering, where is that guy?

I watched highlights of the 1981 Eastern Conference finals like Frank Sinatra sings "My Way." Full of purpose, full of meaning, but it all meant nothing for me. Bird wasn't mine, never was.

Watching Bird choke out Dr. J in 1984 was like watching highlight videos of Ben Hur taking on Messala in a chariot race in 26 AD.

Even now, I have a picture of LB hanging in my cubicle. I'm not even sure why. The last time I checked in with ol' Larry he was being dispatched by Mark Price and Brad Doherty. Sorry, but those mythic performances from Bird in the early 1990s are all I had. At that point, another Boston icon, "Woody" Boyd, the assistant bartender in Cheers, could have taken Bird off the dribble.

It wasn't until an unforgettable Tuesday night in the middle of June that I fully realized I didn't need Larry Bird anymore.

Clutching my ticket to game six, I remembered walking up the stairs to the Wal-Mart arena that is the TD Banknorth Garden 10 years earlier. All the hope from the 1998 draft night was coming to fruition. It wasn't an old highlight video with Dan Patrick hosting alongside Cedric Maxwell or Gerald Henderson.

Instead of second hand visions of Bird vanquishing Magic, Isaiah or Nique' on grainy VHS, I had a clear view of a latter day Celtics saint. A new legend, one that had already dispatched Johnson and James, had Bryant on his radar.

With a firm grasp on the finals MVP trophy, the longest road out became the shortest road home for Mr. Pierce. And for a newer generation of Celtics fan, the traffic jam on Larry Bird Boulevard, full of Ghosts of Celtics past, finally cleared up.

Area sophomores attend leadership program

Christine Coner and Lucy Noble recently attended the Massachusetts Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Seminar. Christine and Lucy joined more than 171 other young leaders representing 140 high schools from throughout Massachusetts, June 6 through 8 at Bentley College in Waltham.

Representing Cohasset High School, Christine is the daughter of Eileen and Joseph Coner, and Lucy is the daughter of Stephanie and Howard Noble.

HOBY Leadership Seminars bring together a select group of high school sophomores to interact with groups of leaders in business, government, education and the professions to discuss present and future issues. The goal is to provide youth with a stimulating forum for learning about issues while broadening understanding of their leadership potential and quest for self-development. HOBY leaders are also challenged to return to their communities to perform at least 100 hours of community service within 12 months following the seminar.

Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership was established in 1958 by actor Hugh O'Brian following a visit to Africa where he was inspired by a meeting with Dr. Albert Schweitzer.

"One of the things Schweitzer said to me was that the most important thing in education was to teach young people to think for themselves," O'Brian said. "From that inspiration, and with the support of others who believe in youth and the American dream, I started HOBY to seek out, recognize and develop outstanding leadership potential among our nation's youth."

More information about HOBY activities and sponsorship opportunities is available by calling Gail Elmore at 508-839-6843.

Pembroke Dealer Stuns The Competition

Customers To Pay Just $29 Down & $99 Per Month* Plus Pay Just 99¢ Per Gallon of Gas For The Next 12 Months† When They Purchase Any Pre-Owned Vehicle This Thursday, June 26th Through Sunday, June, 29th!

PEMBROKE, MA —Mr. Rob McGee, Owner of McGee Pre-Owned Superstore on Route 139, stunned the competition and area residents today by announcing a 99¢ per gallon gas† offer for anyone who purchases a vehicle this Thursday, June 26th through Sunday, June 29th. "People are currently driving cars, trucks & SUVs that are not as fuel efficient as those we offer at McGee Pre-Owned Superstore. To encourage people to turn in their gas guzzlers and purchase a more fuel efficient vehicle I am offering them the opportunity to purchase vehicles for just $29 down & $99 per month* PLUS they'll pay just 99¢ per gallon of gas for the next year†." Response to this unprecedented offer is expected to be huge over the 4-day period. McGee wants people to know that the event must take place regardless of any weather issue that may arise.

McGee offers a simple explanation for this unprecedented sale, "We know people are concerned about the rising cost of gas and that gas prices are impacting vehicle sales. At McGee Pre-Owned Superstore we offer many different fuel efficient models along with over 200 economically priced, pre-owned vehicles to choose from." In order to maintain our monthly sales pace, we decided to offer the easiest and most affordable way possible to purchase a vehicle. With prices starting at just $29 down and $99 a month*, and with gas for just 99¢ a gallon for the next year†, it doesn't get any better than this — and the service you can expect is second to none." There will be many vehicles to choose from including recent trade-ins, lease returns, hard-to-find program vehicles, former service loaners and many more. McGee goes on to mention, "Most of the vehicles we're offering will have incredibly low pricing; some at or below wholesale price levels. I can assure you, if you want to get a great deal on the vehicle of your dreams, you won't want to miss this event." During this incredible event, every pre-owned vehicle will be available for the low down payment of just $29*. Extended terms and special financing will be available to help reduce monthly payments & obtain credit for those who may have had challenges in the past.

"Vehicles to sell for $29 Down and $99 Per Month* with Gas for Just 99¢ a gallon for the next year†."

Rob McGee - Owner

Many of the pre-owned vehicles offered are late model vehicles with low miles and the balance of their factory warranty remaining. Auto shoppers can choose from many makes and models including: Chevrolet, Toyota, Honda, Jeep, Chrysler, Nissan, Ford, GMC, Pontiac and more. There will be vehicles available with easy low monthly payments. Payments will be clearly marked. All you'll need to do is pick a vehicle. It's that simple.

McGee cites an example, "We have a 2001 Ford Focus with A/C and power steering for only $29 down and $99 a month*. Add gas for only 99¢ a gallon for the next year† and that's an unbeatable deal!"

During this event all trades are welcome, paid off or not. No matter how much you owe on your trade, McGee Pre-Owned Superstore will pay it off†! You won't want to miss this unique opportunity to obtain a pre-owned car, truck, van or sport-utility vehicle with an unbelievably low down payment of just twenty-nine* dollars!

McGee also reminds customers that the event is first-come, first-served, so it's critical to come early to have the best chance of getting the vehicle of your choice.

The exclusive site for this exciting event is McGee Pre-Owned Superstore, located on Route 139 in Pembroke for 4-days only, Thursday, June 26th from 9am-9pm, Friday, June 27th from 9am–9pm, Saturday, June 28th from 9am-8pm & Sunday, June 29th from 10am-6pm.

GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Sunscreen, check. Revealing/camouflaging (pick one) bathing suit, check. Beach toys for the kids, check. Trashy novel for you, check.

With summer at our doorstep, it's time to hit the beach. All these options are within reasonable driving distance of Boston. Book a hotel and make a weekend of it.

Cape Cod

Trying to single out one great beach on the Cape is like trying to decide between fried clams, pizza and ice cream: they're all good. Locals have their favorites and will argue their merits for hours, but you can't go wrong on the 40-plus-mile-long Cape Cod National Seashore, extending roughly from Chatham to Provincetown. The area is packed with sand dunes, biking trails and, of course, plenty of swimming beaches along the way. If you have little kids in tow, consider spending the day at Skaket Beach in Orleans, which has gentle waves, shallow water and some of the best sunsets around.

Martha's Vineyard

Choose your beach by your energy level. State Beach (known as Bend in the Road Beach to locals) is calm and gentle, making it a great choice for young families. Older kids and adults who want a more high adrenaline experience head to the Pease's Point end of South Beach for wave action and kite flying. For a change of pace, make your way to Aquinnah (formerly known as Gay Head), where you will not only find some of the island's nicest beaches, but also shops run by the Wampanoag Tribe where you can pick up a souvenir or two.

Nantucket

Got kids? Take them to Children's Beach, where the waves are gentle and the services include a playground and picnic tables. Special summer fun includes tie-dying T-shirts and Friday night movies, as well as evening Children's Concerts in July and August. You can also hop on a town shuttle to Jetties Beach, which offers a playground and changing rooms, but be sure to time your visit to coincide with the blowout annual Sandcastle and Sculpture Day in mid-August.

Kennebunk Beach, Maine

When it comes to rating beaches, Maine doesn't always get the respect it deserves. Sure, some of the coastline is rocky, but there are plenty of inviting, sandy beaches along the south coast, some of which also offer picturesque towns full of little shops and hole-in-the-wall seafood restaurants. Kennebunk Beach is technically three beaches and attracts surfers and hardy swimmers, but also offers plenty of room for those who just want to snooze in the sun.

Old Orchard Beach, Maine

OK, it's a little honky-tonk, but who doesn't love this beach/boardwalk combo for a throwback to the simpler days of childhood? Brave the Drop Zone or the Galaxy Roller Coaster at the beachfront Palace Playland, where you can also catch the view from the giant Ferris wheel, or relive your childhood on the carousel. Then wander along the pier, where dozens of fish and snack shacks vie for your attention. Did we also mention there is a beach? Sunbathe, enjoy a dip and settle in for a weekly fireworks display in season.

Connecticut shore

The Constitution State's largest, the two-mile Hammonasset Beach State Park along Long Island Sound, offers sun and sand as well as a boardwalk and places to picnic and camp. You can rent a bicycle, fish or check out the exhibits at the nature center. Or spend the day at Ocean Beach Park in New London, where facilities include a water slide, food outlets, mini-golf and a swimming pool.

Block Island, R.I.

With more than a dozen beaches to choose from, this popular island just 12 miles off the coast of Rhode Island draws repeat visitors and newbies alike. The island is small enough that you can get around by rental moped or bicycle or even on foot from the ferry dock. Crescent Beach is the easiest to walk to and, at two-plus miles, offers some of the nicest beachcombing around.

Cape May, N.J.

New Yorkers know the charms of the Jersey shore, but for many New Englanders, Cape May is a pleasant surprise. The architecture is Victorian and there is so much to do here, from parasailing and whale watching to ghost tours and wine tastings, you may forget to go to the beach at all. Boating is very popular, and exploring the cute little shops and restaurants is half the fun.

Rehoboth Beach, Del.

This Delaware beach area draws visitors in droves, thanks to its lively atmosphere and inviting beach. Walk off lunch on the boardwalk or stake out a spot on the sand, knowing you are within easy walking distance from stores and eateries. Water sports fanatics can try Dewey Beach nearby, where windsurfing and jet skiing are among the popular activities. Or hop on a free loaner bike to explore Cape Henlopen State Park, where there's a beach and interactive Nature Center.

Road Trip Tips

Remember when family travel was synonymous with road trips? Fast forward to today's kids, and you will find that many of them have already been to the Caribbean or Florida before they hit middle school. Will high fuel surcharges, flight cancellations and fewer frills on air travel drive us back into the days of "Are we there yet?" car trips? If so, a little planning can make the difference between a fun outing and torture on wheels.

* Consider renting a car for the trip. Rental companies run specials all the time, and if you factor in wear and tear on your own car, it might be worth it. Be sure to fill up the car yourself before returning it, though, or the company will charge you a higher per gallon rate.

* Pack a picnic. Highway fast food options are limited, and if you're driving with a car full, they can be expensive. Resist the temptation to eat while you're driving, though. Rest areas often have picnic tables where you can get fresh air and stretch your legs.

* Make sure your beach is pet friendly. In season, some beaches have rules about letting dogs on the beach except after hours. Check first, and if you do bring Spot, bring plenty of water for the car ride.

* Bring sunscreen. Beach area convenience stores are on to you, so expect the prices to spike up the closer you are to the beach. Check out the new broad-spectrum sunscreens for the best protection, and try spray-ons especially if you have wiggly kids.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JUNE 23, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Count to 10 if you must, but don't lose your temper, despite that person's (you know who!) efforts to goad you into reacting. Your restraint will pay off in a big way.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week finds you in a sociable mood, ready and eager to enjoy the company of family and friends. It's also a good time to seek out and renew old friendships.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Patience is called for as you await a decision about that project you're eager to launch. Meanwhile, try to set aside more time to share with that special person in your life.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Avoid becoming involved in a workplace dispute early in the week by insisting both sides submit their stands to a neutral arbitrator. Things begin to cool off by Thursday.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It promises to be a busy but productive week for the Big Cat. The pace slows by Friday, allowing you to catch up on matters you put aside but that now need your attention.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A suddenly disruptive family situation is best handled with a cool, calm and collected response. Wait until things settle to let off all that pent-up emotional steam.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your practical side dominates the week as you reassess your finances to make some sensible adjustments in what you plan to spend and what you expect to save.

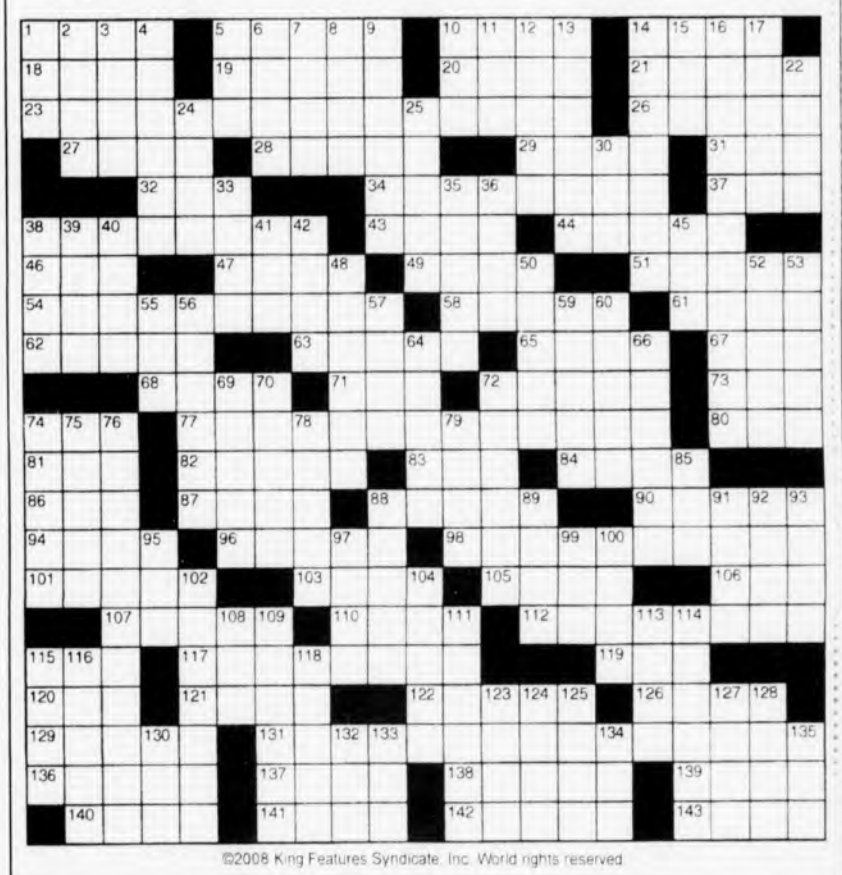
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected meeting with a former colleague opens some interesting possibilities. But you need to press for full disclosure before making a decision.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent flurry of activity eases by midweek, giving you time to readjust your disrupted schedule and make new plans for a weekend getaway.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You're usually the one who gives advice. But now it's time to open yourself up to counsel from friends who have your best interests at heart.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might find resistance to your call for a full inquiry into a workplace problem. But by week's end even the most rigid naysayers begin to come around.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A recurring problem surfaces once again. Maybe it's time you used your creative talents to help you find a new approach to resolving it once and for all.



(c) 2008 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are guided in what you do both by your intelligence and your emotions. An acting career would suit you quite well.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

'Take me out to the ball game'

Hingham Historical Society's first-annual Summer Vintage Base Ball Exhibition game takes place July 5 at Derby Academy's Talbot Field. The Hingham Coopers and the Hingham Derbys will reprise their epic battle of last September when the mighty Derbys drove the brave Coopers to humbling defeat, scoring 10 runs against the Coopers hard-won 5. The game starts at 5 p.m. and ends around 7 p.m., giving fans plenty of time to take the short walk from Derby Academy to the beach in time for the Hingham fireworks at 9 p.m.

The game will be played 1880s-style in reproduction uniforms. Back then, there was only one umpire who officiated from behind the pitcher. What's more, fans, or cranks as they were called, could sometimes help resolve disputed calls umpire if asked by the umpire. The umpire didn't lack authority, however. He commanded respect at all times, and cranks and ballists (players) alike had to refer to him as "Sir", or risk being tossed out of the game. Cranks cheered on their favorite strikers, or batters, with rousing "Huzzahs!" and prayed for the other team to commit as many muffs, or errors, as possible. Cranks watched from the bullpen, a name now used for the area where pitchers, warm up. Back then, pitchers were called hurlers, and warmed up wherever they could find an open spot.

The game is free to the public, and refreshments and food will be available for purchase.

Selectman Bruce Rabuffo will emcee the July 5 game via a 21st century public address system. Historical Society President Bill Salisbury will throw out the first pitch, and Vice President Michael Studley will umpire, while Historical Society board members and volunteers will be on hand to serve beer, soda and water.

This family event is a collaborative community-wide effort made possible by in-kind and cash donations from Andrew Zona, Baxter Mooring & Launch Service, Brian Hill, Brian Lenihan, Citibank, Derby Academy, DOT Gallery, Eastern Bank, Enterprise Equipment Co., Inc., Glenn Vinton, Hannaford Supermarkets, Hingham Liquors, Jeff Keller, Joe Lindsay, Pete Dickason, Selene Achille.

Quick Flix

Members of a Mongol tribe make their way across rough terrain in "Mongol."

ALEXANDRA (Not rated) Director Aleksandr Sokurov's "Alexandra" is a war film without bullets, bloodshed or battles, yet replete with casualties. An exquisitely acted, uplifting anti-war war story. (A)

THE ANIMATION SHOW 4 (Not rated) A collection of independent, animated short films from around the world, intended for a mature audience. (Not reviewed)

BABY MAMA (PG-13) Tina Fey ("30 Rock") plays a busy career woman who hires a surrogate mother (Amy Poehler) so she can avoid maternity leave and stay on the corporate fast track. (B)

BRA BOYS (R) Russell Crowe narrates the story of the Bra Boys, a group of poor, mostly fatherless children with chips on their shoulders and surfboards under their feet. A sad, exhilarating film. (B)

THE CHRONICLES OF NARNIA: PRINCE CASPIAN (PG-13) The Pevensie kids return to Narnia to find a new tyrannical leader whom they attempt to unseat, assisted by the chatty critters that helped make the first film so enchanting. (B)

THE FALL (R) An injured girl (Catinca Untaru) is befriended by another hospital patient who is bedridden and (Lee Pace) enchants her with a story that takes her to colorful, imaginative places. (B)

THE FOOT FIST WAY (R) A Napoleon Dynamite-like send up about an egotistical suburban Tae Kwon Do instructor who challenges his former hero, a martial arts star, after he finds him in bed with his wife. (C-)

FORGETTING SARAH MARSHALL (R) Jason Segel is an insecure loser whose girlfriend (Kristen Bell) leaves him. A raucous, raunchy and sweet film that veers between dizzying happiness and lovelorn sadness. (B)

THE HAPPENING (R) M. Night Shyamalan's latest effort about a deadly, unseen monster terrorizing a small town is really bad. Mark Wahlberg and Zooey Deschanel star. (D-)

THE INCREDIBLE HULK (PG-13) Sequel to the 2003 film "Hulk." Edward Norton stars as that mutating scientist Bruce Banner. Much better writing than the first film, with lots of action and special effects. (B)

INDIANA JONES...KINGDOM OF THE CRYSTAL SKULL (PG-13) Long on action, short on story, and it's hard to believe that Harrison Ford at age 65 can leap off waterfalls or hop from a speeding car. It's the worst one of the franchise. (D)

IRON MAN (PG-13) Robert Downey Jr. stars as a billionaire industrialist and genius inventor who builds a high-tech suit of armor to escape captivity. It's mostly bad. (C)

KUNG FU PANDA (PG) Dustin Hoffman and Jack Black lead the voice talent in an animated tale about a panda bear who learns martial arts from a wise old wolf. Nice to look at, but not much else. (C-)

THE LOVE GURU (PG-13) Mike Myers plays an Indian guru who's hired to straighten out a hockey player's troubled marriage, which the guru hopes will land him a spot on Oprah. Sophomoric bathroom humor, but undeniably funny, in fits and starts. (B-)

MONGOL (R) An epic telling of the early years of the man who was to become Genghis Khan. Spectacular photography, thrilling and violent battle scenes, and a love story in the middle of it all. In Mongolian with English subtitles. (B+)

THE PROMOTION (R) John C. Reilly and Seann William Scott play rivals battling for the same job with a grocery chain. Woefully lacking in cleverness and humor. Jenna Fischer and Lili Taylor co-star. (C-)

REPRISE (R) Two friends and aspiring novelists send off their first manuscripts. Six months later, one manuscript has proven successful and one a failure. A lame, predictable story. (D)

SAVAGE GRACE (Not Rated) Julianne Moore stars in the tawdry true story of the murder of Barbara Baekeland, wife of the heir to the Bakelite plastics fortune. The film rambles and is confusing. (C)

SEX AND THE CITY (R) If you miss the frank sexual talk between Carrie, Samantha, Charlotte and Miranda, you're about to get a big fix. The trio proves to single gals that there's a happy ending after 40. (B+)

THE STRANGERS (R) A trio of masked intruders terrorize a couple (Liv Tyler, Scott Speedman) while they cower in fear inside an isolated cabin. A good, scary horror flick. (B+)

THE VISITOR (PG-13) A serio-comedy about a directionless professor (Richard Jenkins) who finds a new appreciation for life after becoming closely attached to a trio of illegal immigrants. (B)

WAR, INC. (R) Satire about the war in Iraq with John Cusack as a hit man torn between two women (Marisa Tomei and Hilary Duff) after he's sent to Turaqistan to take out an oil minister. (C+)

WHAT HAPPENS IN VEGAS (PG-13) Ashton Kutcher, wins $3 million in Vegas, marries Cameron Diaz then wants a divorce. But divorce judge Dennis Miller orders them to live together for six months as husband and wife. (C+)

What makes a patriot?

Patriots see their nation as a people and not a place.

When asked to serve, a Patriot asks for whom and not for what.

Patriots seek unity when others hide behind division.

A Patriot sees one not many.

Above all, Patriots love their country as they do their own family, friends and selves.

'A great day for Cohasset'

Tri raises more than $265K for JDRF

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Inspiration was the prevailing sentiment at the Cohasset Triathlon this past Sunday morning. Hundreds of athletes took in the Cohasset scenery and make their way around the challenging 15-mile course despite a dense morning fog.

Hundreds gathered at Sandy Beach to cheer on their favorite triathlete and even more hundreds lined the course in support of the race and its participants.

"I was so amazed at the community support of the race. Athletes from (Olympic triathlete and race winner) Jarrod Shoemaker on down told me how many people were on the course cheering and clapping," said Race Director Bill Burnett. "It was a great day for Cohasset."

While last year, tragedy took center stage following the inaugural Cohasset Triathlon, the post-race was marked with celebration and optimism. In addition, Burnett was happy to report that with the exception of a band-aid, no medical aid was necessary during the course of the race.

Beyond the feat of athleticism a triathlon involves, the participants racing also were champions for a cause — the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). On race day, Burnett presented a $229,000 check to JDRF and by Wednesday he said more donations had come in to increase that number to over $265,000. Burnett will continue to accept donations for 30 days.

Heidi Daniels, executive director of JDRF New England, proclaimed the Triathlon the largest volunteer-driven

A sign of the times

Mariner's Landing commemorated

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On July 1, 1912, the town was given a parcel of land on the waterfront for the price of $1. Ninety-six years later — to the day — a ceremony was held to celebrate the installation of a sign naming the area "Mariner's Landing."

The property, which is now home to the Center for Coastal Student Research (CSCR) and the Cohasset Maritime Institute as well as the only boat-launching ramp in town, is now properly marked with a wooden sign at the boat ramp.

Members of Hagerty Committee have worked for 15 years, often amid controversy, to see the park come to fruition.

"They are a small, but mighty band," said Selectman Karen Quigley to members of the Hagerty Committee at a ceremony held on Tuesday morning. "The sign is long overdue and I'd like to express the thanks and appreciation to those citizens who sat on the Hagerty Committee for their work in creating this harborside park."

The land comes with a long history, beginning in the early 1900s when original owner Edmund Parker sold the land to Manuel Salvador in November 1902. Ten years later, Salvador conveyed the property to the town for $1 but kept his right of way in order to off load his fishing ships coming into the harbor.

Because of this history as a fisherman's landing spot, Hagerty Committee member Paul Pattison came up with the name "Mariner's Landing." In addition to the boat ramp, a small town pier is a part of the park to continue this offloading tradition.

In 1938 the town inked a 50-year lease with Francis Hagerty for the parcel at a cost of $50 per year. In 1944, the town

Village design options open

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Should a terra cotta building be encouraged in village? Should the town develop a plan for a sidewalk for parking way? Should flat roofed buildings be allowed?

These are just some of the questions the Planning Board began to grapple with as they develop design guidelines for the Village Business District. On the heels of fall Special Town Meeting's approval of village zoning bylaw amendments, the Planning Board is creating a complementary document to aid both the board and the applicants in the permitting process.

The Planning Board took a first crack at the design guidelines draft prepared by their consulting Concord Square Development Company led by principal planner Angus Jennings.

"We're taking a 10-foot view of this. This is a work in progress."
— Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

"We're taking a 10-foot view of this," said Planning Board Vice Chairman Stuart Ivimey. "This is a work in progress."

The design guidelines are divided into two sections: guiding principles and more specific design guidelines.

PICTURE THIS/Mike Barra

Occupation: Student at Plymouth State University, NH and Program Coordinator for Cohasset Recreation's Summer Xtreme.

Best Day of Your Life: The first time I finished the 100 mile canoe trip down the Allagash River in Maine. I was 7, and I didn't do a lot of the work on my own, but it has kept me coming back every August since then.

Worst Vacation: Last year we went up to Maine for our annual paddling trip. All went well until the drive home when my brakes gave out. It was a Sunday so no stores were open to sell us the parts, and no mechanics were available to fix it for us. I had to drive 15 hours from the tip of Maine back to the South Shore with absolutely no brakes. It's an 8 hour drive when the brakes work. I would say that trip was the best vacation and the worst vacation combined.

Favorite Season: Definitely Summer. I love kayaking, hiking, walking my golden retriever, bicycling, and Summer Xtreme!

Best Book: "The Dark Tower" series by Stephen King is one of my favorites.

Favorite Movie: "There's Something about Mary." I've seen it countless times and it just never gets old to me.

Best TV Show: "The Office."

The Mariner caught up with Mike Barra at the Recreation Department office this week. Mike is coordinator for Summer Xtreme, which is, designed for middle school students entering the sixth, seventh, and eighth grades. There are seven one-week sessions. Call the Rec at 781-383-4109 for more information.

Favorite Artist: Red Hot Chili Peppers.

Favorite Junk Food: Home made nachos with way too much cheese.

Dumbest Thing You Have Ever Done: The dumbest thing I have ever done was to commute on my bicycle without a helmet. I took one bad fall coming down a hill on Route 228 in Hingham and I'm lucky to be alive. I went right over the handlebars and landed face first in the middle of the street. I was all scraped up; I still have a couple scars from the accident. I won't get on the bike without a helmet again.

Pet Peeve: People who don't consider how their actions are affecting others.

Biggest Worry: My puppy has a potentially fatal heart murmur and right now I'm really worried about his health.

Goal: To do something new every day of my life.

Person You Would Most Like To Meet: Arnold Schwarzenegger.

Best Part Of Cohasset: Cohasset Recreation and Summer Xtreme of course!

Hearing slated on water rate hike

Aquarion Water Company has filed an application with the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities requesting an approximate $3.1 million, or an overall 24.8 percent, increase in water service revenues.

Customers in Hingham, Hull, North Cohasset, and Norwell will have an opportunity to comment on the proposed rate increase at a public hearing July 16.

It has been seven years since the Company last increased its water rates, stated Aquarion Sr. Vice President of Operations Larry Bingaman in a letter the company is sending to all of its customers. "When the proposed rates are expected to go into effect, investments totaling $21.4 million will have been made for water utility infrastructure improvements since 2001 in such areas as increased water supply and replacement of aging and undersized pipes, as well as other needed water system enhancements."

The MA DPU will hold a public hearing for Aquarion customers in all four towns on Wed., July 16, at 7 p.m. in the Hull High School auditorium at 180 Main St. Directions to Hull High School are included with the letter.

Aquarion's request for a rate increase will be thoroughly reviewed by the MA DPU. No change in water rates can be made within the Department's approval.

Bingaman is hopeful that the process will be completed and the new rates effective before the end of this year.

If the proposed rates are approved by the MA DPU, the average residential water bill for customers in all four towns, using an average of 175 gallons daily, would increase from $1.67 to $2.03 per day.

Customers are invited to provide comments at the hearing or in writing via email to the MA DPU by 5 p.m. Fri., July 18, addressed to dpu.efiling@state.ma.us and the hearing officer, carol.pieper@state.ma.us. Written comments may be sent to: Carol Pieper, Hearing Officer, Dept. of Public Utilities, One South Station, Boston, MA 02110. (Telephone number: (617) 305-3500.) Refer to Docket D.P.U. 08-27 in all correspondence. For further information about the hearing or approval process, contact Pieper.

Wind public forum July 16

On Wednesday, July 16 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee will be co-hosting a public forum to present the first commercial sized wind generation project to be submitted to the Planning Board under the new wind energy by-law.

This first project is for the installation of two 1.6 - 2MW (mega watt) sized wind turbines on land surrounding Cohasset Height landfill (Graham Waste). These turbines will be on same size scale as Hull Wind 2. The Graham Waste project is a joint venture of CCI-Energy, Palmer Capital, Lumus Construction, and Emergent Energy.

This presentation will the first opportunity for town residents to see the plans and begin to understand the scope of the project prior to the Planning Board Presentation. Some of what will be discussed and presented include: turbine placement, on-going site evaluation including avian, shadow/flicker and noise studies, a report outlining the recent wind study performed on site and energy production estimates. The presentation will also include computer simulation images of the turbines in place and what they will look like from various locations around town. Residents will be welcome and encouraged to ask questions.

See next week's Mariner for more details.

POLICE BEAT

Trio arrested this week for car break-in

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Two juveniles and one minor are facing charges of breaking and entering into a motor vehicle after police responded to a car alarm on Surry Drive at about 2 a.m. on Wednesday morning.

The juveniles, meaning they are both under 16, are former residents of Cohasset. One now lives in South Boston and the other in Quincy, police said. The third is a 17-year-old minor, Michael Levesque of Queen's Brook Road, in Pembroke.

Officers believed the car on Surry Drive had just been broken into and requested assistance in the search from the Hingham K-9 unit. Later Hull and the State Police also assisted with the search.

Some property has been recovered, including a laptop and cell phone.

At 4 a.m., one of the 16 year olds was spotted coming out the woods; he wrestled with the officer and took off back into the woods. A short time later he was observed climbing into a window in a house on Hull Street and he was taken into custody. He did not live in the house, police said.

Police continued to maintain a perimeter in the area, Chief James Hussey said. Later Wednesday morning the other two subjects were "flushed out" and brought into custody after 8 a.m.

The three are facing charges of breaking and entering of a motor vehicle and larceny under $250. The 16 year old that was caught climbing into the window was also charged with breaking and entering into a dwelling. Hussey said the investigation is continuing and the suspects could be facing more charges.

MV B&Es

Police are investigating more car break-ins that occurred over the past week. I

• At about 7 a.m. on Tuesday (June 24), a break-in to a Volvo owned by a 49-year-old Windy Hill resident was reported. The vehicle had been left unlocked. Taken were a laptop, digital camera and GPS unit for a total loss of $3,000. The theft occurred sometime between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m.

• Two cars at a home on Lamberts Lane were broken into overnight Friday (June 27) to Saturday (June 28). The cars, which were left unlocked, were a 1999 Toyota Landcruiser and a 2001 Honda Accord. Missing was a digital camera.

Marijuana arrests

Two Cohasset men were arrested and charged with possession of Class D (marijuana) last Thursday (June 26) at about 8:20 p.m. A Cohasset police officer went over to talk to the men who were inside a parked gray Kia at Cohasset Plaza.

The men in the Kia appeared to be hanging around doing nothing, police said. One of the young men appeared to be trying to conceal something. Further investigation revealed the men had a bag of marijuana in the car.

Alcohol possession

Two Cohasset teens, ages 16 and 17, were arrested after they were found with a pack of beer at 12:55 a.m. on Wednesday (June 25). The teens, who were carrying the beer and allegedly tried to discard it, were walking along Grace Drive near Hull Street when an officer stopped them.

MV accidents

• At 8:02 a.m. on Monday (June 23), a 2008 Ford pickup was struck by a 2004 Jeep exiting the train station on Route 3A. The pickup which was owned and operated by a 54-year-old Scituate man, was headed northbound when the accident occurred. The 19-year-old West Hartford, Conn. woman driving the Jeep was cited for failure to yield the right of way. Neither vehicle had to be towed and there were no injuries.

• On Tuesday (June 24) at 12:49 p.m., a 2001 Toyota RAV4, driven by a 69 year-old Scituate woman, was slowing down to take a left into the post office on Ripley Road when a 1997 Toyota Camry, drive by a 61-year-old Cohasset woman, tried to pass and cut it too close, sideswiping the RAV4. There were no injuries, no tows and no citations, police said.

• A 2003 Hyundai Elantra, drive by a 73-year-old Pembroke woman, pulled off the side of Route 3A southbound (across from Dunkin' Donuts) and got stuck in the drainage ditch. She was unable to drive out and required a tow, police said.

BB gun

Police confiscated a BB gun that was later picked up by a boy's parents after a complaint that the boy was shooting the gun out the window of his home. The boy's 18-year-old brother was watching him when the complaint came in. Reports that the boy was shooting the BB gun out the window and at geese were unfounded, although the boy was playing with the gun.

The incident was reported last Monday (June 23) at 2:45 p.m.

Bike taken

Hingham police are investigating the apparent theft of a bike from Victoria's in West Corner. A girl's mother called Cohasset after her daughter discovered her bike was gone after she went into the sub shop. The bicycle is a woman's trek bike. Cohasset logged the incident. Victoria's is in Hingham. There has been no sign of the bike yet, police said.

No-trespass

An Atlantic Avenue resident complained to police about two men trespassing on his property. The trespassing incident occurred on June 13 and the resident came to the station on June 24.

He claimed the subjects ignored his requests to stay off his property and that the easement can only be used by the town. Police do not get involved in boundary disputes and he was advised that it was a civil matter but he could ask the men be served with no trespass orders. The two men were served with no-trespass orders and advised not to trespass or they could be subject to arrest.

Solicitors

A Margin Street caller complained about a door-to-door solicitor last Friday at 7 p.m. The man was selling magazines and was advised that he had to register with the police before soliciting. The town bylaw requires that door-to-door solicitors, with certain exceptions, register with the police department.

Road rage

A woman, who was driving in a funeral procession, was yelled at by another motorist and her husband reported the road rage incident to police. The call came in at 1:53 p.m. on Saturday (June 28). The woman stopped short and put her brakes on apparently infuriating another motorist.

Police advise in road rage incidents to pull into a plaza parking lot where there are other people and use a cell phone to call police.

sold the property to the Hagerty Company for $1500. The land was used first as to make parts for PT boats during World War II, then to make rowing shells and, before vacating in the early 90s, furniture kits. Cohasset Colonials occupied the property for much of the later twentieth century. When Cohasset Colonials re-located to Hingham in 1993, they sold the 2.5 acre land back to the town for $470,000. By purchasing the land, the town prevented another industrial use there and opened the possibilities of a public park at the waterfront.

Quigley thanked the individual members of the Hagerty Committee for lending their expertise and passion to the harborside park. The committee was at one time constituted with 15 people.

Those in attendance helped to reminisce about the struggles and triumphs of the project.

Vee Roebuck was noted to have coordinated (and spent hundreds of hours doing it) with the "alphabet soup" of environmental agencies.

Hamilton Tewksbury diligently took the minutes of what was said to be often contentious, confusing contents of the Hagerty Committee meetings.

Joe Migliaccio lent his expertise in designing the parking lot and boat ramp.

Russ Bonetti, once the chairman of the committee, was perhaps the most passionate for the project.

Al Moore was the first chair of the committee and helped steer the project through the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals.

With a daily afternoon walk, Paul Pattison ensured the public had continued access to the land. The land has a special place for him because he grew up on Parker Ave. He said he used to cross the property on wooden planks across what was mostly wetland to get to school on Ripley Road.

The late Richard "Dickie" Barrow was recognized for his contributions to the project and for continually adding a "local" perspective to the issue at hand.

Remaining members of the Hagerty Committee and town officials gathered for a ceremony to commemorate the installation of a sign naming the area "Mariner's Landing." From left, Town Finance Director Mike Buckley, Al Moore, Selectman Karen Quigley, Joe Migliaccio, Vee Roebuck, Town Manager Bill Griffin, Paul Pattison, Hamilton Tewksbury and Russ Bonetti.

Town Manager Bill Griffin and Finance Director Mike Buckley attended the ceremony as well.

"It was a good project, we tried to get something for everyone," said Bonetti, adding when they first began he recalls Moore saying the project could take 10 years to complete. He was right — and then some.

"It was one of those rare opportunities," said Moore and the town had a small window in which to act. "The other alternative would have been industrial in nature and would not have been an asset to the town."

Despite the time and energy, the members of the Hagerty Committee seemed glad to have this final piece in place at the end of a long road.

"It's amazing we had the perseverance to keep it, there were pressures to sell it to private entity," said Pattison, adding with a laugh, "it was really due to old yankee stubbornness the town was allowed to keep it as it is."

Hagerty Property timeline

- 1902: Edmund Parker (creator of Parker Ave.) sells the land to Manuel Salvador.
- 1912: Salvador sells property to the town for $1, but keeps a right of way so he can offload his fishing boats.
- 1938: Town inks a 50-year lease with Francis Hagerty for the parcel at a cost of $50 per year.
- 1944: Town sells the property to Hagerty Company for $1500. The land was used first as to make parts for PT boats during World War II, then to make rowing shells and, for decades Cohasset Colonial furniture kits.
- 1993: Town buys the 2.5-acre land from Cohasset Colonials for $470,000. After tearing down the warehouse buildings, the town was left with two buildings on the property: the boathouse and the Hagerty House.
- 1994: The Cohasset Maritime Institute is charged as custodian for the boathouse.
- 1998: The town leases the Hagerty House to the Lobster Lab.
- 2002: Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research opens at the Hagerty House.
- 2008: Town places a sign naming the park "Mariner's Landing."

COURTESY PHOTO

What is now the Cohasset Maritime Institute boathouse has been a fixture on the property for years. But, the land around it has changed. This week, members of the Hagerty Committee completed their 15-year work with the installation of a sign naming the area "Mariner's Park."

COURTESY PHOTO

The Mariner's Landing park at the end of Parker Avenue has changed dramatically over the last 15 years, as seen from this photo taken in 1993. Where once corrugated metal warehouse occupied the land is now a waterfront park, with parking, a boat ramp, and pier.

Planning Board takes first crack at village design

Jennings said well-stated guiding principles — essentially a vision statement for village design — would make it easier to develop the design guidelines. The final draft of the design guidelines will include both text and graphics to illustrate what the town is looking for in design. Both building structure and site considerations are addressed.

Planning Board member Clark Brewer would like to see specific examples of the design the board is looking for illustrated, even if the examples aren't pulled from Cohasset.

"I think we need to be very specific on what we expect or want to change on a small scale," said Brewer citing façade improvements, interior lighting and awnings as examples. "(As well as) show examples of what are considered successful large projects in similar communities and explain why they are successful."

Ivimey asked the board if there was a clearly articulated vision for the village, although the board or its individual members might know what they want to see, they would need to convey that to the applicants without being too restrictive.

"Are we looking for a continuation of different architectural styles?" said Ivimey.

"Each building in a sense has its own personality," said Brewer, adding he would like to see where the buildings reflect each other's architecture, but don't match. Brewer cited Boston's Newbury Street as an example where brick is used as a basic building material but in many different ways.

Former Planning Board member Bill Good said sometimes one common theme tying the district together can make different architectures look uniform, offering a tree-lined brick sidewalk as an example.

"What is uniform in a New England village is there is no uniformity," said Jennings. That being said, he advised the board to try to be as clear as possible in the document to allow the board to point to specific design issues if an applicant comes forth with something that doesn't fit.

The vision that came along with the village bylaw amendments was to create a framework for a mixed-use (retail and residential), pedestrian friendly and economically stable business center. The Planning Board wanted to encourage growth and development in a "good way" in order to keep the charm of the village while maximizing its potential.

Unlike the zoning bylaws, which can only be amended by a vote at Town Meeting, the design guidelines are adopted and changed by the Planning Board. The design guidelines complement the zoning bylaw with a regulatory framework to define the public objectives for site and building design. The document is only applicable to property within the Village Business District.

Property owners weigh in Property owners in the audience weighed in on some aspects of the draft design guidelines from minor language tweaks to suggestions on creating a "second Main Street" on Parking Way.

Property owners on Parking Way indicated they would like to see the town come forth with an infrastructure plan for sidewalks, lighting and other considerations for what is envisioned to become a pedestrian friendly second Main Street façade.

"Without (a plan) we are going at it on our own. There is no guidance as to what would work and be good for that area," said Wayne Sawchuk, owner of 35-39 South Main Street.

Good agreed, "I don't think it is something you can leave to chance," and hope the property owners cooperate.

The Planning Board is encouraging developers to come before them for preliminary and informal discussions on their plans as they draft them.

"Our door is open," said Ivimey, adding the re-constituted Design Review Board should serve as an asset to both the Planning Board and the applicants.

"It's a nice opportunity for the Design Review Board, now especially, to have some input and opportunity to offer constructive suggestions to (village) projects. We want the developers to get us involved early," said Bill Good, a former Planning Board member who by speaking at Town Meeting helped to save the Design Review Board from extinction. In the past, Good said the Design Review Board was invaluable to the board and town to help make project throughout town better. "Now more than ever we can be of service."

Ivimey said he appreciated the property owners and developer input as they move through the process.

The design guidelines will be discussed again at a Planning Board meeting in August. Call the Planning Board office at 781-383-3517 for date and time.

HAPPY FOURTH

Happy 4th of July Cohasset! I hope that everyone has some fun-filled plans for the weekend. Make sure to make some smart, safe choices with all that you do and enjoy all of the moments of the weekend whether big or small.

TOPS AT NDA

Ed and Janeen Culhane wanted us to know how proud (and rightfully so) they are of their daughter, Courtney.

Courtney finished out all four semesters of her sophomore year at Notre Dame Academy on the President's List, which is the highest academic honors you can achieve at NDA, while taking all Honors classes. She received the Coaches Award for Cross Country and the History Award for the highest average in her Modern European History class. She enjoyed playing JV Ice Hockey for NDA as well. Courtney will be traveling through Ireland this summer — visiting Trinity University in Dublin.

Courtney, these are all wonderful accomplishments and what a great summer you will have. Please let us know when you come home all about it. Congratulations!

AUSTRALIA

Charlotte Sida (CHS class '06), a student at Fairfield University, will be bidding farewell to sunny Cohasset to spend a semester at the University of Melbourne in Australia. She will be studying Environmental Sciences as well as Economics.

Charlotte will miss all her friends and family, but is excited about her new adventure! It will be winter down-under, so not much time to work on her tan as she leaves on Sunday 13th July and won't be back until December first...wish her Luck if you see her before she leaves!

BELT BUCKLE

Here is some fun news to write about and share with our community. Nicholas Ryan walked away with a belt buckle this past Saturday night for winning the calf scramble at the New England Wild West Fest that featured the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association competition (PRCA) and the Spirit of the American Cowboy Foundation. The Foundation helps in the fight of childhood cancer. The 3-day event was held at the Marshfield Fairgrounds. Nicholas is a member of the Weir River Farm 4-H club. Nice work Nicholas, this must have been a super event to attend and have so much fun.

ITALY

Ciao! Adam Yeager is in Florence, Italy for the summer taking an Acting for Film class with The New York Film Academy. Doug and Kathy Yeager are so proud and excited. And we, as a community, cannot wait to hear all about this learning, educational and fun summer, let us know all about it, Adam!

ACHIEVER

At a special ceremony held last week at the Massachusetts State House, Comcast honored 121 graduating high school seniors from across the Commonwealth who have won a helping hand for college in the form of $1,000 scholarships from the Comcast Foundation. Local Comcast Leaders and Achievers Scholarship winners included Cohasset Middle High School student Juliette Karp.

The Comcast Leaders and Achievers Scholarship Program, one of the Comcast Foundation's signature community investment programs, annually recognizes students who have demonstrated leadership skills, academic achievement and a commitment to community service.

"As the cost of college continues to rise, Comcast is proud to honor Juliette and her fellow recipients with the Comcast Leaders and Achievers Scholarship in recognition of their hard work, leadership and commitment to their communities," said Tom Coughlin, Vice President of Comcast in Southeastern Massachusetts. "These students represent our future leaders and they embody Comcast's belief in giving back to the communities where we live and work."

A commitment to community service is an essential component in the selection of Comcast Leaders and Achievers Scholarship recipients. This year's honorees have participated in a wide variety of community service activities, such as helping to revitalize communities as part of mission work, mentoring and coaching younger students, volunteering at hospitals and participating in local blood, food and clothing drives. Community organizations throughout Massachusetts, including Habitat for Humanity, Special Olympics, Project Bread's Walk for Hunger and Rosie's Place, have benefited from the service and leadership of this year's recipients.

Each year, Comcast works with high school principals, guidance counselors and school administrators to select the scholarship recipients.

FITCHBURG STATE

President Robert V. Antonucci of Fitchburg State College has announced the names of area students included on the dean's list for the spring semester. Jeremy R. Simms from Cohasset was placed on the list for the Spring semester of 2008. Congratulations.

GORDON COLLEGE

Amanda C. Thompson, daughter of Raymond and Susanne Thompson, and Jessica Wheelwright, daughter of Caren and Frank Wheelwright, were honored at the Spring 2008 Honors Convocation at Gordon College for making the dean's list. To qualify for the dean's list at Gordon a student must carry at least 12 credits for the term and have a grade-point average of 3.50 to 3.74 – with no grade below C.

Amanda is majoring in communication arts at Gordon. In addition to academics, Amanda worked with Young Life, played Ultimate Frisbee with the REC-IM program, and published her second teen lit novel, "Season." She graduated from Cohasset High School in 2007.

Jessica is majoring in youth ministry and French at Gordon. In addition to academics, Jessica plays lacrosse and will be traveling to Senegal on a short-term missions trip this summer. Jessica graduated from Cohasset High School in 2006.

Antique kayak finds new life

CHS students restore boat

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

From the shelves of Abercrombie and Fitch to a lake in North Germany to the rafters of the Cohasset Yacht Club, it is fair to say a kayak, which now calls Cohasset Maritime Institute its home, is well traveled. A circa 1930s kayak has recently been restored by three Cohasset High students as part of their community service class.

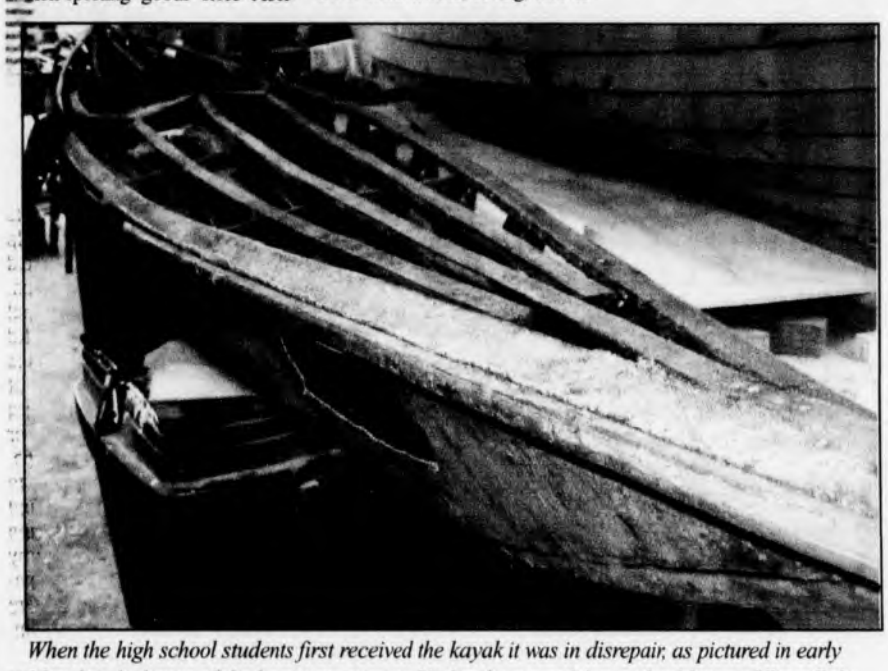
Steve Bobo, a member of the Board of Directors for the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, supervised the group of young boat builders as they restored the kayak to its former luster.

The story of the kayak involves the Red Lion Inn, the Yacht Club, and noted architects Bulfinch and Shepley.

According to Bobo, work for architects during the Depression of the 1930s was hard to come by and as a result, Boston-based architects Bulfinch and Shepley built kayaks and sold them to the then-sporting goods store Abercrombie and Fitch. The owner of the Red Lion Inn Gerd Ordelheide's father purchased one of those kayaks. The kayak was used in the pre-World War II era at a boat club on a lake in North Germany.

Much later in the kayak's life it was given to the yacht club by Ordelheide, but the kayak was stowed in the rafters unused for about six years.

Bobo was able to discover the boat's history and origins through conversation with Ordelheide and a former employee of Bulfinch Shepley, who had some of the old kayak design plans.



A member of the yacht club cleaning out the club attic put the boat in Bobo's car and it subsequently became the boat restoration project for three high school students — Mike Grimm, Tom Lemaire and Sam Roth.

"It's 80 years old and still in perfect condition, it is as solid as a rock," said Bobo. Although the bones of the boat were solid, it did need some tender, loving, care to make it sea-worthy again.

COURTESY PHOTOS

After weeks of work, the restored antique kayak was launched into the harbor on June 19. CHS graduated seniors Mike Grimm and Sam Roth push off from shore in the yellow and blue kayak christened "Zapp."

When the high school students first received the kayak it was in disrepair, as pictured in early May, but the bones of the boat were strong. Under the supervision and guidance of Steve Bobo the students replaced a few of the wooden planks from the frame that were beyond repair, put a new canvas seal over the kayak and fresh paint on the hull.

As part of their community service class, the students agreed to restore the kayak. When they first got a look at it was just a wooden frame, said Grimm. By the end, the kayak was ready for action on the water.

The three-man crew led by Bobo worked on the kayak three to four times a week during the spring about an hour each time (the length of a class). The students were also working on a restoring a 26-ft World War II Monomoy lifeboat at the Cohasset Maritime Institute building.

Bobo, who had experience in restoring boats and boatbuilding, lent his knowledge and his boathouse to the project.

They replaced a few of the wooden planks from the frame that were beyond repair, put a new canvas seal over the kayak and fresh paint on the hull. The kayak was restored to its original luster, right down to the bold original colors of yellow and blue. At 40 pounds, the kayak is lighter than many modern models.

For Grimm, who graduated from Cohasset High last month, the project was an extension on previous courses he took on furniture design and woodworking.

"It's not something you typically get in a high school class. It was nice to get away from books and work with my hands for a little bit," said Grimm.

The name of the boat is Zapp, also the name of other Ordelheide boats. The official launch of the kayak took place on June 19 at the Parker Avenue boat ramp. The students, as well as Bobo, tried out the kayak in the harbor.

"It floated," said Grimm.

With such a history, Bobo is hoping the boat will be used throughout the summer and then placed on display at the Cohasset Maritime Museum.

Where has the kayak been?

- Built in Boston by architects Bulfinch and Shepley.
- Sold to New York-based sporting goods store Abercrombie & Fitch.
- Bought by owner of the Red Lion Inn Gerd Ordelheide's father in the 1930s.
- Used at a lake boat club in North Germany before WWII.
- Decades later, it was given to the Cohasset Yacht Club where it sat in the rafters for years.
- Discovered by Cohasset High students this spring and restored to its original condition.
- Now housed at the Cohasset Maritime Institute for the summer.
- After the summer, it will be stored at the Cohasset Maritime Museum.

Cohasset Stop & Shop raises funds to help kids fight cancer

Just one month after launching the Triple Winner Game, Stop & Shop's annual campaign to raise funds for research and treatment of pediatric cancer at the Stop & Shop Family Pediatric Brain Tumor Clinic at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, the Cohasset Stop & Shop store has already raised $7,627 to support this effort. This contributes to the $1.4 million the chain has already collected in this year's campaign.

Triple Winner is a scratch card promotion in which every ticket could be an instant winner, offering prizes of a free product, gift certificate or cash prize up to $10,000. Throughout the summer, customers who donate $1 to fight pediatric cancer will receive a Triple Winner Game ticket at the checkout.

The Triple Winner Game has raised more than $43 million to fight pediatric cancer at The Jimmy Fund, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center and the Children's Cancer Foundation. This is the 18th year of Stop & Shop's support for Triple Winner.

Working together, Stop & Shop associates hope to raise $2.5 million for the Stop & Shop Family Pediatric Brain Tumor Clinic at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and won't rest until a cure for childhood cancer is found. Store associates in Cohasset are still taking donations and have more Triple Winner Game tickets to give to customers.

fundraiser for JDRF in the nation.

"You have moved us closer to the finish line of finding a cure for juvenile diabetes," said Daniels.

With the poor sight conditions on Sandy Beach Sunday morning, race organizers and safety personnel had to alter the swim course.

"The fog presented a bit of a challenge," said Burnett for both race organizers and swimmers. When it was clear the fog wasn't going to dissipate any time soon, the race organizers along with public safety officials, made the decision to shorten the swim leg by moving the swim buoys closer to shore to ensure the swimmers could be seen from the beach. However, with the buoys set just beyond the breaking waves, swimmers had to contend with more cross currents as well as rolling and breaking waves.

Adjustments were also made to the timing where athletes entered the water. The water start was staggered in eight waves, or heats, each with about 100 participants. Each wave was scheduled to be about five minutes apart. Due to the fog, Burnett stayed in communication with others along the beach, waited until nearly all the swimmers passed the second buoy of the course before starting the next wave.

"I told the athletes it was like an airport delay due to fog," said Burnett. Kayakers and powerboats monitored the swim course while lifeguards stood watch from the shore.

An elite field of triathletes competed in the event of competition. Destined for Beijing this August, Jarrod Shoemaker easily finished the race well ahead of the competition with a time of 50 minutes and 43 seconds.

He thanked the volunteers, Burnett and race organizers for what he called an "awesome course." His only complaint?

"I wish the fog could have moved out a little bit so we could have had a longer swim," said Shoemaker at the post-race ceremony.

The red group athletes enter the ocean for the first time as their triathlon gets under way. For more photos, see page 14.

Burnett said his e-mail inbox was flooded with messages this week from race participants from both elite triathletes and those who successfully competed in their first (but not last) triathlon.

Burnett found it difficult to put into words what he felt when he looked out from the stage at the hundreds who had stuck around for the post-race ceremony.

"That was the point when all the hard work, all the passion, all the details just came together," said Burnett. "It was so cool from my vantage point...that was the point where I was most proud of the event."

And plans for the third annual Cohasset Triathlon?

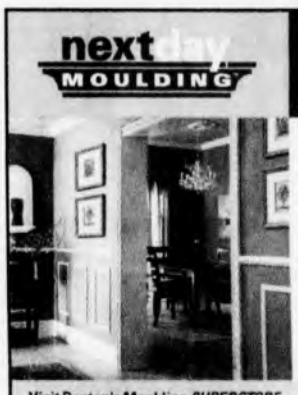
"It's already started," said Burnett with a laugh.

For race results, see this week's sports section.

Team Lyons

Each athlete was inspiring in his or her own way, each one out to challenge his or her physical limitations and endurance. But, one in particular, showed extraordinary strength and courage when she crossed the finish line. Karen Lyons, the widow of Joe Lyons who died competing in the triathlon last year, not only completed the race in honor of him, but also raised more than $60,000 for the JDRF.

Team Lyons, a group of 52 family members and friends, completed the race in tribute to Joe. At the post-race ceremony, clad in matching green t-shirts with the phrase, "we will finish what you started," Team Lyons stood on stage.



"We finished the race today, but I don't think we ever really finish what anybody starts. I think we just keep walking the path," said Lyons, calling Joe "her partner in life and her inspiration forever."

"We've turned something that was really a tragic event to something that's really great," said Lyons. Over the past year, she has turned to her team for support over. In an emotional moment, she thanked her eight-year-old son, Sam, who has juvenile diabetes, for his strength.

When Lyons crossed the finish line, she was met with a roaring cheer from bystanders, and greeted foremost by Sam. With a smile on her face, she received congratulatory hugs and posed for photos.

Freedom to do right

"America is great because it is good."

As we approach the Fourth of July, this red, white, and blue day of sparklers, field days, and cookouts, let's celebrate the day by celebrating the principles of democracy and freedom on which our country was founded.

These are the principles, stated in the Declaration of Independence, that make this country great.

Historians have said we are the only nation ever founded on a creed.

Back in the 1800s, when the United States was a political novelty on the world scene, a brilliant French historian and statesman, Alexis de Tocqueville, toured this country to find out what this young democracy was all about.

In 1831 and 1832, he visited factories, schools, stores, prisons, and farms, seeking the secret of the fledgling democracy's success. And he visited our places of worship.

It was there in the sanctuary he realized that the spiritual values reflected in the founding of our country were the source of America's greatness.

It wasn't the busy factories or the expansion toward the fertile West Coast that made the country great.

"America is great because it is good," de Tocqueville wrote in "Democracy in America." His opus became a world classic.

Over the decades, American has always stood tallest when standing up for liberty and justice.

Over the decades, we pondered just what freedom meant.

It didn't mean the right to do anything one pleased. Liberty is not license, it is not acting without restraint, one writer penned. As the old saying goes, "You're right to swing ends where my nose begins."

Freedom means the right to free speech and your own opinion. It is certainly not a following-the-herd mentality.

Howard Fineman, an award-winning reporter, writer, and news analyst, says in his book, "The Thirteen American Arguments," that it is actually the ongoing disagreement over basic issues that fuels our democracy.

"We are the Arguing Country, born in, and born to, debate. The habit of doing so – the urgent, almost neurotic need to do so – makes us unique and gives us our freedom, creativity, and strength," Fineman wrote.

Fineman identifies 13 issues that have kept us arguing for 400 years, including the issues of who is a person (What about human embryos and "unlawful enemy combatants?"), who is an American ("Terrorists are at large in the world and twelve million 'undocumented' aliens are in the country"), the role of faith ("Where does God fit in government?"), presidential power ("How much power should a president have?"), and our role in the world (Do we have "a moral obligation to change the world?").

There is a banner caveat flying over these debates:

Freedom makes the distinction between how we choose to think and how we choose to act.

"Freedom is the right to be wrong, not to do wrong," advised John Diefenbaker, Canadian prime minister from 1957 to 1963.

When we consider doing right as we consider Independence Day, we need to always keep in mind that the price of liberty is eternal vigilance. We need to always remember our servicemen and servicewomen who are eternally on guard to fend off attacks on our freedom.

We need to do right by our troops who are at this moment fighting, putting their lives on the line, to defend our country.

As we ooh and ahh over fireworks splashing against a velvet night sky, they fight under the rocket's red glare.

Former President Woodrow Wilson's once said: "Our flag is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a nation."

Our unity comes from dedication to the principles of democracy, justice, and freedom.

Our power lies in holding true to the creed on which our nation was founded.

Our thought, the conscientious deliberations of a mind that chooses to educate itself, is the fuel that keeps our democracy going. Recall that democracy depends on 51 percent of the people being right 51 percent of the time.

Our purpose as a nation?

That's up to you.

If we base our purpose on the desire to do right by our country and by our world, guided by the principles laid out by our Founding Fathers, we will be navigating our Ship of State on the right course.

This is what makes us great.

Let freedom ring.

Thornton thinks the Cohasset Tri is nine holes in the morning, lunch with the Old Goats and sitting on the yacht club porch rocker in the afternoon.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Quigley responds to Connolly's letter

TO THE EDITOR:

To the Citizens of Cohasset:

The charges made against me by John Connolly in a letter to the editor published in last week's Mariner are blatantly untrue and unworthy of further mention except to note Mr. Connolly's personal and vested interest in the outcome of the Sandy Cove/Treat's Pond issue which may very well have served as motivation for his transparent attempt to silence and remove an opposing view from the Board of Selectmen.

Rather than ask you to rely on my protestation, below is Town Counsel's ruling on the merits, or rather the lack thereof, of Mr. Connolly's demand for my recusal. That having been said, both my detailed response to Mr. Connolly's formal complaint and Town Counsel's ruling are public documents. I urge interested individuals to obtain copies either from the Town Manager's Office or from me.

"We have reviewed that complaint...from the perspective of whether the complaint when viewed against the General Laws of the Commonwealth require you to recuse yourself as a Selectman for the Sandy Cove/Treat's Pond matter. We answer that question in the negative, NO."

"The...standards of conduct do not prohibit a selectman from advocating for longstanding positions...the Complaint alleges that your longstanding beliefs are similarly held by...a group of other Cohasset residents who have views...with which views the author disagrees...This aspect of the Complaint...is also insufficient to establish a legal requirement for you to recuse yourself.

We don't see anything undue or improper for you to have views that are similar to other like minded citizens...Indeed, part of the function of a Selectman is to have views and to represent on the Board of Selectmen the views of other residents of the town, particularly in this general policy type of issue..."

Contrary to Mr. Connolly's claim, my sole agenda in this matter is to identify an effective solution to the Atlantic Avenue stormwater flooding that does not negatively and/or unduly impact the environment, private-property owners, and the Town's limited financial resources.

It is unfortunate that such self-serving and misguided attacks divert the Selectmen's attention from focusing on the many important issues facing Cohasset.

Please contact me with any questions, concerns and comments you may have in regard to this matter.

Dismayed by level of acrimony

TO THE EDITOR:

The juxtaposition of Ms. White's article "Treats Pond Gets Personal" on Jim Drysdale's "personal attack" on Ralph Dormitzer at last weeks Selectman's meeting and Mr. Connolly's letter to the editor excoriating Karen Quigley for possessing a "long-standing agenda" is ironic on a few levels. First, the personal attack in this instance must be defined as a verbal inquisition that resulted in an uncomfortable irritation. If, as the article states, the preservation of wildlife is of extreme importance to the neighbors, then it seems a perfectly logical question to be raised.

On the other hand, Mr. Connolly's written references to Ms. Quigley's "using her influence inappropriately to advance her long-standing position" and calling on Ms. Quigley to "cease abusing her position" must not rise to the level of personal attack because it rests comfortably, in print, on the Opinion page of this newspaper. Ms. Quigley's actions, that dare to question the financial wisdom of spending millions when spending thousands may be better for the pond, the neighborhood flooding problem, and the town, have been politically branded an "agenda" by those who refuse to consider more than one solution to the Treat's Pond issue. Had those who attended the Treats Pond meeting a few weeks ago stayed long enough to listen to Mr. Drysdale's presentation, instead of leaving as he approached the podium, they might have seen the merits of such a plan or at the very least participated in an informed debate. Is this open mindedness also part of Ms. Quigley's agenda?

Although, I have not agreed with Karen Quigley on all topics, I do not question her integrity. If forced to reduce her public service to an "agenda," I would do so as follows.

Karen Quigley values and works tirelessly:

• Protecting the Harbor, the wetlands, and open space; three of the most valuable natural resources in the town of Cohasset.

• Representing the townspeople whose voices are lost or opinions dismissed in the political conversation.

• To promote fiscal responsibility and eliminate wasteful spending.

• To re-instate long lost transparency to Cohasset politics.

I believe fixing the flooding issues on Atlantic Avenue is as important as those in other neighborhoods around Cohasset. I also believe that we must protect the environment as we address these problems and minimize the town's financial burden wherever and whenever possible. I am dismayed by the increasing level of acrimony that shifts the focus away from the core issues, delaying their resolution.

JDRF grateful to triathlon

TO THE EDITOR:

We would like to thank Bill Burnett, his amazing team, and every volunteer who worked so hard to make the Cohasset Triathlon a huge success again this year. We and the families of kids all over who live with Type 1 diabetes are especially grateful for the huge heart that Bill and the team showed in making the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation such a focus of this year's event.

At every turn, Bill made JDRF the main focus of all PR and advertising for the Tri, he worked tirelessly to secure sponsors like Dunkin' Donuts and Nike, and pushed all triathletes to raise money for JDRF through their fundraising pages.

Bill set the extraordinary goal of raising $100,000 for JDRF this year, and at the time of this printing, the total raised is $260,000 and still climbing! It is a true testament to the power of one person to make a difference and an enormous impact on peoples' lives. It also says a tremendous amount about the character and commitment of the people of this town that so many chose to help make it happen by donating their time and effort to this event for Bill and for JDRF.

Bill, Sigrid, Cohasset Tri team, and volunteers, we thank you and we are proud to know such an amazing group of people.

Route 3A, Greenbush, Little Harbor updates

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

More Greenbush work on Route 3A — We had a chance to speak with CBB's superintendent for this part of the Greenbush Project. The contractor is excavating along the side of Route 3A in preparation for constructing a sub-base for the added roadway lanes. Shortly they will begin to add drainage pipes that will be used to gather storm water along the new edge of the road. Some of these pipes will need to be laid across existing driveways and Crocker Lane. As a result, there will be some interruption on these side ways. We conveyed to CBB that our major concern is Crocker Lane that services the medical building, Graham Waste commercial vehicles, the State Highway Garage and a diesel repair facility. Crocker Lane can get very busy at times. They will probably close one half of Crocker Lane at a time so that vehicles can still have full access.

The new drainage in the street should be completed around the week of July 16th.

Cohasset's newest bike path — Projects make strange bedfellows. We've mentioned this before, but it bears repeating. The Mass. Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) had title to a small section of the Greenbush right of way that included a spur that used to run from the main line across Route 3A into Wompatuck Park. The MBTA needed a part of this right of way for its project. As a quid pro quo, the DCR essentially gave the spur to the MBTA in exchange for the MBTA constructing a bike/walking path from the station, across Route 3A 1.5 miles into Wompatuck park.

Recently, CBB has nearly completed the pathway. The only item remaining is a removable bollard at the entranceway that will bloc vehicles from the path. Only emergency vehicles will have keys to unlock and remove the bollard for access to the path.

Other Greenbush stuff – Hallelujah! We have just heard that the MBTA will start work on the reconfiguration of the North Main Street crossing will start around the end of July and be complete near Labor Day. This work will consist of extending the traffic island beyond the Woodside Cemetery entrance, which will require N. Main Street to be widened and some of the railroad signals will be relocated. The entrance to Woodside will be reconfigured. And lastly, jug handle shaped bike paths will be constructed so that bikes can cross the tracks at a better angle. We still are getting reports of bike accidents at this treacherous crossing. Hopefully, these should disappear after this construction is complete.

Little Harbor Project – As we mentioned, paving is just around the corner for some streets in the Little Harbor Project area. One of the first streets on the list is Deep Run. This should start in the next two weeks. The reason that the schedule is not precise is that there is a small leak in the new sewer line that has been very pesky to find. We mentioned last week that they have been using helium to trace the leaks. As of Tuesday, noon, this leak had not been precisely located. Further some new catch basins need to be completed. We expect this work to be completed in the next few days so that base paving can commence. We'll keep you posted.

Declaring independence

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The Declaration of Independence may have been written by a Virginian in Philadelphia, but it has the fingerprints of Massachusetts all over it, particularly those from the South Shore of Massachusetts.

Delegates from the towns and districts of Suffolk County met in Woodward's Tavern in Dedham as early as Sept. 9, 1774, to pass a series of resolutions which became known as the Suffolk Resolves.

No, they didn't declare Suffolk County independent, but they did the next best thing.

"That it be recommended," said the key article, "to the collector of taxes, constables, and all other officers, who have public monies in their hands, to retain the same, and not to make any payment thereof to the provincial county treasurer until the civil government of the province is placed upon a constitutional foundation, or until it should be otherwise ordered by the proposed provincial Congress."

Paul Revere, that tireless messenger of revolution, was summoned to carry the Resolves to Philadelphia where the first Continental Congress endorsed them.

"This was one of the happiest days of my life," wrote John Adams, the delegate from Braintree. "In Congress we had generous, noble sentiments, and manly eloquence. This day convinced me that America will support Massachusetts or perish with her."

Nearly two years later, when Congress was again in heated debate over independence, Massachusetts stepped in once more, asking each Town Meeting for a vote to tell the Continental Congress to quit fooling around and declare the colonies independent.

The Freemen of Scituate responded on June 4, 1776, instructing Nathan Cushing, their representative in the General Assembly, to inform Congress that "should (it) think fit to declare the Colonies Independent of Great Britain, of our readiness and determination to assist with our Lives and Fortunes in Support of that, we apprehend, necessary measure."

The Freemen waxed eloquent in their declaration.

"The Ministry of that Kingdom (Britain), having formed a design of Subjecting the Colonies to a distant, external and absolute power in all Cases whatsoever, wherein the Colonies have not, nor in the nature of things can have any share by Representation, have, for a course of years past, exerted their utmost Arts and Endeavours to put the same plan, so destructive to both Countries, into Execution.

"But finding it, through the noble and virtuous opposition of the Sons of Freedom, impracticable by means of mere political Artifice and Corruption, they have at length had a fatal Recourse to a Standing Army, so repugnant to the nature of a free Government, to fire and Sword, to Bloodshed and Devastation, calling on the aid of foreign Troops, as well as endeavouring to stir up the Savages of the wilderness to exercise their barbarities upon us, being determined, by all appearances, if practical, to extirpate the Americans from the face of the Earth. Unless they tamely resign the Rights of humanity, and to repeople this once happy Country with the ready Sons of Vassalage, if such can be found."

Only Thomas Jefferson could have put it better.

Just as the book was getting good...

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

I've got an early submission deadline this week and no ideas, as usual, but as I was walking along Atlantic Avenue this morning I happened to find a few loose pages from one of those "beach novels" that looked interesting. I'll just type them in here verbatim and see if anyone notices.

had taken the kids to Maine for the weekend and left me in charge of our sickly walnut tree behind the garden shed. It was planted by the original owners of our property and had grown purposefully for more than a hundred years before being cursed by our mere presence. Since moving in three years ago we had lost countless trees — old, thick fixtures of beech and elm that seemed to fall into a deep depression the minute we arrived. We watered and fertilized and sang to them for weeks through the autumn but they refused to wake up the next spring, having heard quite enough evidently.

I was determined not to lose our last walnut, if only to prevent the neighbors from considering our family a new strain of blight, so I did what Andrew wouldn't: I broke down and called three arborists. I wanted to interview several candidates and choose the best qualified, just like the old days. Ten years out of the executive pool will do that to you.

The first appointment was at 10 am. At 10:25 a beat-up grey truck rolled into the driveway and a young man got out. Sprang out, I should say, his long, flowing blond hair hurrying to keep up.

"You're Joan." he said, and presented a muscular hand.

"Yes, but you can call me Mrs. Clark," I said. "I hope you're better with trees than you are with clocks."

He looked confused for a moment, recovered quickly and smiled.

"Okay Mrs. Clark, I'm Mr. Williams. But you can call me Benjamin."

"Mr. Williams, are you familiar with nectria canker?"

"Wait, hold on," he said, shaking his head. "Have I got the wrong address? Isn't this one of those paperbacks with a backlit, windswept, half-dressed couple embossed on the cover?"

"No, this book is in the Suburban Mom-Lit section. It's called A Living Room of One's Own."

He stared at me dumbly.

"Anyway," I said, "I'm really just looking for an ISA certified arborist. A competent, reasonably priced professional."

He glanced back at his truck anxiously.

"I bet I could be... more than competent..."

"You know what? The Harlequins live in the faux Victorian across the street. You want to try there?"

"Oh! Yes," he said with enormous relief. "Thank you Joan!" He bounded to his truck and drove off.

"Mrs. Clark," I muttered to myself as a dark-haired gentleman in a cobalt blue Mercedes pulled up and stopped in front of me, right on time for his 10:30 appointment. He smiled and glided out, friendly and cool. His door closed with a "shooomp" sound, like the hatch on a submarine.

"Mrs. Clark," he said, "I have impeccable manners and I'm English, as you can probably tell from my accent."

"Oh, yes," I said. "I figured either English or Scottish."

He coughed quietly and continued.

"I should tell you that I'm not an arborist, but I own an estate in Worcestershire that employs many servants, and I can call my personal arborist here on a moment's notice."

"What!? No, I'm looking for someone local—"

"Rest assured I would cover all of his carriage and boiled meat expenses."

"Why on earth would you do that? It's completely impractical."

"Joan, you're somewhere in the range of 35 to 45, attractive, intelligent. Your life is fulfilling but unromantic. Outwardly you seem to have it all, but in your heart, I am what you want."

"Oh for god's sake, all I want is a tree specialist! Someone who knows about maple decline and verticillium wilt."

"Uh, I know those names are a huge turn-off," he offered.

"Thanks for dropping by," I said.

He sealed himself back inside his sedan, and as he drove off a tap on my shoulder made me jump straight out of my flip-flops. A man in a red helmet stood behind me.

"Sorry to startle you Ms. Clark," he said. "I was a little early, so I looked at your walnut back there, and it's just a bad case of Leaf Blotch. I can clear it up with a Bordeaux mixture."

"At last," I said. "It's you."

I ripped off my bodice as he carried me into the woods, his carabiners and steel core flipline jangling on his climbing harness, the musky smell of the fallen leaves mingling with my Samsara

That's as much as I was able to save from the rising tide. I think the book was just about to get good, though, so if anyone finds the rest of that chapter can they contact me? Thanks.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. Remember that he did mention something about an early submission deadline.

WHAT DEFINES A PATRIOT IN TODAY'S SOCIETY?

Lincoln

Patriot: "one who loves his or her country and supports its authority and interests." Merriam Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, Eleventh Edition

On Dec. 1, 1862, one month to the day before his publication of The Emancipation Proclamation, President Abraham Lincoln presented his Annual Address to the U.S. Congress. I have always considered that speech to be a distillation of Lincoln's tough, idealistic patriotism.

"Fellow-citizens", he said, "we cannot escape history . . . No personal significance, or insignificance, can spare one or another of us. . . . We know how to save the Union . . . We shall nobly save, or meanly lose, the last best hope of earth . . . The way is plain, peaceful, generous".

On that day, Lincoln spoke of preserving the Union through abolishing the national shame of slavery. Eleven months later, on the battlefield at Gettysburg, he continued the theme of preservation by declaring that, "we here highly resolve . . . that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom — and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth".

These familiar words, like flags on the Fourth of July, produce the "tingle up the spine" of patriotism. We have identified with them since childhood. They feel good. Yet perhaps the least-remembered phrase among them is, "plain, peaceful, generous".

At this point in our history we are not "plain", which I also read as "clear". We quibble about such items of "Patriotism" as which public figure does or does not wear American flag jewelry on his/her pantsuit, whether or not our children pledge allegiance to "The Flag" before beginning their school day, or what sort of public displays are patriotically, or politically, correct.

Where did the lines of patriotism, culture, and partisan politics become so muddled? How are we to "love and support" an authority whose interests, unlike Lincoln's, do not align themselves with clarity, peace and generosity?

On this Fourth, I'm having difficulty in defining a personal patriotism.

— Nancy Garrison

Constitution

I believe the core definition of today's Patriot would be someone who defends the constitution of our country, fights for individual rights, and is against government interference in all its forms. A contemporary definition should include anyone who works to make their community, town, or city a better place to live.

— Steve Fusco

Unity

Patriots see their nation as a people and not a place.

When asked to serve, a Patriot asks for whom and not for what.

Patriots seek unity when others hide behind division.

A Patriot sees one not many.

Above all, Patriots love their country as they do their own family, friends and selves.

— Kevin R. McCarthy

Our nation

A patriot puts the well being of our nation ahead of that of other nations. This means that patriots are willing to give of themselves to make our nation better. Patriotism extends far beyond a feeling of love of country to proactively improving our future safety, economy and happiness.

Thanks to the past and present patriots who made life so good for us today.

— Lou Harvey

Unanswerable

It's one of those unanswerable questions. But it reminds us that if Tom Brady could go back in time and date Betsy Ross, that would be so awesome.

— John Lengyel

All patriots

As a kid growing up in Brockton, I was surrounded by aunts and uncles who literally served our Country with commendation literally around the globe in World War II. Each and every one of them never spoke of their experiences. I learned of their contributions from others who served with them. They are all patriots.

Today, while it includes first and foremost the members of our military serving bravely and faithfully around the globe, a patriot for me is someone who selflessly devotes themselves to protecting and improving the welfare of others.

That definition includes those who instruct our children whether in the classroom or the athletic field. It includes our civic leaders, regardless of political affiliation, and our emergency response personnel, police, fire and ambulance. It includes members of clergy, regardless of religious denomination, as they continuously attempt to reset the moral compass in all of us. And it most certainly includes all selfless volunteers, regardless of age, from youth sports coaches to Cohasset High School students who travel to Appalachia to rebuild homes and lives or the BC High students who travel to one of our Nation's poorest/crime ridden cities, Camden, N.J. to work in soup kitchens and food banks and comfort the destitute. These are all patriots in my book.

— Mike Kearney

A vote, a voice

A patriot is guided by conscience. Conscientious objectors who accept roles in combat units as medical corpsman are great examples. Although willingly answering the call to serve in the armed services is our most prevalent image of a patriot; it is not the only way to serve our country. If you believe our country's policies are wrong, it is your patriotic duty to dissent and offer better alternatives.

I believe that all Americans should participate in some form of voluntary service to better the welfare of our citizenry. There are many ways to do this and being a service member is only one of them. To willingly sacrifice your body and/or life to save a fellow human being is the ultimate act of patriotism.

I absolutely reject persons such as Jane Fonda and Joan Baez cavorting and giving aid and comfort to the enemy, demoralizing both prisoners of war and citizens at home. I do accept "my country right or wrong, my country," so long as the citizen(s) actively try to steer the country in the right direction. We all have a vote and a voice

— Joe McElroy, Lt. Col., U.S. Army (Retired)

Teddy Roosevelt

What Teddy Roosevelt said a century ago, is my answer as to what makes a patriot today: "Patriotism means to stand by the country. It does not mean to stand by the President or any other public official save exactly to the degree in which he himself stands by the country. It is patriotic to support him insofar as he efficiently serves the country. It is unpatriotic not to oppose him to the exact extent that by inefficiency or otherwise he fails in his duty to stand by the country."

— Joe Stanganelli

Mankind

I do not limit the definition of a patriot as one who does something good for one's country. I consider someone a patriot who goes beyond normal measures to do something good for mankind without financial or political gain for him or herself.

— Roger Crafts

Selfless

A patriot is someone who selflessly supports their country and seeks for new ways to contribute to its culture and society.

— Emily Toomey

Honor

A patriot is not only a soldier who dies for his country but one who exemplifies honor – honor for his family as well as for his country.

— Riley Calhoun

Work in progress

A Patriot is someone who both cares about his/her country and tries to improve it. We need less saber rattling and flag waving and more self-examination to make this country as good as it can be. The founding fathers understood that our country is a work in progress that often needs refining and redefining.

— Jim Mitterando

Principles

I believe that a Patriot in the United States is a person that firmly stands by the founding principles of our country. "All men are created equal ...endowed with certain unalienable rights to Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness" And..."with Liberty and Justice to all."

— David Replogle

Military

A Patriot is anyone who serves our country in the military, without them we would all be speaking a foreign language!

— Bob Fournier

Freedom

For me personally a Patriot means loving our country and giving tribute to all the people that gave and continue to give their lives in pursuit of establishing freedom for our future.

— Patricia Ashe

Better place

A patriot is someone who not only loves their country but chooses to make it a better place.

— Doyle Calhoun

Duty

A patriot recognizes that it often is the duty of every citizen to make sacrifices for the greater good.

— Andrew Quigley

Greatest good

In today's society I believe that a true patriot must view their love of our country and our countless blessings within the context of our global society. While working to serve and protect our United States of America and its people, I believe that a genuine patriot should strive to lead our country into seeking the highest and greatest good for all countries and all nationalities. We are all brothers and sisters around the globe and a true patriot believes that and his/her actions would demonstrate that belief.

— Susi Coley

Proud

Realizing that — despite all the carping and complaining and politics — there's no better place in the world to live and grow and take a shot at life. Knowing that the baby who is laughing and smiling at you will have opportunities to make the most out of life. Feeling proud that you are part of a place where freedom is more than a word...and protecting it is worth standing up for.

— Guy Conrad

Pearl Harbor

My wife and I were married on the very day of the Pearl Harbor disaster on Dec. 7, 1941. Eleven months later our first son was born, and a month after that, in December 1942, I volunteered to join the Air Force. I never felt like a "patriot" then nor do I now.

I am willing to answer your question to define a "patriot"

- A patriot is born and not made.
- A patriot accepts and executes his/her total jobs when offered or asked.
- A patriot doesn't need nor does he or she wait to be a hailed as a "hero".
- A patriot accepts service to his or her country and performing the responsibility at war as needed.
- A patriot, if in the service, he or she simply executes action as required and when asked.
- A patriot is proud of any contributions that he or she might have made but happier that there is no longer any need for their services in any war situation.

— Lee Cisneros

Values, principles

An American Patriot is someone who understands and respects the values and principles upon which this nation was founded. The patriot realizes that the freedoms we so freely enjoy are not "free" but require responsibility and sometimes the ultimate sacrifice to protect our way of life and continue it for future generations. Today's patriots, like their predecessors, believe in America, have the courage of their convictions and are outraged by the pandering politicians, the educators and the media who are steering our nation off course.

— L. C. Jenkins

Celebrate the good

Mahatma Gandhi was a patriot. But so was Slobodan Milosevic. Ulysses S. Grant and Robert E. Lee were both patriots. Nelson Mandela, Adolph Hitler and Martin Luther King all devoted themselves to country. Support and defense of one's country may be expressed in many ways. Some are thin and hollow, others truly evil.

The best expressions of patriotism are constructive and uplifting. Patriotism at its best celebrates what is good in one's country and sacrifices to protect it, but also acknowledges the country's flaws and strives to perfect it. Like a member of a loving family, the good patriot extends love to other countries, both wishing them well, striving to resolve conflict amicably and seeking to share what is good in each. Patriotism is American, but not just American. Patriotism is motherhood and apple pie ... and pizza... and tacos ... and bagels... and sushi...

— John Chapman

Defended

A patriot is a person who defended his or her country in the armed forces.

— Peter Guild

Love of country

A patriot is someone who loves his or her country enough to do what Jefferson prescribed for good citizenship, namely getting educated with the facts. Enough to praise its policy actions when they deserve praise and to criticize them when they don't live up to proclaimed ideals. Enough to accept the play on a familiar slogan: "my country, right or left". And enough not to need to wear a lapel flag to prove it, or a uniform on state holidays (mine fits me, but not the hat, doubtless signifying a swelled head).

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

For this week's paper, readers were asked: "What defines a patriot in today's society?"

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

HEALTH NOTES

Money sought for brain exercise software

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The software records and saves your results, reporting at intervals on what improvements in brain function you've made.

It seems this is the time for fundraising. We just completed Cohasset's second triathlon with reportedly great success. The Stately Homes tour is in the cards for the Historical society and several other planned events. The Board of Health is also considering a somewhat different type of fundraising campaign. The object of the campaign will be to enable the acquisition of brain exercise software for the Paul Pratt Library and hopefully, at some time in the future, similar programs for the Cohasset Elder Affairs Program.

The BoH already has a small stash of cash from unused payments for inoculations when those who obtain flu shots leave small sums of money to enable us to purchase sufficient vaccines to offer shots to everyone in Town. But this fund is small, in the neighborhood of hundreds of dollars. For the brain exercise evaluation we're going to need in the range of upwards of $10,000 and perhaps, if things work out in the future, more.

The memory programs now being evaluated by the Library have been installed on one of their laptops and are intended to be loaned out to Library patrons like books. The laptop with the brain fitness software has to be "checked-out" and used within the library. Details of the program are now in the planning stage and Library trustees are uncertain about exactly how they would be handled. The programs work as follows: An individual takes out a laptop, which has a Demo program using a sampling of the five or so exercises on the full program. The exercises are similar to those sometimes found in TV or computer action games but provide continuity from session to session. You try an exercise and the Demo keeps score, telling you how well you did on the individual exercises, but it doesn't keep a full record of your performance. The full-scale program requires a commitment of about 40 sessions of about 45 minutes each.

The software records and saves your results, reporting at intervals on what improvements in brain function you've made. Two programs being evaluated are each designed to train different parts of the brain. One emphasizes word and event sounds detected during the process of listening and remembering what was heard. The other deals with what and how rapidly events are recorded and remembered visually. A major benefit from this latter program is for drivers, since it avers to improve rapid recognition skills during driving.

The programs can be likened to the games now invading computers and TVs but with one important difference – they keep meticulous score over many hours of your performance and the improvement of the accuracy and reliability of your brain's behavior. Basically, three trends are measured which, during aging, begin to affect brain function which, over time, affect our memory, thinking and focus. They include: Speed: Over time, the brain begins to miss details, making it more difficult to react to and remember what you saw or heard. Accuracy: The brain's neural pathways often become distorted. When the brain records the static along with the important sensory information, memories are fuzzier and more difficult to process in higher cognitive functions. Recording: The brain uses chemicals called neuromodulators to determine what information is important. A deficit of neuromodulators hinders the ability to learn and remember. The brain fitness program collects, analyzes and stores data from up to 40 sessions and reports back to the user his progress in achieving better brain function.

Among all the fundraising activities might there even be someone who could offer a sum of money directed to the Paul Pratt Library for brain fitness exercises which would match equal contributions of the less well-fixed donors? The sum would go to paying for the sustaining use of brain exercise programs, scientifically proved to improve the memory of individuals from 30 to the age of senescence. It should be emphasized that although cognitive brain function therapy is a new field, the potential benefits are enormous considering the increasing size of the aging population.

It's certain that of those attending the various fundraising events, many would have welcomed a better command of memory of the guests names they were called to remember.

Steve Bobo is a long time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Bringing the community together

TO THE EDITOR:

What a day! Our town played host to a remarkable event this weekend. I am so proud of our town and everyone who helped make this a first class event. From the 150 volunteers who helped on race day to the hundreds residents cheering on the streets, we have collectively made the Cohasset Triathlon a premier sprint triathlon in the region. As Kim Webster, third place finisher among the female elites put it: "(The Cohasset Triathlon) will be the most competitive New England race I will compete in all season." Janda Ricci-Munn, ranked nationally in the sport wrote in an email yesterday, "that was, hands down, the best short course event that I've ever been to." It's exciting to see that in just two short years, we, as a community, have put the Cohasset Triathlon on the race circuit map.

We can also be proud that the Triathlon has become the number one volunteer driven fundraising event for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) in the country! With $265,000 delivered (at press time) to JDRF we can feel a strong sense of giving back to an organization that is working to find a cure for Type 1 juvenile diabetes. On the local level, the Triathlon team plans to financially support the Cohasset Educational Foundation and Sandy Beach Association this year.

There are countless number of people to thank for their time and commitment to ensure that we pull this event off in top notch form. Huge kudos goes to my team: Sigrid Burnett, Bill Burnett Sr, Suzy Doherty, Des Havlicek, Matthew Herndon, Mike Hughes, Joe Mahoney, Catherine O'Callaghan, Kari O'Donnell, Donald St. Sauveur, Kate Simmons, Deb Thomas, and Steve Upson. I am particularly thankful for the incredible work of Chief Silvia, Chief Hussey, Lt. Quigley, Lt. Dockray, and Harbormaster Gibbons who spent hours designing the medical/safety plan. A big thanks to various town organizations such as the Chamber of Commerce, the Sandy Beach Association, the Music Circus, and the MBTA for their support in the race. Thanks to the Department of Public Works and the Little Harbor road crews who did a phenomenal job to ensure the roads were patched and clear of construction materials. And, finally special thanks to Deb Donahue, Siobhan Lynch, Anthony Everett, and Cal O'Callaghan for their help on race day.

This race is an example of how a simple idea – with some effort and passion behind it – can bring people and a community together to do an incredible thing. I believe each of us has it in us to do the same – try to find it!

Tough to top this year's Tri!

TO THE EDITOR:

This is my first letter to the editor and in the spirit of a triathlon, I thought it would be most appropriate to write from three perspectives: triathlete (never thought I"d write that in my entire life!); resident of Cohasset; and as someone who has been in the sporting event business for the past 15-plus+ years. First and foremost, I want to congratulate Bill Burnett and his entire team on a great race. I will even go out on a limb and call it ""flawless""!

I"ll start with the triathlete perspective…from registration all the way through to the finish on Sunday the whole process was seamless and professionally done. It was organized, the volunteers were terrific and informed…there appeared to be an army of people taking care of everything. Everything was in abundance including the signage, food, water…and the process of dropping off our gear was so smooth, the sponsors were unbelievable….and the pre and post race ceremonies were terrific. Most importantly, there were no surprises even when the weather called for a last minute change to the swim course. There were so many kayaks in the water at the beach, and police on the roads, and directional volunteers. It was as good as it gets as a participant…all we, the participants, had to do was think about our own individual swim, bike and run. And to know that a record amount of money was raised for Juvenile Diabetes made the whole thing even sweeter…

As a resident of Cohasset, I"m going to speak for all Cohasset athletes, when I say how much we appreciated the support of all those standing in their driveways, along the road, at water stops, at the beach and the finish. You might wonder if a few hands clapping on Jerusalem Road can make a difference and I want to make it perfectly clear that they did help!! The cheering, the shouts of encouragement, and most especially, getting sprayed with the garden hose at exactly the time when we were all so ready for some cooling off, was most appreciated. It was a town-wide effort from the volunteers to Cohasset"s own Anthony Everett, who not only emceed, but ran 20ran 20 feet alongside me to help send me off on my run (at a time when I could not actually feel my legs).

Finally, as someone who worked behind the scenes on a triathlon for 5 years I know first hand that putting on a tri is the most complicated process of any sporting event. It takes a huge, coordinated effort of the race director, his Organizing Committee, and the local police, fire, volunteers, residents, sponsors, businesses…it"s the biggest challenge there is in the world of race directing. Bill, his wife Sigrid, and all who played a part in this are to be congratulated. It truly takes a village…

I don"t know how 09 can be better than this…but I"m excited to find out!

Thanks again to all and congratulations to all the athletes…

Upsetting moments on June 29

To the Editor:

June 29 gave me some very upsetting moments. When I attempted to return home after 7 a.m. Mass at St. Anthony's, I went a very roundabout way to get to Linden Drive. My route was 3A, Hull Street, Jerusalem Road. At the corner of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road I was told that I could not go the extra 100 yards until 10:30 a.m. Furthermore when I started out of my car to explain I was rudely told to get back in my car and go up Forest Avenue. The officer was very threatening.

Sooo – back up to 3A, down Sohier with the thought of asking at the police station. As it turned out I could not get through to the Police Station. I called instead and explained the situation. The officer in charge said he would call the officer at the intersection to let me through.

Back up to 3A, Hull Street and Jerusalem Road. I was going about 18 miles per hour in order to be careful of the bikers when one flew by me and told me to get the——off the road. Lovely guest to our town!

At the intersection, the same officer asked if I was a resident. When I said "yes" and that was what I had tried to explain to him previously. He said "Are you trying to threaten me?"

All in all, the situation was very upsetting. A little courtesy from the officer and the participants would have made me think this was a nice event but it may be just too big for Cohasset.

Three acts of kindness

To the Editor:

Last Sunday, when the bikers participating in the Cohasset Triathlon passed my home, I had the pleasure of witnessing three heart-warming events.

At the corner of South Main Street and Mordecai Lincoln Road stood a police officer and a staff member of the race committee directing traffic. When I reached the corner to view the race, about 30 Canada geese suddenly arrived from the marsh and were agitating to cross the road to reach Hunters Pond. The bikers were suddenly approaching. I called to the police officer and his aide: "Quickly – move the geese across the road!" Without hesitation, they did just that. The birds were not hurt and the bikers fortunately were spared a disaster.

Also, standing at the corner was a family – father, mother and two little girls. A biker suddenly approached with a flat tire. The father, observing the problem, offered the competitor his own bike to complete the race. They quickly agreed to meet-up later and the biker happily rode off.

And lastly, I was particularly pleased by the number of bikers who cried out "thank you" to those directing and helping them on their way.

Small town, big hearts

To the Editor:

As I am writing this letter my heart is filled with gratitude for this wonderful and giving community.

On Wednesday, June 11th, we celebrated the first Annual—"Let's Fly A Kite Day." Suzi Corkum's fourth-grade glass from the Deer Hill School joined the seniors for a wonderful intergenerational celebration. (These were the same students who participated in April). Under the guidance of Greg Lamoureau of Sea Side Kites in Nantasket, the students and seniors made kites and then flew them on the Cohasset Common. One 83-year-old senior said in awe —"this was the first time I ever flew a Kite". The kite flying was followed by a delightful picnic for all prepared by Patty Johnson and the Angels. The Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs sponsored this awesome event.

On Thursday, June 12th, the Cohasset Policemen's Association arrived in full force for the second Annual Father's Day Cookout. Early in the morning the police arrived with grills, an abundance of food and smiles that lit up the world. They cooked and served seventy seniors with humor and good will. A highlight of the day was when Chief Hussey introduced all of the officers and told what their job is on the police force. Special thanks go to Cohasset Prosecutor Lisa Matos for organizing this special day. Following lunch, all we treated to a performance of Dave Down, "A Colonial Medicine Show". The seniors love the Cohasset Policemen's Association Cookout.

On June 19th, we received a generous donation from Selectman Karen Quigley, from her campaign account. This money will be used to enable some seniors to participate in fun events

On June 23rd we received a grant of $1000 from the South Shore Play House Associates. This was a wonderful gift and will be used to help us offer a modest stipend to our invaluable Escort Shopping Van Drivers.

On June 25th CEA Board Chairperson Anna Abbruzzese, and myself went to the offices of the Social Service League of Cohasset, where the President of the Social Service League, Marita Carpenter, presented us with a check for $5000 that has been put in a special fund for renovations of a new space. I was thrilled that the League Vice President, Sandy Halverson, was also present. Sandy is the Social Service League liaison to the Board of Cohasset Elder Affairs. She is a wonderful advocate for seniors.

The Director of Marketing for the Golden Living Center of Cohasset, Colleen Kissell, wrote a grant and on July 14th the Administrator, Robert Rego, and Colleen will visit The Senior Center and present us with a check for $1000 to help defray the costs of gas for Senior Transport FY 2009. (New fiscal year 2009 will begin July 1, 2008.)

My heart is filled with gratitude for all of the gifts given to the seniors, and I will end with my favorite thought — Cohasset is a small Town filled with people with very big hearts.

Linda Elworthy
Director of Cohasset Elder Affairs

Healing Field flags may be picked up

Thomas Wigmore of the Sons of the American Legion announces that those who purchased flags for the 2008 Healing Field on display as part of Cohasset's Memorial Day observances may pick them up from 8 to 11 a.m., Saturday (July 12) behind the Paul Pratt Library. Please pull into the parking lot off Sohier Street.

This was the second year, the "Healing Field," was installed at the intersection of Border Street and Summer Street across from Veterans Memorial Park. The striking visual of over 400 waving American flags was meant to honor all servicemen and women who have served, continue to serve and those who have paid the ultimate price to keep America free.

South Shore lacrosse girls jamboree

Blue and White teams end season on high note; Jaffe steps down after successful youth coaching career

The South Shore Lacrosse League brought its girls' jamboree to Cohasset on June 14 and, at all levels, the hometown teams were the squads to beat. In most games on the day, however, the visitors went home unhappy.

At the 15-and-Under level (grades 7 and 8) it was a day of records, superlatives and finales, particularly with the coaching duo of Chuck Jaffe and Jen Palmer – the only coaches to have run teams at this level in the program's seven years – stepping down with the conclusion of the season.

With an unbeaten day, the coaches went out on a high note.

The action started with the Cohasset Blue team – starting a bit shorthanded – facing off against Marshfield. After Marshfield opened the game with two goals, Alison Whelan keyed a Cohasset comeback. First, she and Whitney Jaffe – whose uniforms this season did not have numbers, but rather were the $ (Jaffe) and ¢ (Whelan) signs – got together to make change, working a give-and-go with Whelan finishing the play with her first goal of the game. Whelan then fed Hope Kissick to tie the score, only to see Marshfield answer with two more goals.

Cohasset then took control of the game, with Nicole Hajjar netting a penalty shot, Jaffe scoring her first of the game and then feeding Kissick to give Cohasset a 5-4 lead just before the half.

Jaffe's penalty shot opened the second half scoring and, after two quick Marshfield goals, she gave the home team the lead again. Kissick finished her hat trick to make it a two-goal lead and Whelan disappointed a fired-up Marshfield team when she answered its final goal, ending any comeback hopes. Ellie Tedeschi and Julia Canney led an aggressive defense, Caitlin Mavilia and Isabella Flibotte made key scoops to key the transition, and Stephanie Brierley made five saves in net.

Next it was the White team's chance to play Marshfield; a few of the White team members had helped the Blue team in the first game, but now they had a bigger challenge, in that Marshfield was fired up and the White squad had its unbeaten record to protect.

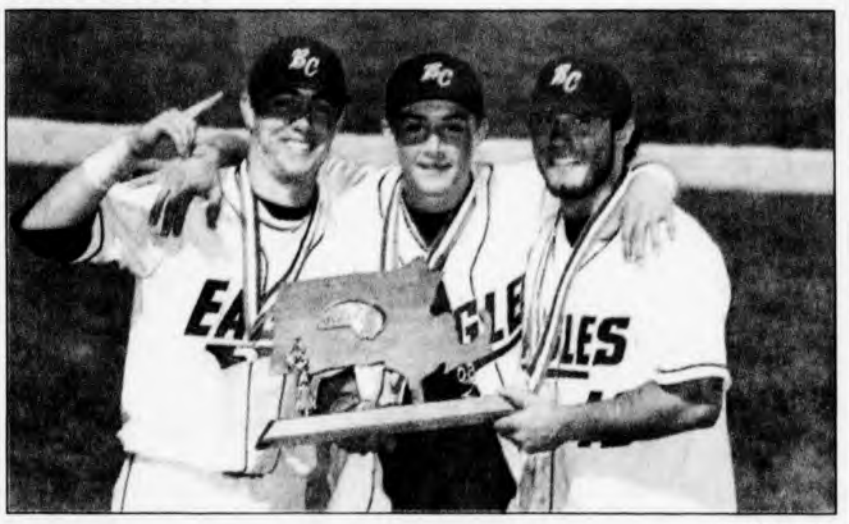
While Marshfield double-teamed Whitney Jaffe throughout the game – as they had in the first contest – Hope Kissick's strong drive to the net drew a slide, and she slipped a slick pass to Jaffe for an easy opening goal. Angela Cipolla's penalty shot and a Kissick goal that was set up by Maria Buckley made the score 3-0. While Marshfield loudly plotted how it would recover from a 3-1 halftime deficit, the Cohasset girls were determined never to let the visitors back in the game. Cipolla combined an aggressive cut and a slick stick fake to convert a feed from Jaffe, and Jaffe scored Cohasset's next two goals, interrupting a Marshfield scoring run each time. When Marshfield drew to within one in the last two minutes, Maria Buckley's dash-and-shoot from behind the net gave Cohasset a two-goal edge; midfielder Kyle Coffman intercepted Marshfield's final possession and made a brilliant play carrying up field and tiptoeing the sideline to kill most of the clock. Stephanie Brierley made five saves to preserve the 7-5 win.

The White team next put its unbeaten season on the line in the first ever girls youth game between Cohasset and Weymouth. The Weymouth Gold team was mostly 7th graders, and while the visitors were game, they were never in the contest.

Cohasset jumped out to a 4-0 then put it on cruise control and eased to a 6-3 lead at the half.

The second-half opened with two milestones in the Cohasset Girls Lacrosse program. Whitney Jaffe scored her 150th career goal – second only to Gabriella Flibotte – and Stephanie Brierley made her 150th career save in the goal, second only to Thomson Jaffe. While the game got a bit scrappy, the Weymouth squad could never get into it, thanks to Brierley's 10-save performance, along with strong defensive help from Eloise Lucas. The half also saw the first lacrosse goal-assist connection by the Farren sisters, with Nicole feeding Amanda for a score; both sisters scored again during the game.

Jaffe led the team with five goals, Kissick added two with an assist, Cipolla continued her career-best day with two goals, Maria Buckley and Jenna Reece had solo markers and Abby Carrier and Cassedy Gwynn notched assists, as Cohasset blew the game open for a 14-5 win.



The Blue team – aided by some sixth-graders who stayed around to flesh out the roster – took on Sandwich in a seesaw affair. Alison Whelan led the way with a hat trick and strong midfield play, Marie Gilman, Nicole Hajjar and sixth-grader Lexa Grasz – playing in her fifth game of the day – had single markers in a back-and-forth affair. Danielle Healy tied the score for Cohasset near the end of the game, and the contest ended in a 7-7 tie.

Hanna Cooper – a 13-and-under playing up due to the absence of Sarah Evans, the Blue team's stalwart goaltending starter – overcame a rocky start to make 6 saves and keep the game close.

The White team's final game of the day and the season was against Weymouth Maroon, a much more physical team than its younger counterparts, and a squad dominated by 8th graders. It didn't make much difference, as the White team was deter-

COASTAL NISSAN salutes the South Shore Athlete of the Month

Norwell High School senior Susan Bitetti, the four-time south sectional girls tennis champion, had made one state individual final, but never won the whole thing. That all changed for the Norwell High senior as she defeated Longmeadow's Rebecca Kimmel in the final, 6-0, 6-0, Saturday, June 14, at Clark University in Worcester. Bitetti ended her NHS career with an impressive 98-4 overall mark.

Coastal Nissan has donated $500 to the Norwell High School Athletic Fund in Susan Bitetti's name.

One last game

Cohasset's Jake Cuneo represents South squad in 30th Annual Shriners Football Classic

By Michael Mancinelli
CORRESPONDENT

For anyone who played high school football in Massachusetts, you know that most football careers end Thanksgiving morning of senior year. If you weren't lucky enough to be on a playoff bound team, what happened on the field that morning stays with you for the rest of your life. If you were one of the lucky kids going to the playoffs, you were probably more concerned with eating turkey than playing football - you just wanted to win the playoff game and advance to the Super Bowl. Many kids who played in the Super Bowl went on to try their luck in college football, but never represented their high school on the gridiron again. If you were one of the most talented players in Massachusetts in your graduating class during the last thirty years, this was not the case. You were blessed and had one last game to finish your high school career.

The 30th Annual Shriners Football Classic was held Friday, June 20 at Bentley College. Every year since 1978, the Aleppo Shriners of Wilmington have given the elite football talent of eastern Massachusetts one last chance to represent their high schools in a North-South all-star game. The Shriners host the game as a very important fundraiser for their care of children in need of orthopedic and burn care.

This year's game saw the North squad break their five-year losing streak to the South with a convincing 19-13 victory.

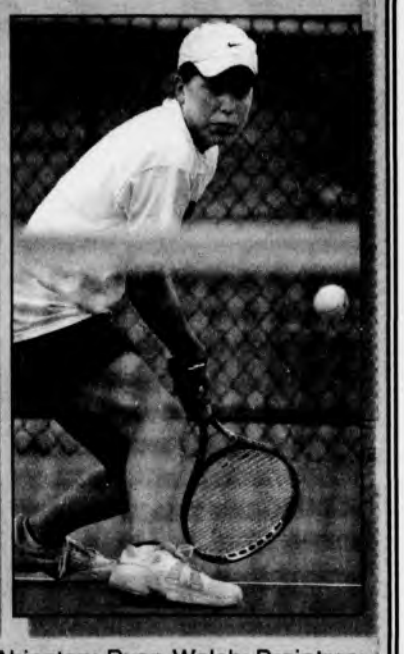
Early in the game, with 8:09 remaining in the first quarter, defensive back Darren Thellan of Brockton High returned an interception 42 yards for a touchdown to give the South squad a 6-0 lead. Thellan will attend UMass-Amherst in the fall. Duke bound West Bridgewater native Paul Asack of Xaverian Brothers missed the point after touchdown kick. Asack missed a field goal from the 28-yard line later in the quarter.

The North squad took a 7-6 lead with 7:45 remaining in the second quarter after a 72-yard touchdown reception by Northeastern bound Jesse Sparks of Cambridge Rindge & Latin from quarterback Tim Rich of Chelmsford. Sparks caught another long pass for a 62-yard touchdown, (only this pass was from quarterback Mike Pierce of Andover), to give the North a 13-6 lead.

The South showed some life with 57.5 seconds remaining in the first half when defensive back Ed Asaley of Newton North High intercepted a North squad pass to end zone. At this point, quarterback Mark Gilson of Mansfield entered the game and broke off a 12-yard run to advance the South to their own 32-yard line. Gilson then completed an eight yard throw to Vaughn Askew of Brockton but was sacked on the next play and fumbled the ball out of bounds to end the first half.

The South kicked off to the North to start the second half. After a three and out series that included an eleven-yard sack, the North was forced to punt. During the south's ensuing drive, Joe Jeudy of Stoughton had a one-yard carry with 9:05 remaining in the third quarter. Jeudy was stuffed at the line of scrimmage on the following play and the South was forced to punt at midfield. On the fourth down punt play, it looked like punter/kicker Paul Asack was going to attempt a fake when he took the long snap and ran towards right tackle with the ball, but decided to perform a quick kick before he crossed the line of scrimmage.

During their next possession, the North continued their aerial attack of the South's secondary and took a 19-6 lead after a Tim Morrison of Billerica touchdown throw to Mark Dwyer of Woburn. Dwyer and Morrison could not hook up for the following two-point conversion.



Bridgewater-Raynham High School's Brett Wyman (attending Brown this fall) returned the North kickoff to 34-yard line setting up the only South scoring drive of the game. The South scored on a 14-yard play action pass from quarterback Tyler Dow of Franklin to Peter Bobseine (south offensive MVP) of Duxbury with 10:52 remaining in the game. The South narrowed their deficit to 19-13 after a Paul Asack extra point. Asack then booted a kickoff deep to the 13-yard line and Elijah Harris of North Attleboro tackled the kick returner. The North and South exchanged possessions until the South intercepted a North pass with 2:22 remaining in the game. The South was unable to capitalize on the turnover however and fumbled on the next play.

The game featured several nationally ranked high school football prospects. North running back Isaac Johnson of Everett will be attending Boston College. North defensive end Nick Halloran of Buckingham Brown & Nicholls will be attending Boston College as well. South tight end Mike Stone of Holliston will also be attending Boston College. Receiver Matt Edwards of Holliston will be attending the University of Connecticut.

Brockton head coach Peter Colombo was the head coach for the South Squad. Dave Woods (the head coach of Bishop Fenwick High School) coached the North. Bridgewater-Raynham athletic director and head football coach Dan Buron was an assistant to South head coach Peter Colombo.

mined to close out the year unbeaten.

Jaffe scored all four Cohasset goals in the first half – one assisted by Kissick – as the team raced to a 4-1 lead. When Jaffe left shortly after halftime to aid the Blue team in its final game, Kissick, Cipolla and Gwynn took over the offense; Cipolla scored two goals, and Kissick and Gwynn each notched a solo goal plus an assist. Brierley's 6 saves quashed all Weymouth hopes in an 8-4 final.

Jaffe scored all four Cohasset goals in the first half – one assisted by Kissick – as the team raced to a 4-1 lead.

At the same time, the Blue team was one field away struggling with a tough Braintree squad and giving fans a look at the future.

Nicole Hajjar opened the scoring and Alison Whelan had a solo marker, but then it was the six-graders – Lexa Grasz with two scores and Molly Fitzgerald with one – who kept the team in the game. Whitney Jaffe arrived from the White team game midway through the second half and finished a Whelan feed to tie the game, and then ended her high-scoring youth lacrosse career by netting the game-winner with just seconds left in the contest.

Sixth-grader Hanna Cooper made 10 saves to preserve the 7-6 win.

The five wins in six games gave coaches Chuck Jaffe and Jennifer Palmer 100 more career wins than losses over the seven seasons since Cohasset girls first fielded teams. In all, they coached 21 different youth teams – coaching as many as four spread over two age levels in a single year – and finished 142-40-16. Jaffe's coaching tenure – including his six years running the boys program – included 210 wins and 21 ties in more than 300 games.

Whitney Jaffe finished the season with 76 points on 67 goals and 9 assists, breaking the single-season points record of Gabriella Flibotte. That prodigious output left her just shy of the all-time points lead; her 158 career goals and 25 assists left her with 183 points, six behind Flibotte (who notched 175 goals and 14 assists). The 25 helpers is tops in program history. Jaffe also scored 60 points playing on the Cohasset High School junior varsity team this year.

Hope Kissick – who has one more season left as a youth player – ended the year in fifth place on the all-time scoring list, with 64 goals and 18 assists for 82 points. Alison Whelan was just behind her on the all-time list, finishing her youth career in 6th place on the all-time records with 60 goals and 11 assists for 71 points. Whelan also scored 35 goals for Cohasset High School's junior varsity team this spring.

Little Leaguers beat Rockland 12-2

Cohasset's Little League Williamsport team opened play in Little League's annual Williamsport Tournament in Sharon on Sunday night. Matched against a tough squad from Rockland, the Cohasset boys in blue opened the tournament in grand style, with a five-inning 12-2 slaughter rule victory.

Cohasset next plays Canton, this Saturday, July 5, at noon in Stoughton.

Rockland took an early 1-0 lead in the first, but Cohasset Ace Mickey Barry shut the door with the help of a great stab of a hard grounder at first by Liam Burke, and a throw home to Max Montgomery at the plate, whose sweeping tag nailed a sliding Rockland runner. Cohasset answered in the bottom of the first with a run of its own, keyed by Jack Kuppens line double down the third base line. After one, the score stood at 1-1.

Barry retired the Rockland hitters in the top of the second, and the Cohasset bats came alive in the bottom of the frame. With two outs, Tommy O'Brien took one for the team and was hit in the back by Rockland's big hard throwing ace. Ryan McKeon followed with a great hustle play, as he legged out an infield hit, with O'Brien sliding into second just ahead of the throw. Terrence Doonan followed with a hard grounder that was too hot for the Rockland infield to handle – O'Brien scored, and McKeon moved to third. Brendan O'Connell then delivered with a huge three run dinger over the center field fence. Cohasset led 5-1 after two innings.

Rockland scratched out a run in the top of the third to narrow Cohasset's lead to 5-2, but Tommy Ryan's stab and throw from third got Cohasset out of the inning with no further damage. In the bottom of the third, Burke lead off with a blast over the centerfield fence to put Cohasset up 6-2, and chase the Rockland starter. After three, Cohasset led 6-2.

In the fourth, Barry retired the Rockland side with no score, and Cohasset blew the game wide open in the bottom of the frame. With one out, Cohasset's Doonan, O'Connell, Kuppens and Burke smacked back to back to back to back singles to plate one run. Barry then strode to the plate with the bases loaded, and after falling behind 0-2, blasted a grand slam to left to plate four, and expanded Cohasset's lead to 11-2. Cohasset nearly plated another run, as Max Montgomery doubled off the centerfield fence, Tommy Powers worked a walk to keep the rally alive, and Chris Cohen and Chris Haggerty both laced liners just foul. Rockland escaped the frame with Cohasset up by nine.

In the fifth, Barry again retired the side without a score, keyed by Doonan's stab of a hard shot at short, and gun from deep in the hole to nail the Rockland runner at first. In the bottom of the fifth, Doonan led off, and blasted Cohasset's fourth home run, and the boys in blue were slaughter rule winners, 12-2.

Cohasset next plays Canton, this Saturday, July 5, at noon in Stoughton.

See and learn more about this historic building and national treasure and ask questions about the four-volume Historic Structure Report that the Friends of the Old Ship Meeting House presented recently to the Hingham Public Library and the Community Preservation Committee. CPC funds paid for the report.

At 10 a.m. the parade, featuring Uncle Sam, bands, floats, antique cars, and more steps out from Hingham High School, traveling down historic Main Street and arriving at Station Street at about noontime. Prizes are awarded for different categories of floats.

Cohasset tennis benefit for Children's Hospital

Save the date for Cohasset's longest-running tennis tradition, which swings into action again this summer to benefit Children's Hospital Boston beginning Friday, July 18th through Sunday, July 20th. The popular weekend tennis tournament dates back to the 1950's, when Cohasset's legendary philanthropist Jesse Cox gathered family and friends for a charitable game of tennis to benefit some of the neediest children and their families at Children's Hospital.

The event was a tremendous success and soon became an annual summer tradition. In the past 10 years alone, more than $100,000 has been raised to benefit patients and their families at the hospital, earning the Cohasset Tennis Benefit a commemorative plaque in the Children's lobby. This year all proceeds will help fund the Pediatric Trauma Program, with 100 percent of the proceeds paying for transportation, lodging and personal care packages for families of trauma patients.

This summer's benefit kicks off with an evening reception on Friday, July 18th at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor. On Saturday, July 19, tennis players of all abilities, from beginners to advanced, are evenly matched and play on some of the most spectacular private courts throughout Cohasset. Finals for three levels of play (social, intermediate and advanced) take place on Sunday, July 20th on the grounds of the Roy estate, formerly the home of Cohasset Tennis Benefit founder Jesse Cox.

For reception, tennis and registration information, or to learn about sponsorship opportunities, lob on to www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

See the Sox play at ballparks including Baltimore's Camden Yards.

L.A. Angels, July 18-20

Anaheim Stadium in Orange County (not L.A.) is one of the most user-friendly ballparks you'll ever experience, with easy parking off the highway, a vast selection of food (this was the first stadium to introduce sushi), and mellow fans who won't spill beer on you after you jump up and high-five the family following a Sox homer. The game is just icing on the cake to the great times you can have in SoCal during the summer.

Cruise over to Laguna Beach for sun, sand and art. The city's art festival, Pageant of the Masters, is in full swing this month. Huntington Beach is known for its waves, a good place to watch surfers or try your luck at the sport. And did we mention nearby Disneyland?

Chicago White Sox, Aug. 8-11

Access to U.S. Cellular Field (the former Comiskey Park) is also easy, right off the Dan Ryan Expressway. The place gets a bad rap because it has to compete with the quasi-religious experience of going to a Cubs game at Wrigley Field. U.S. Cellular is not nearly as intimate or historic as Wrigley, yet it's still a great place to see the darker-colored Sox win. After all, how bad can it be if they serve Chicago-style deep-dish pizza? One caveat: White Sox fans are more fanatical than Yankees devotees. So wear your red with pride, but get ready for a good ribbing.

On the waters of Lake Michigan, Chitown is a great place to take in a game. Rent a bike and ride along the waters, backed by the formidable skyline, and take a breather on the sands of Oak Street Beach. Also check out the Ape House at the free Lincoln Park Zoo, and the fountains and silver Bean sculpture at downtown's Millennium Park.

Baltimore Orioles, Aug. 18-20

Making its debut in 1992, Camden Yards really set the standard for building a park for baseball games only, going against the horrible trend of building one stadium for both baseball and football teams. Its retro appeal succeeds in giving fans a close-up view of the field, much like Fenway, Wrigley and other parks of yesteryear. Grab some barbecue from Boog's, owned by former Orioles slugger, Boog Powell, and watch the Sox Cowboy Up and give (former Sox player) Kevin Millar and friends a good ole whoppin'.

In your downtime, head to Babe Ruth's birthplace and the National Aquarium.

Toronto Blue Jays, Aug. 22-24

After watching the Sox play the Twins in Minnesota's bubble of a stadium, the Metrodome, I vowed never to see a baseball game in a dome again. But Toronto's Skydome (now named the Rogers Centre) does have the luxury of opening the roof during good weather, so it doesn't feel like a behemoth. The best seats are arguably at the Renaissance Toronto Hotel (www.marriott.com), where you can watch an entire baseball game from inside your room. Seventy of the 348 rooms overlook the playing field of the Toronto Blue Jays. Sure, there's no one selling hot dogs here, but if Junior gets bored, he can run to the hotel's Kids Room, where free popcorn, movies, games and crafts are there for the offering.

Families will also enjoy walking through the secret passageways of the Medieval-style palace, Casa Loma, taking the elevator to the top of CN Tower, biking along the Harbourfront, and checking out the outdoor concerts at the Yo-Yo Ma-designed Toronto Music Garden.

New York Yankees, Aug. 26-28

This is your last chance to see Yankee Stadium, circa 1975, since the new ballpark is set to open next season. You know, the site where there's a second David Ortiz jersey still hidden in the concrete... hopefully (the first one sold for $175,000 at a charity event). Yankees fans are notorious for booing everything and everyone, including you once you jump up and start screaming Youk after a grand slam.

Since you're in Da Bronx, you might as well check out the reptile house at the Bronx Zoo, a good primer to understanding the reptilian side of Yankees fans. Also visit the Italian hub of Arthur Avenue for a great after-game meal. The waiters at Dominick's (2335 Arthur Ave.) belt out the days menu, family-style pastas loaded with seafood, stuffed veal or baked ziti. All washed down with a glass jar of red wine. There's no better way to celebrate another Sox victory!

Committee Co-chairs Eleanor Bleakie (right front) and Nancy Garrison with Committee Members Annette Sawchuk(back left) and Patsy Rabstejnek are preparing for the "More Stately Mansions" House Tour to be held on Thursday, July 31 from 10am until 2 pm where five Cohasset houses can be visited. This event will benefit the Cohasset Historical Society 781-383-1434.

Your chance to see More Stately Mansions

The More Stately Mansions House Tour to Benefit the Cohasset Historical Society is from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday, July 31 Eleanor Bleakie and Nancy Garrison are serving as co-chairs. The cost is $30 for CHS Members and $35 for non-Members for more visit: www.cohassethistory.org or email: cohassethistory@yahoo.com

The beautiful program book, which serves as the ticket to the houses on tour, is now available. The tour "More Stately Mansions" includes five fabulous waterfront homes and gardens not usually available to the public. A Georgian house commands Cohasset Harbor and occupies the site of a former house owned by Clarence W. Barron, founder of Barron's Financial Weekly and owner of the Wall Street Journal; one house is a French Chateau on the Gulf River; a Victorian house built in 1891 for a wealthy Boston resident was used for coot shooting and where stars performing at the Music Circus often stayed; a Tudor Mansion that has been beautifully restored. The formal gardens have been uncovered and a pool added and Cary Point overlooking a private beach is the site of a Mediterranean stucco house recently restored and decorated in a most imaginative way.

The Cohasset Historical Society maintains three buildings in Cohasset, each building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places: The Captain John Wilson House and Samuel Bates Ships Chandlery (Maritime Museum) located in the Village and the Pratt Building, formally the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and now the headquarters of the Society. All three buildings will be open.

High Tea, compliments of Arthur Roebuck, will be served at the Pratt Building from 2-4 p.m.

Tickets are available at the following Cohasset locations:

- Cohasset Historical Society-106 South Main Street
- Buttonwood Books and Toys-Shaw's Plaza

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 30, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Before you adventurous Arians charge right into those new projects, take a little time to learn where you'll be going so you can avoid getting lost before you get there.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your time is devoted to career demands through much of the week. But Venus, who rules your sign, might be planning how (and with whom) you'll spend your weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be put off by the surprising turn in the way your project is developing. You've invested enough time in it to know how to make all the necessary adjustments.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The work week goes smoothly for the most part. But a weekend visit to a place in your past could hold surprises for your future, especially where romance is involved.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden attack of shyness for the usually loquacious Lion could be a sign that deep down you're not sure enough about what (or whom) you had planned to talk up in public.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Deal with that job-related problem on-site — that is, at the workplace. Avoid taking it home, where it can spoil those important personal plans you've made.

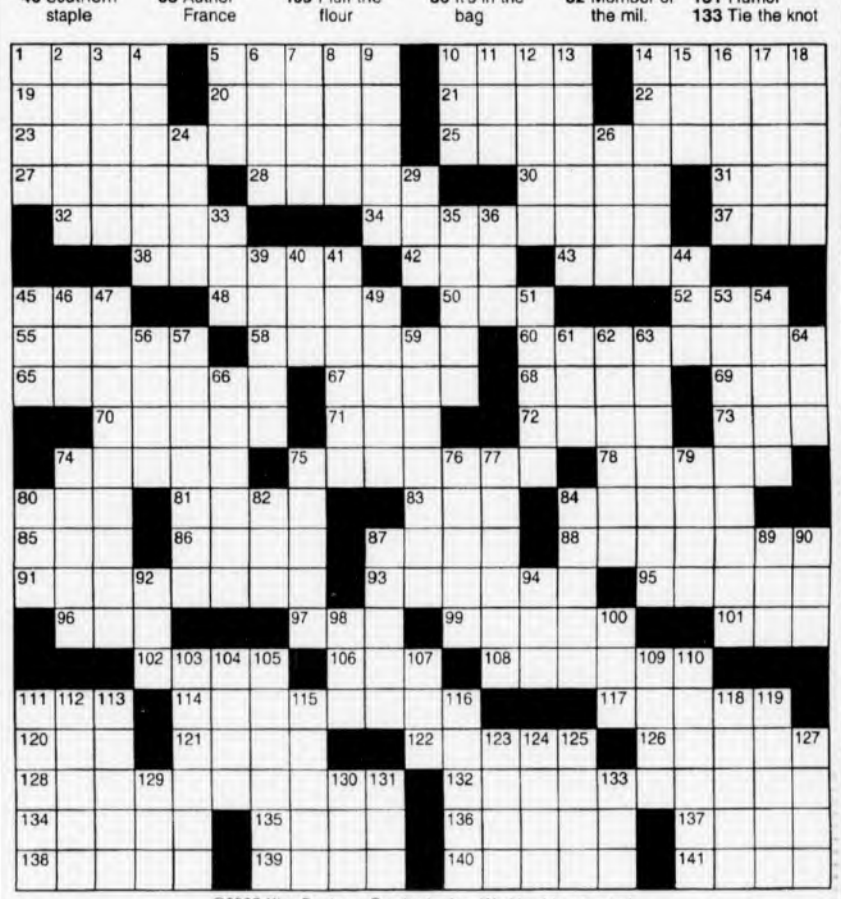
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to let those favorable comments about your business dealings be known to those in a position to be helpful. Don't hide your light; let it shine.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Avoid added pressure to finish a project on deadline by steering clear of distractions. To put it somewhat poetically: Time for fun — when your tasks are done.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might be uneasy about an offer from a longtime colleague. But before you reject it, study it. You might be surprised at what it actually contains.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Deal firmly with a difficult family matter. It's your strength they need right now. You can show your emotions when the situation begins to ease up.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A recent dispute with some co-workers might not have been completely resolved. But other colleagues will be only too happy to offer support of your actions.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Let go of that Piscean pride long enough to allow someone to help you with a surprising development. That could make it easier for you to adjust to the change.(c) 2008 King Features Syndicate

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Born to sing

John McDermott coming to the Music Circus

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

John McDermott will perform at South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset July 5.

Growing up in Toronto as one of the 12 children of Peter and Hope McDermott, John McDermott performed at many Saturday night house parties hosted by his parents for family and any neighbors who stopped by. When the Scottish-born singer takes the stage this Saturday at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset and Sunday at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis, he expects a bigger audience, but a similarly comfortable experience.

"There doesn't seem to be any border or a stage when I'm singing for an audience. It's like being in the basement again and singing together with the family," explained McDermott by telephone last week from Toronto. "I grew up singing and, for a long time, I thought everybody did. We emigrated from Glasgow, but wherever we lived, Saturday nights were always about singing. My mom and dad introduced us to music early, so all of us kids could sing a verse or two of 'Scotland the Brave' or 'Green Isle.' My song was usually 'Danny Boy" and I sang it with pride, because even as a kid I knew what a powerful song it was."

Powerful enough that "Danny Boy" became the title song on McDermott's 1992 debut album, which went double platinum and began his transformation from circulation sales representative at the Toronto Sun newspaper to international recording artist.

"In 1991, I recorded 12 songs for the 12 kids in my family as a 50th anniversary present for my parents. The tape was made up of 12 songs that my brothers and sisters and I had sung on Saturday nights at home. The tape sat on the shelf for a year, before finally ending up at EMI Music Canada, thanks to Billy Cole, a guitarist friend of mine who has worked with The Rolling Stones. The label liked the music and released the album on November 10, 1992, which just happened to be the Marine Corps birthday."

The coincidence proved fateful for McDermott, 53, who has worked on behalf of veterans throughout his career, and whose extended family has a long history of military service.

"My father was a veteran and two of my cousins were killed in Vietnam, so I feel a great deal of respect for the men and women who put their lives on the line for the sake of their country. I have always dedicated a significant portion of my shows to veterans, and much of the music I sing really speaks to the veterans' experience," said McDermott.

He is a recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor Society's Bob Hope Award; an honorary member of The War Amps, a Canadian organization that helps amputees; and a longtime supporter of the Boston-based New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans.

"When you perform you're looking into the faces of men and women who have been affected by one or more of the wars over the last 50 years. The music we do, and the way we do it, is a simple matter of respect to these people," he said.

McDermott began to gain a following when he opened for The Chieftains, and before long was headlining his own concerts in Canada and the United States. In the late 1990s, McDermott joined Anthony Kearns and Ronan Tynan to form "The Irish Tenors." The trio, who gained prominence when PBS aired a 1998 Dublin concert, toured Ireland and the U.S., and earned a gold record in the process. Although the group now features different members, McDermott and Tynan have begun to appear together again.

For his local concerts this week, McDermott, who divides his time between Toronto and Boston, will be joined by fiddler Rosie McKenzie, formerly of Cape Breton's The Cotters, and Belfast's Eammon Dillon on the Irish pipes.

McDermott is hoping his Hyannis stop might reunite him with a good friend who lives in the area.

"I had been hoping to see Senator Kennedy when we played the Melody Tent. He's been wonderful to me over the years. Knowing what I do for veterans, Teddy has invited me many times to sing at the Kennedy Library in Boston and also at the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C.

"Were he well, I would have expected to see him on the Cape. And perhaps I still will."

John McDermott will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier Street, Cohasset, on July 5. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-931-2787. McDermott will be at the Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on July 6. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 1-800-347-0808.

Movie review

A doll of fame performance

Kit Kittredge: An American Girl (B+)

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

The Kittredge family (Abigail Breslin, Julia Ormond, Chris O'Donnell) share some sad-happy times during the Depression.

Abigail Breslin is a living doll in "Kit Kittredge: An American Girl," but her character is nothing to toy with.

Rather, she's to be feared, especially if you're a petty criminal or Dakota Fanning, whose reign as America's No. 1 tweener is officially usurped by the precocious Breslin, spectacular as a Depression-Era Mother Teresa tending to the poor and disadvantaged of Cincinnati.

So what if Kit's based on something made of crude oil-based synthetics and comes prepackaged with a smarmy back story courtesy of the folks at Mattel; on celluloid, this doll is keeping it real.

The big winners, though, are the ticket buyers, most likely girls between the ages of 8 and 13 and their relieved mothers, who can enter a theater confident their impressionable daughters won't be exposed to, mayhem and naughty bits.

This baby is as G as G can get, and it's still, pardon the vulgarity, pretty damn entertaining, thanks to a script by Ann Peacock ("Narnia: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe," aka the good "Narnia") that's unabashedly old-fashioned, yet tremendously affecting.

Peacock pulls no punches in depicting the harsh realities of the Depression, a time, like now, in which millions lost jobs, homes, savings and dignity.

Familiar fodder to be sure, but other than "Paper Moon," I can't think of another film that so effectively captures the era from a child's perspective; nor one that so appreciates the unbridled optimism of youth.

Breslin's Kit sees despair everywhere she looks, including school, where the 10-year-old's far less sensitive peers mock and tease classmates whose families have fallen on hard times. Yet, the girl never loses her smile or her gumption, especially when it comes to fulfilling her dream of becoming a reporter for the Cincinnati Register.

If only she could get the paper's snooty editor (Wallace Shawn) to take her seriously. She's written enterprising articles about the downtrodden inhabiting the "Hobo Jungle," a community she and her jobless parents (Chris O'Donnell and Julia Ormond) soon may be calling home if Dad, a car dealer, can't find work in Chicago.

True to her love of reporting, Kit has developed a sharply observant eye, which might come in handy in solving a crime wave being blamed on a couple of vagabond kids (Max Thieriot and Willow Smith, daughter of Will) her mother hired to do odd chores around their makeshift rooming house.

Among the borders are a loopy librarian (Joan Cusack), a suave magician (Stanley Tucci), a husband-hunting dancer (Jane Krakowski) and a snobby neighbor (Glenne Headly) forced to eat crow and move in with the Kittredges with her big-eared son, Stirling (Zach Mills).

Might one of them be the thief who's been pilfering heirlooms and mortgage payments? Or is it one of the hobos? Kit, Stirling and Kit's best pal, Ruthi (Madison Davenport) are determined to find out. And as they sleuth, director Patricia Rozema ("Mansfield Park") presents a touching portrait of families torn apart by an economy in free fall.

Rozema makes no bones about tugging on the old heartstrings, either, putting a very human face on a time most kids know only through boring history books.

It's Breslin, though, who sells it best with her dynamite mix of pixie dust and intelligence, creating a heroine for the ages. And all ages.

Rated G. "Kit Kittredge: An American Girl" contains no objectionable material.

Pops High School Sing Off competition narrowed to three

Winner to perform with Boston Pops on Fourth of July

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

A quintet of students from Braintree and North Quincy High School is among the three finalists in the first ever Boston Pops High School Sing Off: A Best of Broadway Challenge.

The quintet is comprised of Adam Randall, Meghan Ryan, and Michael Ryan, all from Braintree High School, and Brianna Shetler and Kirsten Shetler, from North Quincy High School. Their winning performance was "One Day More" from "Les Misérables."

They will compete against Katie Mayhew, from Martha's Vineyard Regional High School, who sang "Being Alive" from "Company;" Samara Oster, from Milton Academy, who sang "Your Daddy's Son" from "Ragtime" at a July 1 Boston Pops concert, under the direction of Conductor Keith Lockhart.

The High School Sing Off winner will perform July 3 and 4 as part of the Boston Pops Fireworks Spectacular.

The three finalists were chosen from six semi-finalists who performed with The Boston Pops June 17 and 18. The Boston Pops High School Sing-Off invited vocalists from across Massachusetts to submit audition tapes of their performances of pieces from the musical theater repertoire. Approximately 250 entries were received, and the field was narrowed to the top 22 soloists and ensembles, who then performed live in Symphony Hall June 2. From those 22, the six semi-finalists were selected.

The Boston Pops High School Sing-Off is sponsored by Fidelity Investments.

'Grease' is the word!

CDC production on stage next weekend

By Nancy White

Poodle skirts. Leather jackets. Slicked back hair. The jive. Young love.

This summer, "Grease" is the word.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is bringing back a taste of the 1950s with its summer production of the enduring musical now enjoying a revival on Broadway, "Grease."

"This is our biggest show ever," says director Lisa Pratt. Following last summer's monster success of "High School Musical On Stage" more kids than ever wanted to get involved in the CDC's summer program. When the cast number reached 65 they had to start turning people away.

For five years running, the CDC has put on a summer drama program in conjunction with Cohasset Recreation and each year it has gotten bigger and bigger. What started with 20 kids putting on "Charlie and the Chocolate Factory" has turned into a powerhouse summer production — and this year will be no exception.

The cast has been working hard to put on a polished show when the curtain goes up next Friday, July 18. The lead

Wind turbines on the horizon

Public forum Wednesday, July 16

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Is Cohasset ready for a wind turbine?

All indications are pointing to yes.

In the next year, whether ready or not, a wind turbine in Cohasset is a distinct possibility.

Town Meeting set the stage for commercial sized wind turbines with the unanimous passing of a zoning bylaw regulating the renewable energy technology. Preliminary data collected over the last year on Turkey Hill indicates Cohasset has "good wind." On a broader scale,

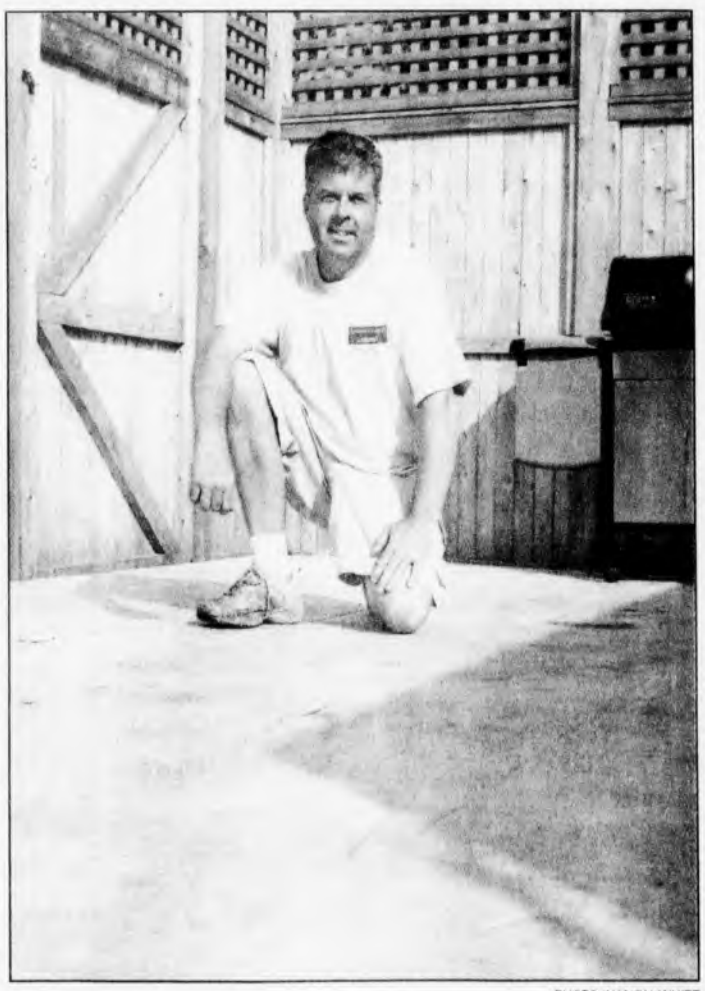
New face for old place

Stoneworks by CCNightscape uses 'magic concrete'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The gray expanse of aging concrete can be an eyesore whether it is at a pool, a walkway, stairs or a retaining wall. When people think concrete, they usually think boring.

But, when Charlie Callahan sees concrete all he notices are the possibilities. That's because Callahan is the owner of Stoneworks by CCNightscape based in Cohasset can transform aging concrete into what he calls a masterpiece. Using what can only he terms as "magic concrete" Callahan is giving old places, new faces all over the South Shore.



Last week, Callahan created a new look for one corner of the Cohasset Swim Center. Using a polymer and resin enhanced product that bonds to concrete, Callahan can transform the bland gray of concrete to a space with an "old world" feel.

At the swim center, Callahan was hired to re-surface the outdoor shower as well a new patio space created when a new fence was installed last year.

Board of Managers member TJ O'Brien said the surface of the shower has worn away around the pebbles of the concrete so it actually was painful for the kids to stand on.

Now, the shower stall surface is smooth to the touch and, with the use of faux finishing, has a rich brown color. Behind the shower, where

Police seize evidence from car break-ins at Hull Street house

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

About 18 homeowners in the north Cohasset area woke up on July 2 to find that their cars had been "entered."

A car alarm alerted police to a residence on Surry Drive early that morning. One of the suspects spotted during the search was seen climbing into the window at 203 Hull St. He was arrested along with two other suspects who were later "flushed out" of the area and brought to the station.

The two 16 year olds, who are both former Cohasset residents, and a 17-year-old minor, Michael Levesque of Pembroke, are all facing numerous charges of breaking and entering of a motor vehicle and larceny.

Cohasset detectives and patrol officers executed a search warrant at 203 Hull St. the evening of July 2 during which evidence related to the ongoing investigation was seized.

Chief James Hussey said police found cell phones, ipods and GPS units at the home.

Hussey said police continue to aggressively investigate the series of motor vehicle breaks and larcenies that have occurred in the north Cohasset area over the course of the last few weeks.

"In these cases, a car alarm helped us and we were able to get to the scene quickly," Hussey said. "However, we want to remind all residents to lock their cars and remove any valuable property.

"If you leave something valuable in plain sight – there is a chance it won't be there when you wake up in the morning."

Residents are also requested to call the police department at any time if they observe any individuals behaving suspiciously in their neighborhood.

Anyone with information concerning the motor vehicle breaks is asked to call Cohasset Police CID at 781-383-1055, ext. 1047.

Cohasset Police Sergeant David Cogill, left, Lt. William Quigley, center, and Cohasset Police Officer Pat Reardon, along with detectives and other officers enter 203 Hull St. in Cohasset with an executed search warrant last Wednesday (July 2). There were at least 18 car break-ins over night. Police seized some evidence from this house.

MV crashes

• At 11:20 a.m. on Wednesday (July 2) there was a three-car, "1-2-3 pancake-like" accident at Route 3A and lower King Street, Chief Hussey said. A 2002 Mercury operated by a Pembroke woman slowed down near the jersey barriers near the highway construction work. The 1998 Ford, operated by a Hull man, that was traveling behind the Mercury also slowed down. A 2005 Honda, operated by a Cohasset woman, rear-ended the Ford pushing it into the Mercury.

The cars were all traveling south on 3A.

The Ford had to be towed and one of the drivers did complain of back pain. There were no citations issued, Hussey said.

• A 59-year-old Scituate woman is facing drunk driving charges following an accident at 3A and lower King Street at about 10:47 p.m. on Friday (July 4). Police said witnesses reported she crossed into the northbound lane striking an oncoming car, causing it to go into the jersey barrier.

The woman told police that her dog may have distracted her but police could smell alcohol on her breath and she was taken into custody. Based on their investigation and observations she was charged with OUI (liquor), negligent operation of a motor vehicle, marked lanes violation and unsafe operation of a motor vehicle.

Both cars were towed, no one was taken to the hospital, police said. The woman was driving a 2005 Toyota. The other car was a 1992 Volvo, operated by a Quincy man, whose passenger was from Ohio.

• A man whose 2002 Porsche was hit while it was parked on Jerusalem Road, was able to provide police with a plate number of the other vehicle, a 2006 Ford.

Police went to the home of the owner of the Ford and the resident admitted he had hit the Porsche and told police he intended to notify police about the incident which took place Saturday (July 5) after 10 p.m. Both cars were drivable and there were no injuries, police said. The operator of the Ford will be cited for leaving the scene after causing property damage.

• The operator of a motorcycle traveling along Atlantic Avenue near Lothrop Lane at about 10:30 a.m. on Sunday (July 6) lost control when a car pulled out of Lothrop Lane. The driver of the car apparently did not see the motorcycle that went into an embankment on the right side of the road. There was minor damage to the motorcycle, which did not make contact with the car. The motorcycle operator was transported to the hospital.

Hull fight

Two Cohasset officers responded to a call for help from Hull police who were trying to get a large fight on the beach at Beach Avenue and L Street under control. Two people were down and had been hit by rocks thrown by the out-of-control group, police said. The call came in at about 10:27 p.m. on Friday (July 4) and Cohasset officers cleared the scene at 11:45 p.m. There were multiple arrests.

Chief Hussey said Cohasset has mutual aid agreements with neighboring towns. Based on the amount of people involved, Cohasset sent two officers over to assist, he said. If there had been an incident in Cohasset occurring at that time, the officers would have been called back, he said.

Unlicensed

An officer on patrol on Beechwood Street near Mill Lane saw a black Honda that was traveling east and was speeding in excess of 40 mph. The officer pulled the Honda over near the 300 block of Beechwood Street. The 24-year-old operator handed the officer a valid registration but he had a Brazilian license. The officer explained he needed a valid Massachusetts license; the Honda was towed and the man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding.

Queried the VIN

An officer in an unmarked vehicle saw a 1997 green Chevy Impala traveling north on Route 3A near Stop & Shop that did not have a Mass. inspection sticker; had no front plate; and had a Florida rear plate. The vehicle was pulled over and the operator, who spoke broken English, provided the officer with an ID card. A computer check did not find any matching information based on the name provided and he operator provided no proof of ownership of the vehicle or registration. Police queried the VIN (vehicle identification number) that showed the car was out of South Boston.

Police could not make a positive identification of the man and he was arrested for unlicensed operation, having an unregistered motor vehicle, exhibiting another plate, and giving a false name to a police officer. Police later determined his identity through his fingerprints.

Warrant

A 49-year-old Cohasset man with a warrant for his arrest on motor vehicle violations turned himself in last week.

Sugar in tank

Police are waiting to hear back from a walk-in who reported last week that someone might have put sugar in his gas tank. Police were not able to find evidence of sugar near the car, however the car would not start and had to be towed. If the garage determines there was sugar in the tank, police will investigate, Chief Hussey said. "We do not want to spend hours investigating if we are not sure," he said.

Rock thrown

A painter working in a Jerusalem Road house called police after hearing a window break and seeing three boys running away. Police confirmed the window had been broken by a rock about the size of a baseball that had landed inside the house. Officers spoke with other workers in the area and with an officer working a detail but they had not seen the boys. The incident remains under investigation.

Real estate signs

A Rustic Drive caller reported finding real estate signs in his yard last Thursday (July 3) that were apparently taken from other locations and put in his yard. An officer brought the signs to the police station and the incident is under investigation.

Bike found

A resident reported a blue mountain bike has been left in front of his house for two days. Police have the bicycle, along with other lost or abandoned bicycles, at the station. If anyone is missing a bike, they should stop by the station, police said.

Grim outlook for fiscal 2010

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Finance Director Mike Buckley painted a bleak picture for fiscal 2010 at Monday night's Selectmen's meeting.

With the real estate market down, this year's property assessments are going to be declining, which will directly affect the property tax levy.

"If the values don't go up, the tax revenue doesn't go up," said Buckley. Right now, the property tax levy is based on sales data from 2007 where in Cohasset home values stayed relatively steady. In 2008, while high-end homes have held steady, mid- and lower-end properties' values have dropped.

Buckley met with Selectmen to give an overview of the finance department, which includes the accounting, assessors, treasurer, collector and payroll services. The presentation is part of an on-going effort to have the Selectmen meet with each department head over the last few months to report on the trends, major challenges, grant opportunities and generally give a "big picture" perspective of their department.

One of the problem trends Buckley is seeing is the current pace is slowing in new growth. Building permits are declining and some of the larger projects the town was expecting to come online are held up for one reason or another. The mixed-use development in the transit-oriented district hasn't filed for a building permit. The 200-apartment Avalon project approved by the Zoning Board four years ago is stuck in appeals. The Cook Estate, a 27-single family home development, is also under appeal. The upscale senior housing development, Cedarmere, is stalled due to a slow real estate market.

The slow down in building permits could affect next year's budget because the town counts on a certain amount of "new growth" each year to factor in to the budget. While Proposition 2-1/2 doesn't allow the tax levy to increase over 2.5 percent from year to year without an override vote, new growth is not included in that limitation. What that amounts to is the budget is typically increased between four and 4.5 percent each year. The average budget gain over the past few years due to new growth has been about $500,000.

Other factors will and already are affecting the budget. Energy costs, electricity, heat and motor fuel, are rising and the budget will be strained, said Buckley. In the current fiscal year, $963,000 is budgeted for energy costs, nearly two-thirds of the cost is part of the school budget. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said while energy is a large portion of the budget, it also holds the most promise for finding ways to save.

As far as capital budget, there is a pent-up demand for purchases. Police need new patrol cars. Fire needs a new ambulance. Schools need buses and the technology purchased as part of the new school buildings will need to be replaced in the coming years.

"There's a backlog of capital items," said Buckley.

Buckley is also predicting a smaller increase in the excise tax revenues for fiscal 2010, which normally increase 10 percent from year to year.

"What it all amounts to is a really tough year in fiscal 2010," said Buckley.

Outside of the town budget, Buckley said the town was in a lot better shape in terms of debt. Both non-excluded debt and total debt service are nearing the percentage goals the town has set. For Fiscal 2009, non-excluded debt service is 3.35 percent of the general government operating budget; the goal is three percent. While total debt service (non-excluded and excluded) is 10.81 percent of the total budget; goal is 10 percent. In fiscal 2010, both percentages will drop below their respective goals of three and ten percent.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr asked Buckley to keep the Selectmen apprised on budget developments as it gets closer to budget season.

"Let's figure that out early and prepare for it. Let's get ahead of the game on (fiscal 2010)," said Carr.

Recreation Department

Recreation Director Ted Carroll presented an overview of his department on Monday night. Still relatively new on the job, Carroll said he has been working to re-acquaint himself with the department. Carroll worked for Cohasset Rec as a counselor and summer program director in the past and in May succeeded long-time rec director Jack Worley.

One of the first initiatives Carroll has been working on is bringing the department into the technology age. The department now has its own website (www.cohassetrec.com), which will have the capability for online program registration.

Carroll is working to establish a field use policy and has been meeting with the school department to work out a fee structure.

Another focus is to fully utilize the Teen Center, or "The Garage," more frequently.

"I'd like to use it year round," said Carroll. Plans are also being discussed to share the space with the Senior Center with the seniors using it in the morning/early afternoon hours and kids and teens in the afternoon/evening.

Briefly

Ground rules for Selectmen

The Board of Selectmen is setting some rules. At recent meetings, Chairman Ted Carr has expressed the need for some ground rules at the meetings to govern discussion especially when audience members are participating. Some of the language in the Selectmen's meeting protocol is taken from the Town Meeting procedures included in each warrant.

The protocol is as follows:

"Discussion during Board meetings should always be courteous and respectful, and should be confined to the subject under consideration. Sarcasm is generally not respectful, and the subject under consideration does not include the individuals involved in the debate. All statements and questions should be directed to the Chairman, who will ask the appropriate person to respond."

The Selectmen approved the language drafted by Carr and Town Manager Bill Griffin in a unanimous vote. The protocol will be included at the bottom of each Selectmen agenda.

"It's good to just let people know ahead of time," said Carr.

Airplanes over Cohasset

The Board of Selectmen is requesting the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) take a look at what's been happening high above Cohasset. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, who is Cohasset's representative to the Community Advisory Committee that worked with the FAA to help improve the noise pollution in communities surrounding Logan, said the new flight plans that should have reduced the amount of airplane noise over Cohasset are not being appropriately implemented.

"The improved flight routes are no where near the altitudes they need to be," said Dormitzer. The new flight plans are designed to keep planes at higher altitudes and further off the coast before making their descent into Logan Airport. Dormitzer drafted a letter to request the FAA look at the flight pattern data over the last few months to figure out why the new flight plan isn't being implemented. He said Hingham Selectmen have sent a similar letter to the FAA.

To report airplane noise, call 617-561-3333.

Goal setting meeting

Selectman Karen Quigley received unanimous support from the board recently to schedule a night for a goal setting and future planning workshop. The Board decided to wait until Town Manager Bill Griffin was present to set a date for the discussion.

Housing Partnership

Mary Grayken of 49 Highland Ave. was appointed to the Housing Partnership Committee on Monday night. Her interest in the issue of affordable housing and her willingness to get involved propelled her to seek the position. Grayken received the appointment with a unanimous vote of the Board of Selectmen.

Troika meets and appoints

The Troika met last week to appoint several citizens to town boards. Chartis Tebbetts and Sam Wakeman were re-appointed to another three-year term on the Advisory Committee. At a previous Troika meeting, Tom Reardon was appointed to a seat vacated by Jamie Gilman. Steve Gaumer was re-appointed to the Capital Budget Committee. The several members of the Alternative Energy Committee were re-appointed, including Andrew Willard, Marie Caristi-McDonald, Mimi White, Rod Hobson, Mike Bliss and Sally Ayers.

The Troika is a three-person committee consisting of the chairman of the Board of Selectmen, the chairman of the Advisory Committee and the Town Moderator. Ted Carr, Sam Wakeman and Dan Evans are currently members of the Troika.

The role of the Troika is mainly to appoint citizens to be members of various boards. According to the latest Town Report, members of the Advisory Board, the Capital Budget Committee, the Bylaw Committee, the Design Review Board and the Alternative Energy Committee are all appointed by the Troika.

AEC to try for federal grant

The Alternative Energy Committee will be applying for a federal grant to place a demonstration solar powered LED streetlight in the village. The grant is estimated to be between $5,000 and $10,000. AEC member Mike Bliss came before the Planning Board to seek their guidance and go-ahead to seek the grant.

"We thought the village would be a good place," said Bliss because of the high visibility of the technology.

The Planning Board agreed.

"Any kind of high visibility example of sustainability is a good idea," said Planning Board member Clark Brewer.

They suggested a model that adheres to "dark skies" initiative, meaning the light only shines downward.

The Planning Board voted 3-0 (Chairman Al Moore and member Mike Westcott were absent) to support the grant application.

"Let's give it a shot," said Vice Chairman Stuart Ivimey.

Easement still in question

Several residents of Lothrop Lane sent letters to the Selectmen asking them to pursue other options for access to Sandy Cove and the Treat's Pond outlet pipe. For many years, the Department of Public Works has used Lothrop Lane, a private way, to drive a backhoe onto the beach to clear the pipe.

Their sentiments echoed those of Charlie Higginson, owner of Lothrop Lane property, expressed at a recent Selectmen's meeting about his desire for the town to stop using Lothrop Lane and enforce their legal easement on a private driveway at the other end of the beach. Three letters from residents of Lothrop Lane wrote to the Board of Selectmen to support Higginson's view.

On the other side of the beach, although there is a legal easement, it is currently unclear to what purpose the town can utilize the easement. Town Counsel advised the town and the Selectmen to work with the property owners the easement crossed to reach some sort of resolution.

In an effort to resolve the issue, Priscilla Dewey Houghton of 91 Atlantic Ave. wrote to formally offer her property for the DPW to traverse when they need to gain access to the pipe.

"As nearest neighbors to the pipe, we would like to offer a route through our property. We depend on the kindness of the DPW who have diligently responded to the needs of the pipe in preventing neighborhood flooding," Houghton stated. "We hope this direct route will facilitate their work, and relieve the worries of other residents who do not want the equipment crossing their property, until such time as this dilemma is resolved."

We'll make you smile.

Last week, Charlie Callahan of Stoneworks by CCNightscape gave a new face to a corner of the Cohasset Swim Center. The outdoor shower stall, once a rough surface tough on bare feet, is now a smooth surface with a rich brown color. A faux tile patio in earth tones gives the swim center a new gathering place.

'Magic concrete' installed at Cohasset Swim Center

there was only dirt and grass before, there is now a faux tile patio, complete with small seahorse (the symbol of the Swim Center) stamp.

"I think it has a kind of old world Tuscany feel to it," said Callahan, who is passionate about his work and the endless opportunities it holds. "It's only limited by your imagination."

"We've gotten a lot of good feedback on it," said O'Brien. "It was exactly what we had in mind."

The new concrete space is part of an on-going effort to give the 1973 pool a facelift. Last year, a new fence was installed, the parking lot was re-surfaced before the 2008 season and other landscape improvements. O'Brien said long-term, the entire pool area could be re-surfaced using Callahan's system.

"We got a sample of what it would be like, it's the first step toward a bigger plan," said O'Brien.

Callahan, who for 20 years has been specializing in landscaping, masonry and outdoor gathering spaces, discovered the concrete re-surfacing product about six years ago.

"Now, it's probably 80 percent of my business," said Callahan. His interest in the product began when a customer asked if there was a way he could fix the cracks his concrete. Callahan told him that the concrete would have to be removed and set again. Traditional cement will not bond to already set cement.

With his curiosity piqued, he began to look into the possibility. He attended seminars, explored several different product lines and even participated in an internship to learn about the process and the product.

"Once I opened the door, there was really endless possibilities," said Callahan. Now, he used the product on both indoor and outdoor spaces from basements to garages to patios.

For small spaces, the process also called "stamped concrete" can take less than a day. Entire pool surfaces can be done in as little as three days. First, the area needs to be scrubbed clean. Then, the product is placed on the concrete.

"It can go down as thin as paper or as thick as two inches," said Callahan.

Lastly, what Callahan calls the fun part is the faux finishing. The concrete can be colored in earth tones, blues, greens or combination. Then, grinded in order to make it look more like stone. Depending on the desired look, the final design can resembles brick, slate, flagstone, stone, tile and even wood.

The end product has many names: stamped concrete, patterned concrete, imprinted concrete, or if a more intricate motif architectural concrete.

"You can go from grey concrete to French countryside in a few days," said Callahan, adding the process is more affordable than traditional masonry.

The magic cement has complemented his specialty of creating outdoor spaces, particularly for nighttime use. Designing lighting, firepits and outdoor kitchens is all part of greater scheme for Callahan.

"My goal is to get people off the couch, stay outside and hug their kids," said Callahan with a smile.

ENJOY SUMMER

Hello Cohasset. Oh my gosh, I cannot believe I am writing this column and it is already July 11! It always seems that after the 4th, the summer goes by so fast. Please make sure to enjoy it even during the hot spells that we have had and take advantage of all the little pieces in your days that make you smile.

Just the other day, I was watching a group of kids out on the playground and decided just to listen as they played. It was so sweet to hear them chatting to each other in a "household" manner with one being Dad, one being Mom and one being the baby. Dad said, "Hurry up, the train is coming for work" and the little girl who was pretending to be Mom said, "But Daddy, you can't go to work yet, Baby Sara needs a jelly belly laugh with you!" They did the giant laugh, looked at the dog named Roger, (another little boy) and said, "too bad you can't laugh too, it is so much fun!"

Then, Dad went to work. I guess we all need to stop at times and enjoy those small moments that mean so much. How was everyone's Fourth of July celebrations?

If you have any stories or photos to share, please send them in. On with the news of the town for this week.

MEDALISTS

Four Cohasset athletes were among the 1,500 who competed at the State Special Olympics Summer Games at Harvard University in June. Kenny Sargent and Jessica MacDonald competed in tennis, both for the first time. Kenny won a Gold medal in singles and a Silver medal in doubles play, and Jessica won a Gold medal in singles. They train at the South Shore YMCA in Hanover with the Special Olympics Lob-Stars.

Also at Harvard, Jay Nothnagle who trains with Team Scituate, won a Gold medal in the 100M dash.

Unfortunately his premier event, the shot put was rained out. Nick Sida who competes with the Special Olympics SSHARCS, training at the Weymouth Club, won a Gold medal in the 4X50 freestyle relay.

Congratulations — you all trained hard and competed well.

On Sunday morning Special Olympics hosted its first ever Cruiser Convoy. Thank you to Chief Jim Hussey who brought in a Cohasset cruiser and joined over 100 other law enforcement officers who showed their specialized vehicles, greeted the athletes and awarded medals at several venues. This is wonderful for us all to read about. Congratulations to all of you in your accomplishments.

Cohasset Dramatic Club puts 'Grease' on stage characters — the "Pink Ladies" and the "Greasers" — have been rehearsing at least five days a week to ensure they have their parts down pat.

In just six and a half weeks, the cast has been transformed into 1950s teenagers.

"As far as the musical numbers and the choreography, they are way ahead," said Pratt as she watched the cast rehearse the opening number "Grease is the word" on Tuesday.

Pratt says they definitely feel pressure to deliver after last summer's four sold out shows of "High School Musical On Stage." Luckily, the CDC has a lot of talent to draw from. The cast is made up of 65 kids, ages 8 to 18, from Cohasset and other South Shore towns. The annual summer program brings many repeat participants who share a flair for the dramatic.

"Everyone from 'High School Musical' returned," said Andrew DeVitre, a recent Cohasset High grad, who plays the part of Danny Zuko, the character John Travolta made famous in the movie version of "Grease." Other cast members are participating for the first time after being recruited by friends and have never looked back.

"The show is very well cast and we've really bonded over the last few weeks," says Will McDonald, who plays the part of Doody. He says the song "We go together" aptly describes the close-knit cast.

Even with a decade separating some of the cast members, Pratt says she's been really impressed at how well the group meshes.

"They all help each other and learn from each other," says Pratt.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Spray!! Ian Porter, 16, covers his eyes while McCauley Braun, 15, sprays his hair with hairspray while they were getting ready for their rehearsal of "Grease."

The girls who play the "Pink Ladies" are equally excited about the production and the bonds they share with their fellow cast members. They describe the group as a family and off stage many of them are best friends.

"We're all friends in real life so on stage it makes it more believable," says Madison Rockwell who plays Rizzo in the stage production.

Even in the heat of the Town Hall auditorium on Tuesday night couldn't quell the excitement exuding from the cast members who can't wait for the curtain to go up next Friday.

"The show is so full of energy. If we don't have rehearsal, we make one up. This cast has so much chemistry," says Miranda Rich, who plays Marty. Even when laughing, which is something they do easily when together, their laughs are sometimes harmonized. They talk quickly about their favorite parts of the show commenting on the dancing, the costumes and the music.

"We know a lot of people are going to be singing along next weekend. I can't wait!" says Rebecca Dickinson, who plays the sweet and innocent female lead, Sandy.

Logan Pratt, whose on stage persona is Jan, sums it up succinctly, "I love this cast!"

A production of "Grease" wouldn't be complete without extensive costuming and set designs. Parents have been working to create dozens of poodle skirts, scouring consignment shops for prom dresses, and even purchasing the Pink Ladies jacket on ebay then matching it all up to outfit the 65-member cast. Even the ensemble members require two costumes and some with parts change costumes three or four times.

The sets are elaborate and will even include a beat up car (a dressed-up golf cart) for the greasers to transform during the iconic song "Greased Lightning." Pratt and musical director Mark Bono designed the sets and Bono is making Rydell High come to life.

Audiences can expect big musical numbers, complete with 1950s dance moves and modern attitude choreographed by Tina Fabrizio.

"We try to get the entire cast on stage as often as we can," says Pratt. The stage version is different from the movie version, altered to make it appropriate for kids, but still includes the music "Grease" fans know and love.

The cast knows expections are high and are ready to deliver a top-notch performance.

The only thing the cast isn't looking forward to? The final curtain call.

"We need a week of recovery to get over the show ending," says McCauley Braun, who plays beauty school dropout, Frenchy.

But, even when the show is over the friendships made endure, "we keep in touch during the school year and get together."

Mark Bono plays the piano while the cast of "Grease" warms up by going through their scale before their rehearsal Tuesday.

Public forum on wind turbines is July 16

Massachusetts just passed the Green Communities Act encouraging the creation of renewable energy sources.

In the next year, whether ready or not, a wind turbine in Cohasset is a distinct possibility. Plans are in motion for the construction of two wind turbines on Graham Waste Services site off of Route 3A.

Next Wednesday, July 16, the Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) will co-host a wind public forum at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library at 7p.m. The AEC has been communicating with the companies involved in the Graham Waste wind turbine project and have known it was coming down the pipeline for some time.

"We think it's a good project and we've done a lot of work to make wind turbines viable in town" said AEC Chairman Andrew Willard referring to the recently passed wind bylaw. "We hope to see some good things come out of the meeting."

The private project on the Graham Waste site is a joint venture between CCI-Energy, Palmer Capital, Lumus Construction and Emergent Energy. Graham Waste business and landowner, Paul Barry, has leased the land to the developers.

COURTESY PHOTO

The wind turbine public forum will feature photographic simulations of what the turbines will look like from different locations in town. It is expected one of the Graham Waste turbines will be seen from Deer Hill School on Sohier Street.

The wind turbine project proposal will be the first commercial sized wind generation project to be submitted to the Planning Board for a special permit under the new wind energy bylaw.

The current proposal is for the installation of two 1.6 to 2 million megawatt sized wind turbines on land surrounding the Cohasset Height landfill (Graham Waste). These proposed turbines will be approximately the same size as Hull Wind II located near the Weir River. The developers are expecting the turbines to produce more than seven million kilowatt hours of energy per year.

Although the project is currently proposing two turbines, there is a possibility of a third turbine down the line to be sited on top of the landfill.

As with any large project, residents want to know the impacts of the development and if there will be any benefits.

The forum will be residents' first chance to see the plans and begin to understand the scope of the project prior to the formal Planning Board proceedings. Emergent Energy has completed multiple studies to determine the feasibility, impacts and benefits of the project. They will present their findings of noise, shadow/flicker and impacts on bird populations.

The presentation will also include computer simulation images of the turbines in place and what they will look like from various locations around town. Because of proposed siting location — tucked on the hill behind Hingham Lumber and the Cohasset Family Medical building — the devel-

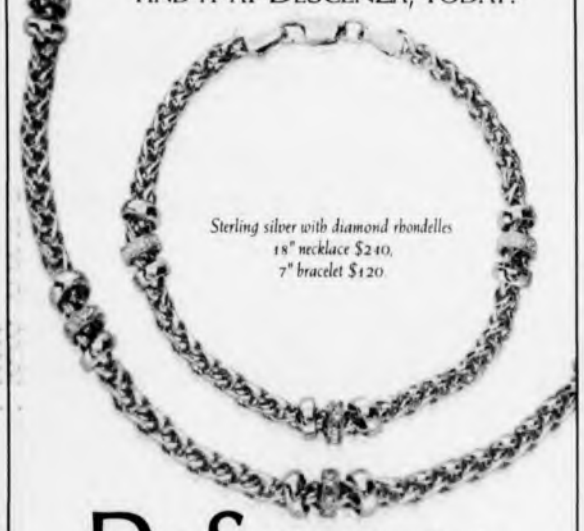
Benefits

One of the benefits the AEC is particularly excited about is the prospect of using the wind energy purchased at a reduced rate to power municipal buildings. Terms would still need to be negotiated, but both Willard and Sweeney said they are interested in coming to an energy service agreement.

The proposed wind turbines will easily produce more energy than the property needs. Each of the wind turbines will produce over three million kilowatt hours of electricity a year — much more than the buildings and operations on the Graham Waste site need. To put the number in prospective, Willard said the town's largest energy consumer, the Middle-High School, uses 1.3 million kilowatt hours each year.

Willard is hoping between 40 and 50 residents will come out to participate in the forum.



"Residents will really be able to see what we are trying to accomplish," and not only from the AEC but also from professionals in the industry, Willard said.

"We think it's a good project and we've done a lot of work to make wind turbines viable in town"

Wind turbine at Transfer Facility

If the project is approved, the installation of two privately funded wind turbines could be the beginning of more renewable energy initiatives in Cohasset. With the final data report from the meteorological experimental test, or MET, tower nearly complete, the AEC plans to make a wind turbine at the Transfer Facility their primary focus over the next year.

The middle-high school was considered the ideal location for a turbine because the energy produced could be pumped directly into the school building; however, with the recently passed Green Communities Act where ever the wind turbine is sited, the energy produced can be applied to any municipal building.

In May 2007, the Alternative Energy Committee oversaw the installation of the MET tower on Turkey Hill to gather information about the kind of wind conditions there is in Cohasset. The tower collected a whole year's worth of data and all indications are pointing to good wind. The committee expects to have the final report by the end of the month.

The Massachusetts Technology Collaborative will be working on a more detailed site plan for a wind turbine at the transfer facility on Cedar Street. Willard said it could be as early as the 2009 Annual Town Meeting that they could be coming before residents talking about funding options.

Cohasset isn't the only town on the South Shore looking to harness the wind. Hull already has two wind turbines and is actively pursuing offshore turbines at Harding's Ledge. Scituate is a year ahead of Cohasset in its pursuit of a turbine at the wastewater treatment plant off the Driftway.

"We know the wind is really good south of us in Scituate. We know the wind is really good north of us in Hull. We're certain the wind is good in the middle," said Willard. "I think everyone in town is looking for this to happen."

Right now, wind is so in demand there is a waitlist of nearly a year to get a turbine. "The demand outstrips the ability to make them," said Willard.

The AEC has been working on finding renewable resources to heat, light and fuel the town for three years.

"We don't really see an end in sight. We just take a little bit everyday, but we have a big plans."

FROM TURBINES, PAGE 8

opers say there will be little impact on residential property.

"With all big development projects it is important to have education and community outreach so residents know what they can expect and what they should demand from the project," said Jared Rodriguez of Emergent Energy. "We want to walk away with a good sense of where the community stands."

Jim Sweeney of CCI-Energy, the owner of the project, has been in the energy industry for the last 30 years.

"Right now, wind is the most emerging technology. It has the best potential to have a pay back and wind has been free for many years and we hope it continue to be free," Sweeney said of the renewable resource. His company is currently working on installing two turbines in Fair Haven, Mass. as well as projects in Maine and Rhode Island.

Sweeney said a forum like the one next week is an essential step to the project.

"We want to make the community a part of the same team. It's a good thing for the society, the environment and the town," said Sweeney.

Wind at a glance

The Past

• The AEC erected a MET tower on Turkey Hill to collect wind data for a year in May 2007. After multiple drafts and revisions, the 2008 Annual Town Meeting approved a zoning bylaw amendment creating a framework of regulations for turbines greater than 500 kilowatts, or about the size of Hull Wind I located near the Hull High. The projects will be required to go through a special permit process overseen by the Planning Board. The bylaw creates uniform setback, noise and siting requirements.

The Present

• A private developer is looking to site two, or perhaps three, wind turbines on the Graham Waste site located off Route 3A. The project will be the first wind turbine for Cohasset. The AEC and the turbine developers are co-hosting a public forum at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Wednesday, July 16 at 7p.m. The impacts and benefits of the large structure will be discussed in depth. The developers plan to file their special permit application after the public forum.

The Future

• The Graham Waste wind turbines will have to go through the permitting process with the Planning Board. If approved, the site could have turbines up and running within the next year. The AEC is also working toward a erecting a town-owned wind turbine at the Transfer Facility. Their hope is to come forth with specific plans to next year's annual Town Meeting. The AEC is considering multiple ideas on how to use the wind energy, in addition to powering buildings. It's possible electric buses could be purchased down the line and be re-charged each night by the wind turbine.

Remember to lock up

When we were growing up next door in Scituate, our house did not even have a key.

At one point, it must have – but it was an old Victorian farmhouse and no one had seen a key in years.

Thinking back, it was probably not a good idea even then to leave a house unlocked.

But in those days our towns seemed smaller and more insulated from crime that had always been synonymous with city living.

Police point out that many criminals and would-be criminals are opportunists. That means they have not necessarily planned to burglarize your particular car or home, but finding them unlocked with valuables in plain sight — provides them with an opportunity that they cannot pass up.

Clearly, we could curb the recent rash of car break-ins in town by taking two simple steps: locking our cars and removing our valuables.

Hingham, which is right next-door, has been plagued with home break-ins. In the warmer months, often homeowners will leave downstairs windows unlocked and open. Thieves have entered these homes and taken digital cameras, pocketbooks and other valuables.

A really disturbing trend has been break-ins at night while residents in Hingham have been asleep in their beds. Again, the criminal usually enters through an unlocked door or window. This type of brazen behavior has police in Hingham worried that about a potential confrontation between a sleepy, frightened homeowner and a criminal most likely looking for valuables that can be easily sold for money to get drugs.

Our purpose here is not to frighten Cohasseters, who still seem to be further away from the amount of crime happening in Hingham and other towns. But the fact is, it could happen here and we need to be vigilant and smart.

Hingham has had 90 car break-ins, 23 daytime burglaries, and at least 10 home invasions at night, just in the past 12 months.

Police there are working with residents to establish neighborhood watch groups. There is also an EMAS (E-mail alert system) where police can send out announcements and alerts to those who sign up.

It may not be time for these programs here in Cohasset but at the very least, we all need to keep our eyes open and report any suspicious activity or cars in our neighborhoods to the police. We also need to lock up.

Interestingly at a recent crime-stoppers meeting in Hingham, which has also had the same rash of pocketbook thefts from unlocked cars as Cohasset, police talked about catching a female suspect on videotape outside Tedeschi's.

She sat in the back seat of her vehicle and did not look suspicious. When a car pulled up next to hers and the woman got out to run into the convenience store leaving her pocketbook behind – the female thief hopped out, grabbed the woman's pocketbook from the front seat, got back into her car and drove off. It all happened in a matter of seconds.

Summer launch party is Saturday

Cohasset's traditional kick-off of the summer season will be on the harbor at the Cohasset Sailing Club and it's open again this year to all the friends of the Club. Join your neighbors, fellow boaters, young sailor parents and Sailing Club members for the annual Cohasset Sailing Club Summer Launch Party from 6 to 11 p.m. Saturday, July 12.

One of the features of the event—in addition to the beautiful setting and fun attendees—is the fabulous fresh lobster. The clam chowder is fantastic and there is delicious barbeque chicken as an alternative.

Adding to the night, there is a silent auction to benefit the club. You'll have a shot at enormously attractive items – Red Sox ticket, sailing cruises, artwork, jewelry and crafts from local talent are usually part on the tables.

The party is from 6 to 11 p.m. rain or shine. Dinner is served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. Important note: BYOB – bring a cooler.

Ticket reservations are available by calling Joyce Driscoll at 781-383-0122 or Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125 and are $50 per person payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club.

Sun tube placement questioned

COMMENTARY

LEE JENKINS

The most efficient use of the sun tube is in a windowless room, closet or hallway.

They're easy as PIE.

Sun tubes are Practical, Inexpensive and Energy efficient and a great way to fill an area with natural lighting. The tube has a dome-like lens jutting out from the roof that is connected to a reflective tube that funnels light through the building and then diffuses the light into the room below, magnifying the light so that the fixture in the ceiling looks like there is actually a bulb inside. There is even an optional light kit that can be inserted so that it can be 'put on' at night.

The sun tube is much smaller and less expensive than a skylight and can also be installed through an attic to provide light in a closet, windowless room or hallway. The cost typically ranges from $200 - $600 for residential and commercial installations and can even be installed by a do-it-yourselfer in a few hours.

Being so much smaller than a skylight, the tubes don't have the problems associated with traditional skylights because their small, round shape doesn't collect water and debris.

The concept of the sun tube aka sun pipe, sun tunnel, daylight pipe, has U.S. Patents dating back to the 1890's. This idea has a much longer history going all the way back to the time of the Pharaohs. Back then gold lined shafts were designed into the massive stone structures of ancient Egypt. They worked fairly well but were out of the price range of all but a select few.

The sunlight pipe used today is a result of a retired interior decorator tinkering in the late 1980s with different reflective materials in his attempt to pipe daylight through his attic into his kitchen. Thus was born this current breed of energy efficient products known as tubular daylighting devices (TDD's).

I have seen this technology in practice for years (see photo from my daughter's condo) and it is virtually the difference between night and day. During the day (sunny or overcast) it looks just like a light

Sidewalks need to be kept clear

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Along the sidewalks of Cohasset – As you may have gathered, we are staunch supporters of adding sidewalks to our Town and we love to see them being used. The new sidewalk on Forest Avenue is a case in point. We are constantly amazed at the number of people we see enjoying the new sidewalk on Forest Avenue from North Main Street to Black Rock Beach. It is really great to see people enjoying them.

We occasionally get questions about when the new sidewalk will be finished along Route 3A from Lower King Street to the Greenbush Station. (Keep in mind, this sidewalk will now link to the new path into Wompatuck Park which starts at the station.) Actually, we are waiting for the MBTA to complete their road widening work on Route 3A before we begin. So, construction could start as early as this fall.

Another sidewalk issue that bears mentioning… Where we are fortunate enough to have sidewalks already in place, it is important for property owners to keep their walks clear. In some places, the sidewalks are nearly impassable due to untrimmed bushes and overgrown shrubs. Mothers with carriages and children on their bikes are forced into the street or on sometimes uneven ground to get around the bushes. Please take a look at your sidewalk adjacent to your property and do your part to assure safe passage for all.

Bike path into Wompatuck – We have spoken about the new walk/bike path from the Cohasset Greenbush Station to Wompatuck Park. This past week, we learned that the new path will stay under the control of the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation when it is complete. They will have the responsibility for maintenance and oversight.

Little Harbor project – Last week we mentioned that there was an elusive leak in the new sewer line on Deep Run. Fortunately, that leak was found and corrected, so paving can commence. Consequently, this week will set a giant milestone for the Little Harbor Project. Deep Run will be the first road on the project that will have the new base coat of asphalt laid down. This was scheduled to happen on Thursday, July 10th. So, by the time you read this, dust will just be a memory on Deep Run. We might mention that this is only the base coat of asphalt. The base coat will be left to over-winter and settle, as all construction work inevitably does. Next year, the settling will be filled in and the top-coat of asphalt will be laid. This will create the final smooth road surface.

But, there turned out to be one other last-minute problem that cropped up. There was a spot on Deep Run where ground water routinely went over the roadway, causing an icy slippery road in the winter. Fortunately, we caught the situation, thanks to the input from a group of neighbors, and were able to take corrective action. A new catch basin was designed and installed on several days notice. This new catch basin should take most of the water that previously flowed onto the roadway and direct it into storm drains on Jerusalem Road.

Another very difficult aspect of the Little Harbor Road has been the process of roadway reclamation. First, let's explain what "reclamation" means. When a roadway is "reclaimed" the old asphalt is ground up by a giant toothed machine that finely pulverizes the old asphalt. This is done down through the asphalt to bare earth. The pulverized asphalt is mixed with some of the ground-up earth and graded and rolled to a smooth surface. It turns out that this makes an excellent and stable base for new paving. However, some of the old material may be removed to lower the road height a bit. The reason some material may be removed is so that the road will be at the correct height. When roads are paved without reclaiming, the finished road just gets higher and higher.

The reclamation process has been a sticky problem on some of our roads. I'll bet you're wondering why? Well, the answer lies in one word, "ledge." It seems that when the giant teeth on the reclaimer come in contact with beautiful durable Cohasset ledge, lying just below the road surface, the granite ledge wins every time. The teeth on the grinder break off as if they were made of brittle plastic. For some unknown reason, this did not please the contractor doing the reclaiming. In fact, it pleased him so little; he stopped working and asked for technical assistance.

New Deep Run catch basin construction.

So what to do? The technical wizards with our principal engineering firm came up with a very interesting potential solution. They hired a vendor with a "ground penetrating radar" machine. This machine is manually pushed over a road way and senses dramatic changes in the density of the material under the roadway. This density change is indicative of ledge. If this device does what the engineers hope, we will be able guide the reclaimer around the areas containing serious sub-surface ledge. This will save his machine from breaking teeth, and work can continue.

MBTA Greenbush – The work progresses on Route 3A widening. As you drive through this area please be careful. There are lots of trucks and construction machines in a very congested area.

A hundred years of local baseball

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Is anyone aware that the Braintree White Sox, currently one of the powers in the semi-pro Cranberry League, played their first baseball game as a team 100 years ago?

I came across that item a few years ago one rainy afternoon while winding my way though the microfilm at the Thayer Public Library in search of something else that I never found.

The March 28, 1908, edition of the Braintree Observer reported:

"The White Sox held their monthly meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Joe Drinkwater. And to say that there was something doing would be putting it mild.

"The principal talk of the evening was the raising of the sum of one hundred dollars.

"The White Sox baseball association has gotten a team together, strictly of Braintree ball tossers, which they expect will be able to represent our town in a way that there can be no kick from anyone."

The first game was scheduled with the Commercials of Weymouth on April 19 but there is no indication the game was played.

Then, the June 27, 1908, edition of the Braintree Bee reported:

"At the game last Saturday noon on French's Common, the Royal White Sox defeated the strong Hyde Park aggregation by a score of 4 to 0."

The lineup for that first White Sox team included Newcomb rf, Joe Drinkwater 1b, Chubby Coose 2b, Levangie 3b, Weston p, DeYoung ss, DeCoste lf, Captain Perry cf, Mahar c.

Two others who played for the early day White Sox were a catcher named Walter "Beak" Delorey, who later gained fame as an umpire, and a pitcher, Holly Morales, who some said might have made the majors if he weren't black.

The 1930s was the heyday of the White Sox, indeed, the heyday of all semi-pro baseball. Who could afford the Red Sox when all you had to do was drop a quarter in a hat and watch a good game in your hometown?

Every town on the South Shore had a team of its own — the Copelands and the Brooksides of Quincy, the Cunningham AC of Milton, Taunton Lumber, Plymouth Cordage, the Hull Baysides and the Weymouth Pals.

The Pals, who played in North Weymouth on a field behind the Bicknell School, were the class of the local semi-pros, featuring an underhand pitcher named Charlie Bird, another whose race kept him out of the Big Show.

Braintree had three teams in those days, the White Sox, the Town Team and the Kenesaw AC, who used to pack 'em into French's Common for the annual year-ending series for the town championship.

The Common was a special place for baseball, with the town hall jutting out into right field about a hundred feet behind first base. Pop flies hit over the building were a ground rule double.

The Braintree White Sox of the 30s had a national reputation, too, when Charlie Abell was catching and Walter "Sugar" Cain pitching and Bob "Believe it or Not" Ripley discovered that Cain and Abell were a battery for the Sox.

There is a Mouse who Lives in our House

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

By Diane K. Danielson, with a little help from her son

There is a mouse who lives in our house.
He scurries around in the walls.
I heard him one night, after twilight and thought ghosts might be haunting our halls.

Our house is quite old and down by the sea,
in a quaint fishing town called Cohasset.
The town is so small, in the blink of an eye you could easily drive right on past it.

The rocks and the cliffs that grow out of the sea, make even a stormy day pretty.
But sometimes it's strange to be here on the coast with none of the noise of the city.

My Mom bought this house on top of a hill, with a yard and green grass where I play.
And an office for her on the first floor,
where she works at her desk most the day.

The house is much bigger than our old apartment, and nighttime is much darker too.
There aren't any streetlights to brighten the night,
like the ones in the city would do.

When outside my window, I hear scary noises,
I'm glad to be safe in my bed.
Mom says the noises are raccoon and deer,
all looking to get themselves fed.

Once I heard scratching from inside the house.
That night I did not sleep a wink.
No raccoon or deer that I'm likely to hear makes noises like that I would think.

I pulled all the covers up over my head, and tried to stay very still.
The scratching kept coming and going all night.
I thought ghosts had now climbed up our hill.

And decided to join us in our brand new home.
But wait! We were the ones who joined them.
We've only been here for less than a year, and the house for one-hundred and ten.

The ghosts had more years to settle in here;
and what if they did not like me?
Maybe I am the stranger, who poses some danger and they were just looking to flee.

Whatever it was, my thoughts were abuzz
when I came down for breakfast that morning.
Mom did not know of my fright in the night, and I wanted to give her some warning.

For she is the one, who works all alone, in the house after I go to school.
I thought once or twice, maybe ghosts can be nice?
And perhaps she would think that they're cool.

But some can be scary, and she should be wary.
I hope she knows just what to do.
To ghosts who are bad, I'd give all I had,
and scream them away with a "Boo!"

Even as hosts to the nicest of ghosts, they might give us a fright in the day.
And I did not want Mom to take them all on,
by herself, when I was away.

So I told of the haunting all through the night.
And she laughed and said she'd be fine.
If she ran into ghosts or even a goblin, she'd ask them to stay and to dine.

Perhaps over dinner, they'd tell us the stories of people who lived here before.
I wanted to stay and talk more about ghosts,
but she hustled me out of the door.

"Now go catch your bus, and stop all this fuss," she said as she gave me my lunch.
I then spent my day, plotting away about how to beat ghosts by the bunch.

I imagined myself wearing a sheet and acting like one of the gang.
Then tricking them all into leaving the house, and shutting the door with a bang.

Or maybe I'd mention, I have an invention that I use to make ghosts disappear.
And with one little blast, I'd wipe them out fast
"Leave now and have nothing to fear!"

I'd just have to corner them all in one place
Preferably up in my room.
Then with a roar, I'd make it my chore to suck them all up with our vacuum.

But, maybe it's better to use my new wand
And zap them away with a spell.
For Harry at Hogwarts who does this quite often
It seems to work out very well.

I figured it out, so without a doubt
I knew I would come out the winner.
But I started to wonder, if I'd made a blunder, as darkness fell right after dinner.

Later that night, Mom tucked me in tight, and I asked her to stay for a bit.
So we curled up together, safe in my bed except this time the night light was lit.

We waited in silence for ghosts to arrive, and just when I felt kind of silly
We heard a faint scratching from out in the hall.
Like feet running all willy nilly.

Mom told me "Quick! Put your ear to the wall."
And we heard the small footsteps grow near.
We listened some more, then she let out a roar,
as she knew we had nothing to fear.

For there is a mouse, who lives in our house.
He scurries around in the walls.
Now late at night, I don't get such a fright,
when I hear our "ghost" haunting our halls.

Diane K. Danielson and her son are pleased to report that they have both adjusted to life in Cohasset – wildlife, ghosts and all.

Town Hall plans envision former glory

Renovation plans are laid out

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Anyone that has been in the old portion of Town Hall lately knows the building needs a little facelift.

The upstairs offices are cramped. The windows are hard to open and drafty. The basement leaks.

The building is old — and it looks old.

The once glorious mid-19th century building — and a central part of the town's infrastructure — hasn't had any significant improvements since 1928.

Now, plans are on the table to return the building to its original and historic form, but with the modern amenities a town building demands. With the support of Town Meeting, the Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee has been working alongside architectural consultant Carr, Lynch and Sandell to devise a comprehensive plan to update the antique building.

To understand the proposal, a bit of history is necessary. In 1928, the then 71-year-old building got a major overhaul and reconfiguration. The auditorium, originally situated on the second floor, was moved to the first floor and town offices were adapted to the second floor.

The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee and the architects are recommending unanimously returning the Town Hall not only to its original glory, but also to its original configuration —essentially flip-flopping the auditorium and town offices. The other option would be to leave the configuration relatively the same and make modern improvements.

The most striking difference between the two possible schemes is the estimates are separated by $1.2 million. Preliminary estimates for the two designs are $3.2 million to leave the general building configuration the same (scheme A) and $4.4 million to change it (scheme B).

"The whole idea is to do it once and do it right," said David Farrag, chairman of the Town Hall Committee. "We want to recapture the history."

John Hecker of Carr, Lynch and Sandell described the current state of the Town Hall as a "death by a thousand cuts." Many makeshift and Band-Aid approaches have been made over the years to further complicate the renovation, said Hecker. There are temperature fluxuations that make for an uncomfortable workplace environment, multiple fire code violations and an overloading of filing cabinets on the second floor.

Despite the numerous problems, Hecker said generally speaking the building envelope was in good condition, but not being used to optimize space, efficiency and access.

In "scheme A" (where the auditorium remains on the first floor), Hecker said there were advantages to the familiarity of the layout. The plan proposed improved building systems (lighting, heat, fire sprinkler system), handicap accessibility, interior improvement and more public space.

However, there were disadvantages. Hecker said the layout of the town offices would remain the same with no flexibility for future changes, extensive demolition would be required for systems upgrade, physical and technical limitations of auditorium/stage and the obscuring of the building's historic identity.

Scheme B, Hecker said, accomplished all of the project goals (see sidebar). It created the most efficient use of space, increasing the useable square footage in nearly all the town hall's many functions. The scheme simplified the construction process as far as system improvements because the current auditorium ceiling will have to be removed.

"This scheme improves access and makes the town offices the primary focus," while also enabling more flexible office layout, said Hecker. "It restores the historical integrity of the building and allows better spatial function.

In addition, the hope is the second floor auditorium and meeting hall could become a rentable — and income producing — location for the town.

"The main focus is to maximize and enhance the utilization of the Town Hall's current space," said Farrag, adding he wants the renovation to make the building ready for use now and for future generations.

The Board of Selectmen weren't ready to offer up its collective (or individual) opinion on which option to pursue.

"There's no question people are going to blanche at $4.4 million," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer. He pressed the architects and committee to think about how to justify the additional million-dollar cost. Farrag said there were some state and federal programs that offer reimbursement (up to 20 percent of the cost) if a town creates an income-producing venue. The new auditorium would be a community space that could be used by various groups in and out of town from weddings to banquets.

"We want to achieve this without a heavy tax burden," said Jim Sandell, a Cohasset resident and consulting architect. Through fundraising, future revenues and tax credits, "there are ways we can make it viable and make it reasonable. But, we want to design it in a way people will want to use it."

The cost estimates do not include the soft costs associated with the construction, which includes re-locating town offices for likely what will be a year. The cost also does not include the $300,000 of Community Preservation funds already authorized by Town Meeting to restore the windows and complete other exterior work.

"We're not omniscient on this one. If we hear what other people think, that would be good," said Dormitzer. The Committee plans to visit with other town committees and groups to gather input in the coming weeks.

"At the end of the day, the decision is going to rest with the citizenry," said Farrag as the project will need to go before Town Meeting to get funding and approval.

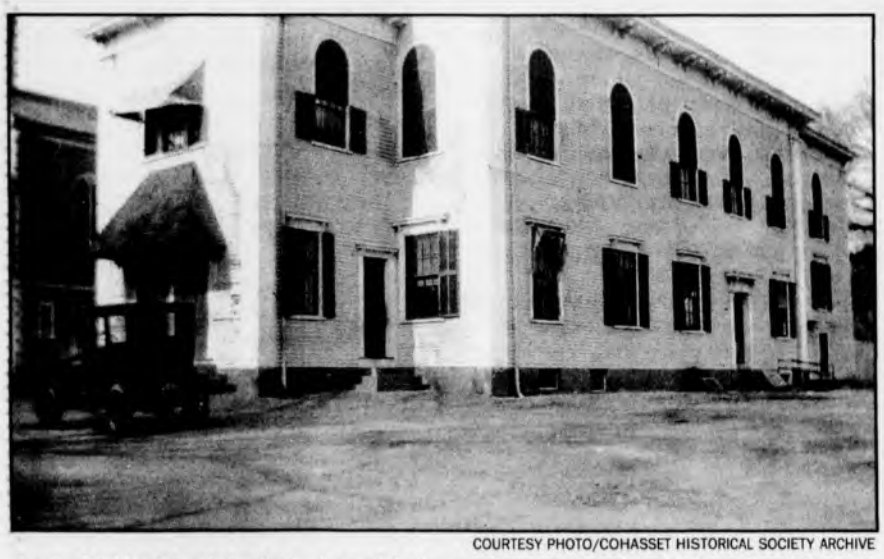
The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee will report back to the Selectmen the feedback they receive.

The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee advised the Selectmen they would need to know which of the schemes the town would like to move forward with before the end of this month. Applications for a state grant opportunity are due by the end of August. The topic will be up for discussion again at the July 21 Selectmen's meeting.

Project goals

- Re-establish historic integrity of the building.
- Create a better work environment for town employees.
- Improve energy efficiency.
- Update and modernize theatre and auditorium capabilities.
- Undertake space utilization analysis to determine the best use of existing space.
- Improve handicapped accessibility.

Town Hall history in brief



- Built in 1857.
- The building has been used primarily to house town offices, but also myriad activities and functions. It's been the host for the town library, the high school, dancing classes, minstrel shows, movies, plays, fancy dress balls, recitals, lectures, just to name a few.
- In 1880, the front section which now houses the auditorium foyer and the accounting offices was added.
- In 1928, the Town Hall configuration was changed giving the auditorium the first floor and moving town offices to the second floor. A gabled roof was added to the front part of the building.
- In 1933, the South Shore Players took up shop at the Cohasset Town Hall and put on summer theatre productions.
- In 1988, instead of transforming the auditorium space into town offices, an addition was built to the Town Hall to accommodate the growing needs of town offices.

"The whole idea is to do it once and do it right. We want to recapture the history."

On March 4, 1889 Cohasset men and boys gathered at Town Hall to participate in Town Meeting. By 1889, the front section of the building housing the Selectmen's office (now, the finance office) and the foyer has been added. The auditorium remained on the second floor

Bracing for the hurricane season

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As of last Monday, Hurricane Bertha, with winds at 90 mph, was centered about 720 miles east northeast of the northern Leeward Islands in the eastern Atlantic and moving west northwest at 12 mph. However, the National Weather Service says that there is no threat to land at this time.

Nevertheless, it's time to review the things we must think about in these tricky weather times. During this year's Atlantic Hurricane Season – June 1 through Nov. 30 – the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency urges homeowners to protect their property from strong winds, damaging rains and flooding that hurricanes or tropical storms can bring to New England. Your home is subject to storm surge or inland flooding if it is near the waterfront and at an elevation less than 10 feet above sea level. MEMA instructions cover preparation before a hurricane, and also when it is time to consider evacuation or other extreme measures.

Preparation

•Make a record of your personal property. Keep an itemized list of your furniture, clothing and valuables to assist adjusters in case of a claim. Back it up with photographs or video. Protect your insurance policies, hopefully including flood insurance, and other important documents in a secure place like a safe deposit box or a watertight box.

• Keep trees and shrubbery trimmed. Remove diseased or damaged tree limbs that could be blown down during a storm.

• Clear clogged rain gutters. Providing clear drainage will help prevent misdirected flooding.

• Make sure storage sheds or other outbuildings are securely anchored, either to a permanent foundation or with straps and ground anchors.

• Make temporary plywood covers to protect windows and sliding doors. Drill holes for screws or lag bolts in each cover and around each window. Use a numbering or lettering system that shows which cover goes with which window. Store the mounting screws or lag bolts with the covers in a place where they are readily accessible. Note: Taping of windows does not prevent them from breaking.

• Make a list of outdoor items to bring inside in case of a storm, such as lawn furniture, trash barrels, hanging plants, toys and awnings. A list will help you remember anything that can be broken or picked up by strong winds and used as a missile.

• Learn to safely shut off utilities and where gas pilots and water mains are located.

Shelter-in-Place

If it looks like you're in for a "big one," MEMA instructions cover "Sheltering-in-Place," a standard protective action utilized in emergency management. Used more often during an accident or a hazardous material spill, it's also invoked during a severe storm or hurricane when conditions warrant indoor shelter. Local public safety officials may instruct you to Shelter-in-Place. As with evacuations, the town would use a number of alerting methods: The Emergency Alert System – information provided on the radio and television; National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration Weather Alert Radio; All Call, Reverse 911 or Code Red – one of a number of automated telephoning systems for sending recorded messages. The town has several up-to-date systems. Be alert for outdoor sirens or horns, Residential Route Alerting, which dispatches Public Safety vehicles through neighborhoods announcing messages with public address systems or literally knocking on doors, U.S. Coast Guard Marine Broadcast, Teletypewriters.

When you hear Shelter-in-Place, carry out the following MEMA instructions:

• If told to do so, immediately go indoors. Close and lock all doors and windows. Locking is preferred since it generally ensures that the door or window is shut tight. Close drapes, blinds and window shades.

• Protect windows with predrilled plywood sheets; which you were supposed to have made during the above preparation phase.

• Go to a room in the center of your home with the fewest windows and doors. It is ideal to have a hard-wired telephone in the room you select. Cellular telephone equipment may be overwhelmed during an emergency. Do not call your local fire or police departments for information. Emergency workers will need their lines for emergency use. If necessary, call your local emergency management office. Unless given another number to call, use Police 383-1212 or Fire 383-0616. Use 911 only in an emergency. Use the State 211 line to obtain the answers to routine questions.

• Take your Family Disaster Kit to your in-place shelter location.

• Keep pets indoors. Make sure you have additional food and water supplies for them. If you have livestock, shelter them, also. Provide them with stored feed and water.

• Continue to monitor radios, TV, etc.

• Stay inside until officials say otherwise.

• If in your vehicle and you're advised to Shelter-in-Place seek nearby shelter immediately.

For additional information, consult the MEMA Web page at www.mass.gov/mema.

Sun tube placement questioned

COMMENTARY

fixture and you have to do a double take to make sure that you haven't turned on the lights. Even on cloudy days and nights with a full moon, the tube will deliver every bit of light the sky has to offer.

Cohasset with the assistance of our paid energy consultant has received a sustainability grant of $17,050 of which $16,000 is being used to purchase and install only 8 sun tubes or $2,000 per tube. Having investigated the per cost of the all inclusive tube kits Cohasset is installing ($416.60) and the estimated time for installation (4 man hours) this price appears unusually high. Inquiries to people in power haven't yielded answers by deadline.

The tubes were originally slated for the DPW garage but are to be installed in the Deer Hill Cafeteria instead. In a recent article, it was stated that the consultant is pleased with them going to a school as the location will allow for more visibility of the technology. The town facilities manager, Brian Adams, stated in the same article that "on a cloudy day they won't do anything". These statements indicate a lack of understanding of the technology and the priorities.

The most efficient use of the sun tube is in a windowless room, closet or hallway. In the revised proposed application the taxpayers' money is being spent on an energy saving retrofit in a new renovation to try them out in a room that has an entire wall of windows which has the shades lowered most of the time.

Cohasset unfortunately does have the reputation of putting aesthetics and politics before practicality. Through our recent $52 million school renovations we have seen energy and maintenance savings suggestions totally disregarded.

It already cost us millions to renovate. It will cost us thousands more for excess energy usage and to maintain, repair and retrofit the results of giving in to consultants rather than using common sense. Let's not do it again. From now on let's make sure we get the full value of tax dollars.

With the limited amount of funds available and in the interests of public safety in the event of an emergency or a major power outage, providing daylight illumination for dark areas in the high school (our emergency shelter) and in the DPW garage should be the highest priority.

Post 118 fights for playoff spot

Scituate/Cohasset crushes Morrisette at home Monday night; loses heartbreaker Wednesday against Milton

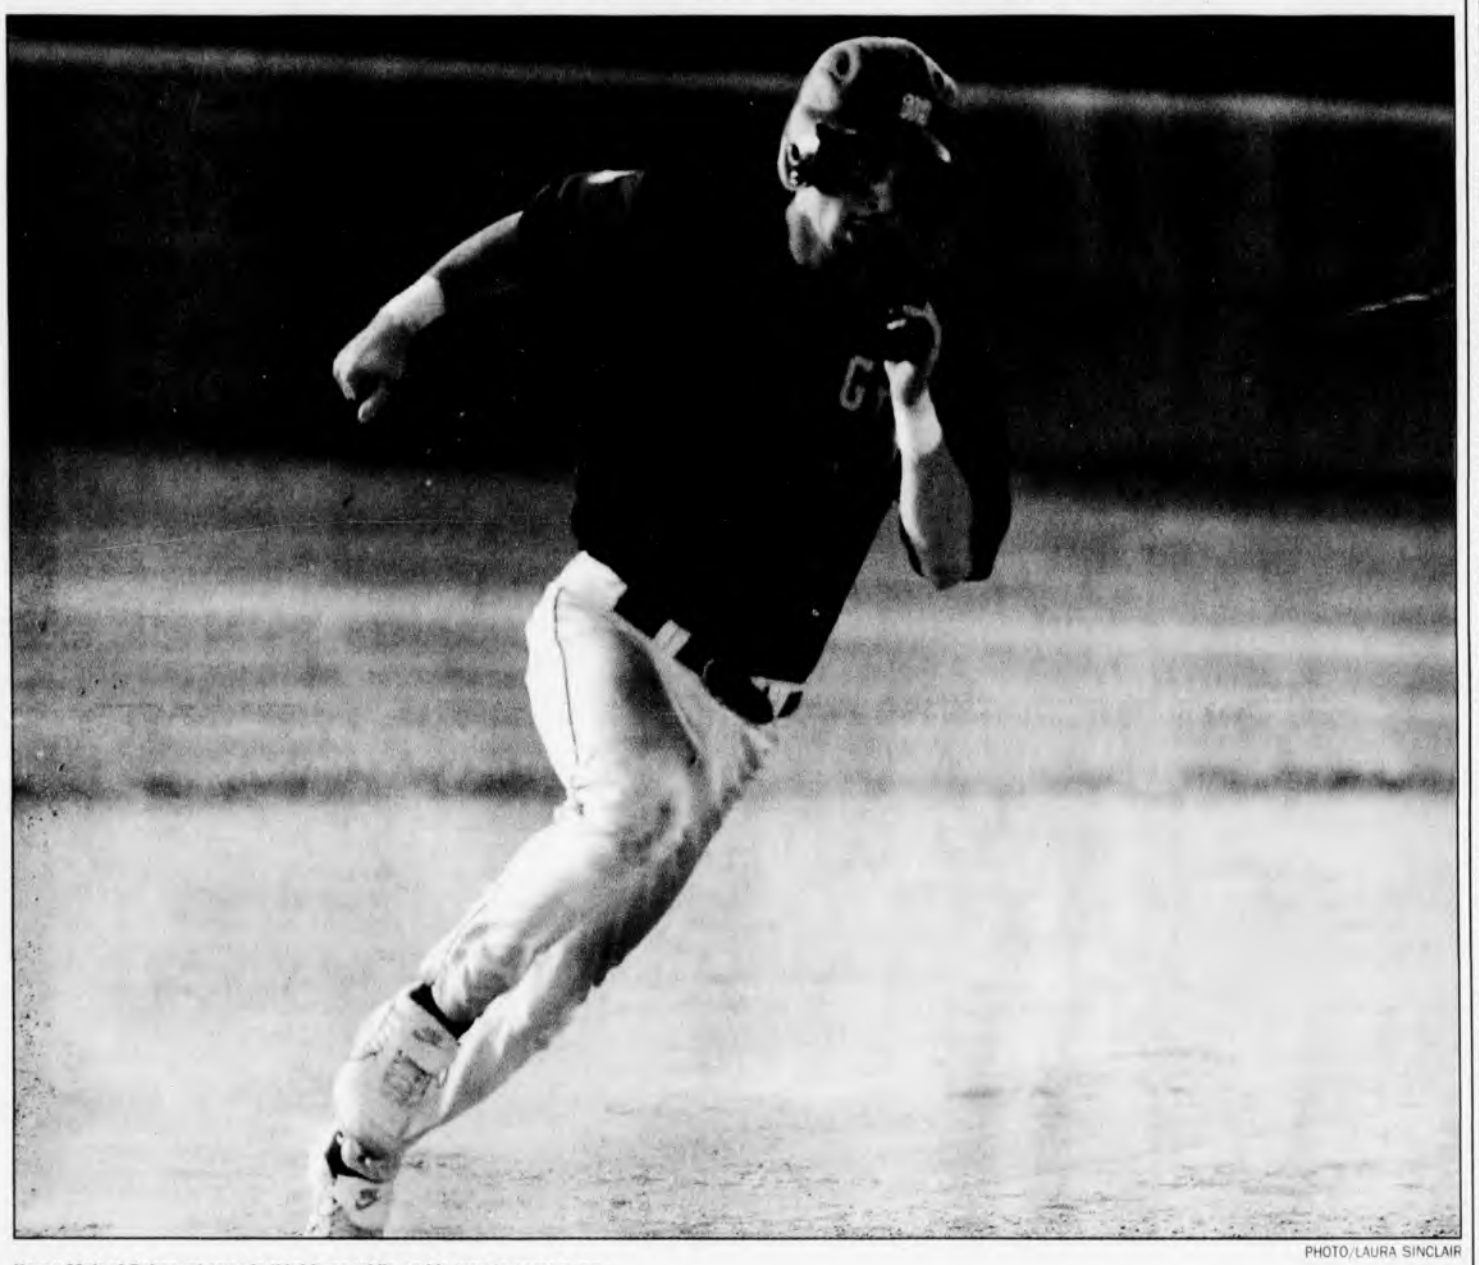
By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 baseball team is working its way back into playoff contention and took a big step in that direction with a dominating 15-3 victory over Morrisette, Monday night at Scituate High School. It followed up with a tough-luck 5-4 loss against Milton, Wednesday. Post 118 is 5-9 overall, leaving them a game out of the final playoff spot with four games left to play.

Post 118 will play at Holbrook, Thursday, July 10 past Cohasset Mariner deadline. Cohasset/Scituate wraps the season up with games against Holbrook at home Monday, Weymouth at home Tuesday and at Catholic Memorial against West Roxbury, Wednesday.

Post 118 head coach Scott Arnold hopes his guys can win three-out-of four and end up in the fifth spot in District 6 East.

Sam DeGiacomo was the loser on the mound, Wednesday, despite pitching well-enough to win. Tommy Chase and Jordan Berry both had nice days at the dish.



After surrendering three runs in the top of the first against Morrisette on Monday, Post 118's Brian Hill settled down and allowed no hits and just two base runners the rest of the game. He finished with five strikeouts. Hill is scheduled to pitch the first of a two game set against Holbrook, Thursday.

Arnold wasn't worried about Hill after his shaky start.

"He's always been a gamer," Arnold said. "He pitched his heart out [today]."

Post 118 continues to mash. Ken Muir (RBI walk), Mike Signorelli (two RBI double) and Williamsport team rolls

Shutout previously unbeaten Canton

Cohasset's Little League Williamsport team remained undefeated in Little League's annual Williamsport Tournament with a 5-0 win against previously undefeated Canton, Saturday afternoon.

Jack Kuppens hurled a masterpiece, as he shut down a Canton squad that had scored 15 runs in its first two games. Kuppens went five innings for the boys in Blue, scattering three hits, striking out five, and walking only two.

Kuppens escaped his only scare in the first inning. Cohasset's big right-hander walked the first Canton batter, and hit the second. A passed ball placed runners on second and third with no outs. With the Canton faithful on their feet, a Kuppens' fastball bounced to the backstop and Cohasset's catcher Max Montgomery scooted after the ball, and threw a strike to the charging Kuppens, as he beat the Canton runner to the plate.

Kuppens then wheeled, and fired a laser to Tommy Ryan at third, nailing the Canton runner trying to advance from second, completing the double play.

Kuppens settled into his rhythm, and never allowed the Canton Green back in. The Cohasset bats did their part in the bottom of the first. Terrence Doonan led off with a walk, and Brendan O'Connell followed with a line single up the middle.

After Canton recorded an out, Doonan and O'Connell advanced on a wild pitch. Liam Burke then lined a single to plate the two, and Cohasset grabbed an early 2-0 lead.

In the bottom of the second, Cohasset scored a third run, keyed by hits from Tommy Powers, Tommy O'Brien, Doonan, O'Connell and Burke again.

Both teams went down without a score in the third, with Canton's centerfielder robbing Cohasset's Chris Cohen of an extra base hit. But in the fourth, after Kuppens retired Canton without a run, Cohasset rallied

Girls U18 soccer team repeats as Coastal League champions

Represent the Coastal League in the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions

The Cohasset Soccer Club's Girls Under 18 soccer team recently completed its spring season repeating as the Coastal Youth Soccer League champion for the second straight year. The team finished with a 7-2-1 record and clinched the number one spot in both the Under 18 and Under 19 age categories. Composed of players from Cohasset High School, Notre Dame Academy and Hingham High School the team combined a strong offense with an aggressive defense scoring 28 goals while allowing only 12 goals during the spring season.

As League champions the Cohasset team also represented the Coastal League in the Massachusetts Tournament of Champions held at Massachusetts Youth Soccer's new Lancaster complex. Playing against the best Under 18 teams from throughout the state, Cohasset played well, allowing a total of only four goals throughout the tournament, but did not advance to the playoffs for the weekend.

for two more runs, as O'Brien lined his second hit of the day, Doonan and O'Connell drew walks, Kuppens got an RBI the hard way – plunked in the side – and Mickey Barry lined a base hit for an RBI.

Cohasset led 5-0 heading into the fifth.

Kuppens retired the Canton nine in the fifth, completing his masterpiece with strike outs of the last two batters he faced. Tom Gilliatt took the hill in the sixth, and made like Cohasset's own Pappy, as he slammed the door on Canton, with the help of a nice scoop and throw by Tommy Ryan at third.

Cohasset now sits as one of only four undefeated teams in district play, and moves on to face Milton American on Tuesday evening, July 8, at 6 p.m. in Stoughton, passed Cohasset Mariner deadline.

Post 118 fights for playoff spot

"When our starting nine is together we can play with anyone."
Post 118 coach Scott Arnold

Time McGrath (two RBI double) got Cohasset/Scituate on the board producing five runs in the bottom of the first inning. Home runs by DeGiacomo and McGrath and RBI doubles by Chase and Brendan Doonan helped Post 118 pull away.

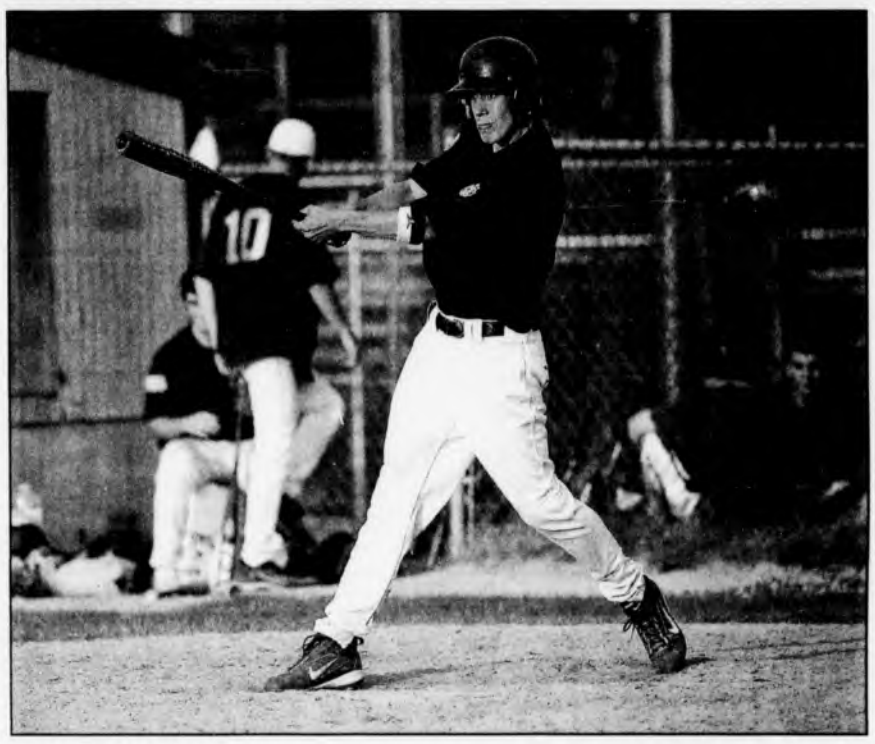
"One thing about amateur baseball like this is there are a lot of runs," Arnold said.

"We got a really good shot now [at getting in the playoffs]," Arnold said after Monday's win. "All the top teams are behind us. Our goal is to win out. We have seen everybody [so far]."

Post 118 notes

New players this year include Brendan Doonan out of Cohasset (third base), Jordan Berry from Milton Academy (right field), John Giuggio from Choate Rosemary Hall Prep (catcher), Jeff Cavanaro out of Cohasset (pitcher), John Kearney out of Cohasset and Rob McCunney from Boston College High School.

Other key players include Sam DeGiacomo, Mike Signorelli, Pat Doonan, Tommy Chase and Brian Hill.



Brendan Doonan has done well from leadoff with Berry driving in the runs from cleanup. McCunney, the team's future shortstop, filled in and did a great job when Notre Dame bound Tommy Chase was playing for the state champion BC High Eagles.

DeGiacomo continues to play well in the outfield and on the mound, where he beat West Roxbury last Wednesday.

Chase continues to "be a role model for the younger kids," according to Arnold. Pat Doonan is giving Post 118 great defense at second, and Hill, Doonan's CHS teammate is 3-1 on the mound.

"When our starting nine is together we can play with anyone," Arnold said. "We have had a tough start due to players missing and other players out of position but we plan on ending the season strong. We are all together for the rest of the season and we will step up. It should be fun to watch."

Coaches Bob Barrow and Greg Taylor have also made a big impact this season.

Tim McGrath of Scituate hits a home run for Post 118.

13-AND-UNDER GIRLS LACROSSE NOTEBOOK

At the season-ending South Shore Lacrosse Jam, it was another great day for the 13-and-Under girls lacrosse teams.

The 13-U Blue team (grades 5 and 6) finished the season on a 10-game winning streak, culminated by a sweep of the jamboree games against Braintree, Plymouth and Sandwich. The team was a bit sluggish in the first half of the opener against Braintree, but pulled together nicely in the second stanza.

Braintree was strong on the draw and Cohasset made some adjustments that featured Annie McElgunn muscling her way to several draw controls with outstanding second effort. After a few quick Braintree goals, Molly Fitzgerald moved from attack to defense and teamed with Emily Robbins to shut down the fast breaks and help the squad close out a 10-8 win.

The second game saw Plymouth hang tough in the first half, allowing the Blue to get out to just a one-goal lead at the break. The second half was a different story, as Olivia Blackburn returned to form in the cage and turned away all but one shot. Cohasset also got its passing game in gear as Jackie Driscoll found Victoria Bryan just outside the crease for a quick goal.

Christina Tedeschi — playing her best games of the season at the Lax Jam — controlled the middle of the field with great speed, strong checking and was a vacuum on the ground balls. Lexa Grasz displayed her smooth moves with outstanding face dodges and pinpoint shooting. Kathryn Dunn showed great control around the cage, moving from the crease to the X position and finding open teammates and the back of the net often, as the Blue squad pulled away for a 9-3 win.

The final game against Sandwich saw some great firsts, as goalie Olivia Blackburn stepped onto the field as a middie and attack player for the first time this season and made a strong move to score her first career goal. Her sister, Madeline, ran like a deer all over the field for ground balls and just missed her first career goal as she bounced one off the pipe.

Robbins was a stalwart on defense all season and got a chance to taste the glory of scoring as she flew down the left wing and fired home her first career goal. Team MVP Maggie Ernst kept everyone smiling as she showed her love of the game and hustled all over the field. Elizabeth Baker and Rebecca Brown played strong defense and helped hold Sandwich to only three goals as the final score was 10-3.

The end of the season showed just how much promise this group has for the future; Lexa Grasz moved into the top 15 in career scoring for the girls youth program with 54 career points, while Kathryn Dunn stands 20th on the all-time list with 33 career points. Olivia Blackburn is likely to cross the 100-save mark for her career in the first game next year, which would make her just the fifth Cohasset youth goaltender to break the century mark.

The 13-U White team won two of its three games — against Sandwich, Scituate and Norwell — at the Lax Jam. Goalie Hanna Cooper continued to show great improvement and stamina by playing all three games between the pipes and making 15 saves over the course of the games; she went on to finish the day playing in the cage for one of the 15-and-Under teams.

Maddie Curley, Peyton MacNaught, Isabelle Dunne, Charlotte Allard, Katie McCabe and Mackenzie Axelson led the offensive charge and all had multiple goals and assists on the day.

Maggie Littlejohn was a defensive force all day and Alison Bodner notched her first goal of the season. Caroline Prescott, Morgen Montgomery, Erin Driscoll and Cassandra Lieberman all made contributions with great hustle and determination.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds its annual registration for the spring season beginning in November and is always on the lookout for more volunteer coaches. For more information, go to cohassetlacrosse.com.

New England is flush with indoor attractions

Stephen Jermanok
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

BOSTON -Ahh, New England. The granite peaks of the White Mountains that top out at 6,000 feet. Vermont's bucolic countryside, where the farmland is so lush you feel like jumping out of your car and digging your hands in the soil. The shallow shores of Connecticut's Long Island Sound; the dunes of Cape Cod National Seashore and Martha's Vineyard; and the rocky coast of Maine Winslow Homer captured so magnificently.

Yet, what happens when Mother Nature fails to cooperate and we're forced to retreat from the great outdoors? No problem. New England offers a slew of interesting places to escape inclement weather.

Take a ride in a Model T at the Owl's Head Transportation Museum in Rockland, Maine, where you'll find plenty of inside attractions too.

New Bedford National Historic Park

The 13-block radius of the New Bedford National Historic Park (the Visitor Center is located at 33 Williams St.) speaks of a time in America when whale oil was worth its weight in gold. At the Whaling Museum (18 Johnny Cake Hill; www.whalingmuseum.org), a 65-foot-long skeleton of a blue whale hangs from the ceiling, but the museum's centerpiece is a half-scale replica of the whaleboat, Lagoda, built in 1916 and still the largest ship model in existence. The original Lagoda was built in 1826 and sailed the seas for more than 60 years.

Across the street from the museum is the white steepled chapel known as Seamen's Bethel (15 Johnny Cake Hill). Herman Melville came to this small church and was so amazed by the chaplain of the time, the passionate Rev. Enoch Mudge, that he created a character based on him in "Moby Dick."www.nps.gov/nebe/-index.htm

Shelburne Museum, South Burlington, Vt.

In the Burlington area, take comfort in the vast confines of the Shelburne Museum, seven miles south of town off Route 7. Both kids and their parents will love the mind-boggling collection of 150,000 objects collected by Electra Havemeyer (1888-1960) and housed in 37 buildings. The buildings themselves are museum pieces, having been moved here from other parts of New England to save them from the bulldozer. Highlights include a sawmill (1786); covered bridge (1845); lighthouse (1871); a luxury private rail coach (1890); historic round barn (1901); an authentic Lake Champlain side-wheeler steamboat, the SS Ticonderoga (1906); even a railroad station complete with locomotive (1915). Art exhibitions include works by renowned 19th and early 20th century painters Claude Monet, Mary Cassatt, Edgar Degas, Winslow Homer, and Grandma Moses. www.shelburnemuseum.org

Norman Rockwell Museum, Stockbridge

Artist Norman Rockwell (1894-1978) lived and worked in Stockbridge for the last 50 years of his life. During that time, he would create 321 covers for the Saturday Evening Post, as well as illustrations for books, posters and many other magazines, easily becoming the most popular illustrator in American history. The Norman Rockwell Museum houses more than 200 of his best-known works. www.nrm.org

Mark Twain House, Hartford, Conn.

In 1873, Samuel Clemens, otherwise known as Mark Twain, purchased a large plot of land on Farmington Avenue in Hartford, Conn. Across the street was none other than Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The cost of building his home went quickly over budget, but the family moved in the following year. Twain lived here until 1891 and would write two of his most famous books in this house: "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" (1884) and "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" (1889). Today, the Mark Twain House is open to the public (fundraising efforts have helped it overcome some recent budgetary issues). www.marktwainhouse.org

Dots and dashes once flew from what is now the French Cable Station Museum in Orleans.

Cape Cod was once a communications hub

IN NEW ENGLAND

Diane Speare Triant
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

ORLEANS - Who would suspect that Cape Cod's sleepy shores were once a communications hub for the entire nation, pioneering the technologies that today power cell phones, TV and the Internet? A century ago, the Cape's arm reaching toward Europe made it a trailblazer in cable and wireless exchanges. At two sites, visitors can learn more about where technology history happened.

The French Cable Station Museum in Orleans looks like an unassuming four-room cottage shaded by lazy linden trees but was for decades a beehive of action, receiving dots and dashes flying along the first uninterrupted transatlantic cable. Unreeled from Europe (Brest, France) to Orleans in 1898 by a French company, Le Direct (as the cable was named), stretched an astonishing 3,173 nautical miles underwater. It relayed to America, via Orleans, such historical mega-news as Lindbergh's landing in Paris, and served as the primary link with our nation's World War I forces in France.

The telegraphic instruments remain, and at today's museum you can try out such curiosities as the Siphon Recorder that used glass pens dipped in ink to record incoming Morse code as peaks and valleys on a running tape; or the Automatic Message Sender that transmitted dots and dashes as key-punched holes.

A short drive up the coast to South Wellfleet brings more technology history as you visit a site made famous by an all-time-great techie: physicist Guglielmo Marconi.

Standing on Wellfleet's spectacular beach bluff with an ocean-to-bay panorama, you'll understand why Marconi - dubbed "the father of the radio" - chose this spot for his audacious 1903 attempt to jump a wireless signal across the Atlantic. He accomplished it by erecting four colossal radio towers, persuading President Theodore Roosevelt to compose a greeting to Britain's King Edward VII, and transmitting the message to England in a shower of primitive sparks. Telegraph keys soon clacked a royal reply, and the wireless era was born.

Today at the Marconi Site the station is gone, but an oceanside scale-model exhibit offers perspective on the exhilaration the inventor surely felt standing there 105 years ago, poised to make history. Gazing out toward Europe and musing on such wizardry, you might be startled by the chirping of your own cell phone - Marconi's stunning legacy.

For more information on the French Cable Station Museum, call 508-240-1735 or visit www.frenchcablestation-museum.org. For more on the Marconi Site visit www.nps.gov/caco/planyourvisit/marconi-beach.htm.

Owl's Head Transportation Museum, Rockland, Maine

On the coast of Maine, just south of Rockland, stands one of New England's finest collections of antique automobiles, planes and motorcycles. In the large exhibition hall, you'll find a 1901 Oldsmobile, World War I fighter planes and an old Indian motorcycle. And they all still work. Some days you can even ride in their freshly polished Model T. That's a thrill for all ages. www.ohtm.org

Strawbery Banke, Portsmouth, N.H.

Back in its heyday in the mid-18th century, Strawbery Banke was the place for sailors and whalers to find a good pint of grog. Today, the collection of 40 antique buildings on 10 downtown acres showcases the lives of sea captains, wealthy merchants and the working families who've called this place on the Piscataqua River home. If the weather lightens up, check out the new Victorian Children's Garden, where kids can view carnivorous plants such as Venus fly traps and pitcher plants and observe hummingbirds and butterflies. www.strawberybanke-.org

International Tennis Hall of Fame, Newport, R.I.

Just down the road from the famous Bellevue Avenue mansions, The International Tennis Hall of Fame is the only Hall of Fame venue where the public can actually play the sport on its grounds - the legendary grass courts, where the first U.S. National Tennis Championships were held in 1881. When it's raining outdoors, they also offer three indoor award-winning hard courts. Trophies, old racquets and tennis garb can also be seen in the dozen or so rooms. www.tennis-fame.com

Mr. Bean

Sixteen miles north of Portland is Freeport, Maine, the town where Leon Leonwood Bean opened a shop to sell equipment and provisions to hunters and fishermen over a century ago. Today, L.L. Bean's mammoth store is open 365 days a year, 24 hours a day, and sells almost any gear and clothing you would possibly need to enjoy Maine's great outdoors. Even if you're not in a buying mood it's fun to check out the scene and see the latest in equipment offerings - kids may especially enjoy the tent displays. www.llbean.com.

NOTICE OF TAKING

Pursuant to Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 79, Section 7C, you are hereby notified of a taking by eminent domain of land shown on a plan consisting of one (1) sheet and entitled "Land Ownership – Peppermint Brook Drainage Area," dated September 2003, prepared by Norfolk Ram Group for and on file with the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners ("Plan").

Said Order of Taking by the Town of Cohasset ("Town"), acting through its Board of Selectmen, was recorded at the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds on June 13, 2008 in Book 25837, Page 251, at which time the right to damages vested. The Town has awarded the sum set forth in a resolution adopted June 9, 2008. The Town reserves the right to amend any such award of damages at any time prior to the payment thereof for a good cause shown. The Order of Taking and Damage Resolution may be examined at the office of the Town, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, Massachusetts, between the hours of 9:00 A.M. and 12:00 P.M. and 1:00 P.M. and 4:00 P.M., Monday through Friday.

In accordance with Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 79, Section 7D, the Town has determined that the entire award of damages for all of the parcels taken shall be made payable to the Treasurer of the Town of Cohasset for deposit in an interest-bearing account. If you claim entitlement to an award, or any portion thereof, you shall provide an attorney's certification of title and a title abstract of the property to our attorney:

The certification and abstract shall evidence an examination of title covering a period of at least 60 years, the starting point of which shall be a warranty, quitclaim, or duly authorized or empowered fiduciary's deed, which on its face does not suggest any defects. If more than one party appears to be entitled to receive damages allocated for any parcel, it shall be a further requirement that each party having or appearing to have an entitlement to the award jointly direct and authorize the Town Treasurer to disburse the award. In the event that less than all the ownership interests in any parcel have been taken, the Town reserves the right to withhold payment from any claimant who cannot establish ownership of the whole title to any parcel to the Town's satisfaction or to impose additional conditions prior to a partial payment. ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't be Sheepish about asking questions and demanding answers. You not only gain needed information, but also respect for your steadfast search for the truth.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A money problem that shows up early in the week is expeditiously resolved by savvy Bovines who know how to turn a momentary financial lapse into a monetary gain.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to shed negative energy-draining forces and develop a positive approach to handling current, as well as upcoming, personal and/or professional situations.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your urge to do your best on a current task is commendable. But don't let it become all-consuming. Spend some spiritually restorative time with those who love you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be a good time for all you Leos and Leonas to take your bows for your recent achievements and then go off to enjoy some fun times with your prides and joys.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A negative response to a well-intentioned suggestion could communicate a sense of distrust you might later find hard to refute. Think carefully before reacting.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your loving attention comforts a family member who is feeling a bit out of sorts. But be careful to prioritize your time so you don't neglect your work duties.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your curiosity might be resented by some. But those who know you will support your penchant for never settling for less than the truth. So stay with it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A pesky situation from the past recurs, albeit in an altered form. Deal with it promptly before it can go from merely irksome to decidedly troublesome.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't wait too long to submit your proposals after giving them a last look-over. If necessary, you should be able to defend any portion called into question.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A bid to use your workplace dispute-settling skills in another situation is tempting. But be careful: You might not have all the facts you'll need if you agree to do it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) That sense of self-doubt is so untypical of you, you should have no qualms in shaking it off. Remind yourself of all you've done and can do, and then do it again.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Shakespeare's back on Boston Common

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When Greg Ferrisi takes the stage July 18 in "As You Like It" at the Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common, he won't be worried about the forecast. Playing drums in the concert and marching bands at Plymouth Community Intermediate School, Plymouth South High School and Boston University prepared Ferrisi to be ready to perform in all kinds of weather.

"I'll play in the rain. I don't care as long as I can keep my drums dry," said Ferrisi, with a laugh,. "There are microphones, speakers and other electronics used in this production, however, so we can't go on in a rainstorm."

Musician Greg Ferrisi will perform in the Shakespeare comedy "As You Like It" on Boston Common July 18-Aug. 3.

Free Shakespeare on Boston Common attracts a crowd on warm summer evenings.

"As You Like It" is this year's "Free Shakespeare" offering, presented by Citi Performing Arts July 18 through Aug. 3 on Boston Common. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m., and Sundays at 7 p.m.

Ferrisi, born in Weymouth, raised in Plymouth and now a resident of Jamaica Plain, was cast in the comedy because of his background as a musician.

"This is one of the few things I've done musically since graduating from college in 2000. I've been focusing on my acting, but having musical experience is what got me this show. There are a couple of spots in 'As You Like It' where Shakespeare has written songs that comment on the action. Our music director, J Hagenbuckle, has taken Shakespeare's text and put it to music," explained Ferrisi.

"I'm the percussionist in an ensemble that includes accordion, violin, guitar, and vocals. I'll be playing a djembe, which is an African drum, as well as tambourine and maracas. I haven't played in a while, and my drumming had been all but dormant, but fortunately it has come back quickly."

Widely regarded as one of Shakespeare's greatest comedies, "As You Like It" explores status, power and the magical mystery of love through the romantic adventures of Rosalind. The play mixes sorrow and laughter with romance and slapstick comedy to tell a story of life and finding true love.

A story that is new to Ferrisi, who freely acknowledges that "As You Like It" was not Shakespeare he read in high school.

"I hadn't read this one before I was cast. Shakespeare is not always easy, but we've got some real Shakespeare veterans in our cast, so I've been learning an awful lot from them. It has also been great to work with our director, Steven Maler, who is also the founding artistic director of Commonwealth Shakespeare Company," said the performer, who spends his days as a proofreader for a financial printing company. "This is my first Shakespeare production, but I would love to play a bigger role next summer."

"As You Like It" will be performed free on Boston Common, July 18-Aug. 3, with performances Tuesday-Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 7 p.m. The production will also be presented Aug. 8-10 at Forest Park in Springfield. For further information, call 617-482-9393 or go online at citicenter.org.

This way to center stage

Quincy performance camp will untangle the show-biz ropes

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The strong showing of a quintet of performers from Braintree and North Quincy High Schools in the recent Broadway-themed "Boston Pops High School Sing-Off" may have made some local theater fans sit and up and take notice that, just possibly, the next Bernadette Peters and Brian Stokes Mitchell may be living among them on the South Shore.

To help prepare students in grades three to 12 for careers in the theater, Quincy-based producer and entertainment presenter John F. McDonald Jr., founder of JM Productions, has assembled a "faculty" of six seasoned performers from Broadway and national touring shows — including "Mamma Mia!" "Les Miserables," and "Mary Poppins" — to teach a Quincy Musical Summer Camp July 7-19 at North Quincy High School.

The non-audition camp is presented by Children's Corner, a drama, dance and voice studio in Quincy, and JM Productions. The grand finale is July 18, when students and teachers will present the original musical production "You Can't Stop the Beat!" Proceeds from the North Quincy High performance will go to the VH1 Save the Music Foundation.

The entire experience will be chronicled by Boston-based documentary filmmaker Giacomo LaRosa.

In addition, the sextet of Broadway professionals will be performing at the Inn at Bay Pointe in Quincy on July 10 and 15.

"What we are really looking for is a way to provide a summer program for young people from the South Shore that will nurture their interest in music and theater," said McDonald by telephone from his Quincy home last week. "So many students from my Children's Corner program — and other students throughout the South Shore — have a real interest in musical theater and Broadway. We want to foster that interest and we believe this is a great way to do it.

"Our teachers — Jesse Nager, Quiana Smith, Rebecca Kasper, Danny Calvert, Maurice Murphy, and Tara Siesener — will be able to give our students a clear sense of what it takes to sing, dance, and act and really be a Broadway triple threat. We'll cover more than just performing. We'll also get into how to audition, what to wear when you audition, and what it really takes to break into show business."

This is the first year of the partnership between Children's Corner and the VH1 Save the Music Foundation, but the two organizations share similar goals, McDonald said. Save the Music is a nonprofit organization dedicated to restoring instrumental music education in America's schools and raising awareness about the importance of music as a part of each child's complete education. Since 1997, the foundation has provided nearly $40 million worth of new musical instruments to 1,500 schools in more than 100 cities around the country.

Quincy Mayor Thomas P. Koch praised the partnership that will be bringing Broadway to his city.

"I was very excited to learn of this terrific opportunity for Quincy families." said Koch. "Not only is this a great way to provide some valuable musical instruction to our youth, but it also has the added bonus of potentially returning some resources to our schools. This definitely seems like a win-win."

To learn more about the 2008 Quincy Musical Summer Camp, July 7-18, and "You Can't Stop the Beat," July 18, both at North Quincy High School, 316 Hancock St., Quincy, and the Broadway Cabaret Nights, July 10 and 15, at the Inn at Bay Pointe, 64 Washington Court, Quincy, call 617-786-7469 or go online to jmproductionspresents.com

Fair winds for turbine project

Private effort gets applause

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like a cool breeze on a hot summer day, Cohasset residents' response to the potential private wind turbine project was welcoming.

"This is exactly what the town needs, what society needs and I'm glad you're doing it," said one resident at the close of meeting. His statement was met with a round of applause from the packed room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

The ending summed up what happened along the way, residents and other interested attendees has plenty of questions about the technology and expressed concerns over possible impacts. But, the overwhelming feeling was of curiosity and encouragement.

The private project on the Graham Waste Services site is a joint venture between CCI-Energy, Palmer Capital, Lumus Construction and Emergent Energy. Graham Waste business and landowner, Paul Barry, has leased the land to the developers.

The project is proposing adding two 1.65 megawatt sized wind turbines to the Cohasset landscape. The wind turbine project proposal will be the first commercial sized wind generation project to be submitted to the Planning Board for a special permit under the new wind energy bylaw. This preliminary meeting, co-hosted by the Alternative Energy Committee, introduced the project to the community and vetted its concerns.

"This is community energy development. We are harnessing and harvesting a natural resource we have with us."

Jim Sweeney of CCI-Energy and the director of development for the project, described the endeavor as a "community based." In addition to doing its share for global warming and lessening the town's dependence on foreign oil, he said the project would have a positive financial impact on the town.

The $8 million project will add some revenue to the town tax rolls and holds the possibility of providing discounted and clean energy to town buildings, said Sweeney.

It is expected the two turbines will produce enough energy to power most of the town buildings. A contract would need to be worked out between the developer and the town as the project progresses.

"Wind energy is the fasted growing energy sector in the US and in the world," said Sweeney. "(The town is) fortunate to have people who believe in renewable energy."

Welcome home!

Tour highlights Cohasset's stately mansions

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Each summer, Sunday drivers flock to the Cohasset coast to enjoy the million dollar views and to gawk at the mansions along the way. On Thursday July 31, the Cohasset Historical Society will open the doors of five noteworthy homes of historical significance and modern mansion elegance in their house tour, "More Stately Mansions."

Co-chairs of the event Eleanor Bleakie and Nancy Garrison have teamed up together to organize their third Cohasset Historical Society fundraiser.

The tour will feature five stately mansions all located in prime waterfront locations. The homes were sought out because of their history as well as their more modern amenities.

"We just didn't want houses with history, we wanted historical homes turned into stately mansions," says Garrison. The event title is borrowed from a line in Oliver Wendell Holmes poem "The Chambered Nautilus." The title fits in more ways than one as Garrison and Bleakie explain Wendell was a contemporary with the original owners of the mansions, many of which were built at the turn of the century, and quite possibly a friend of some.

As much as possible they tried to find notable homes that have been enhanced over the years. Some are visible while others are tucked away from the well-worn street.

The Cary Point Estate, currently on the market with a listing price of $16.9 million, located at 79 Atlantic Ave. is an example of a re-invented historic home off the beaten path. Built as a summer home at the turn of the century, the latest owner of the oceanfront estate kept the best of the old but added a waterfront dining room and a master bedroom suite. Interior details, like kitchen counters embedded with semi-precious stones, are a must see, the organizers say.

"It qualifies in every way as a stately mansion," says Bleakie.

The tour highlights a history long faded from Cohasset. For example, when Benjamin Preston Clark built the white Victorian home at 181 Atlantic Ave. it was mostly due to his participation in its annual coot — black butter-

What a waste: Dogs leave 'doo' on beach

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Sandy Beach is a summer haven for families and beach bums alike. But, for dogs the beach is off limits during the open hours — 8:30a.m. to sundown. However, before the rest of Cohasset is ready to hit the beach dogs and their human companions head to Atlantic Avenue for a romp in the sand and waves.

Lately, Robin Lawrence, president of the Sandy Beach Association, has been receiving persistent complaints from beach goers about the presence of dog feces on the beach. He believes some visiting dog owners in the morning are failing to clean up after their canine companions.

"It's a matter of respect; respect for the property and respect for the other people who use the beach, especially the children," said Lawrence.

Sandy Beach is a piece of private property dedicated for the sole purpose of public use. "I would expect that people who use the beach would treat it as they would their own property," said Lawrence.

More than simply a nuisance, Lawrence, who doubles as a Board of Health member, is concerned with the public health issues associated with not picking up after your dog.

"There is a risk of human disease," said Lawrence. "There is a good deal of bacterial pathogens like salmonella and E-coli in dog feces."

The fecal matter can also contain parasites, like roundworm and hookworm.

"We are worried particularly for the children who frequent the beach," said Lawrence.

Head lifeguard and beach manager Jennifer DiSabatino says while the beach is swept of trash and other debris each morning, they aren't always able to get everything, especially if sand covers it —either by wind or by someone "hiding" the dog's evidence.

Unlike wooded places or large fields, DiSabatino said even on the slowest summer day there are people on every part of the beach.

"Kids are digging there everyday. Toddlers are crawling in the sand and some do come across it," said DiSabatino.

"It's a question of people being inconsiderate and not thinking about who is using the beach after them," said DiSabatino. "As a dog owner myself, I know it comes with responsibility."

DiSabatino asks those dog owners who do frequent the beach to only come before or after the beach closes, to make

Private turbine project gets applause

director of strategy for the project echoed Sweeney's sentiments of community.

"This is community energy development. We are harnessing and harvesting a natural resource we have with us," said Hering. He offered a graph showing the staggering cost increase in traditional energy (predicted to be a four percent annual increase) over the next 25 years. "On the other hand, wind costs are extremely consistent over time," said Hering.

Jesse Gossett, the project manager, also of Emergent Energy, gave some of the details of the project and discussed of the impacts the structure may have on the town.

The twin turbines will have towers 100 meters high and each of the blades is 41-meters long, making the entire structure extend 141 meters into the air. The turbines is about the size of Hull Wind II, located on their capped landfill on the Weir River. The turbines will be set about 500 feet apart, on either side of the capped landfill.

The site is located in one of three prime locations for wind in Cohasset (the other two are Turkey Hill and the Recycling Transfer Facility). The wind predominantly blows from the southwest to northeast and at an average speed of 6.8 meters per second, or about 15 miles per hour at the height of 100 meters off the ground.

Shadow flicker, a strobing effect that happens when the sun is directly behind the turbine, will have some, but minimal, effect on the surrounding areas totaling at most about 11 hours per year. The data does not take into consideration cloudy days or vegetation.

Because of its location, the visual impacts from a town-wide perspective are minimal. From Deer Hill one turbine can be seen. From the library back parking lot, both turbines can be seen. From the Graham Waste building, right off Route 3A, the turbines are towering, but from the town Common neither turbine can be seen in the distance.

"A lot of places we didn't bother getting photos because you couldn't see the turbines. Cohasset has great vegetation," which shields the turbines from view, said Gossett. Photo visualizations from individual homes are available by request.

Concerns were raised over possible noise implications, but Gossett said the "whoosh, whoosh" of the turbine would easily be drowned out by the Route 3A traffic and should have little affect on residences.

Although the Alternative Energy Committee is in full support of the project and is looking forward to working with the developers so the project will benefit the town and lower its energy costs, it was made clear this was a private project. The AEC is currently in the process of developing its own wind turbine at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

The turbine project developers will be filing their application with the Planning Board in the coming month. According to their timetable, it is their hope to conclude the local permitting process by mid-August. Then, things begin to move fast. By October, the developers hope to begin clearing the site and have the turbines up and running by July 2009.

Wind by the numbers

In their lifetime, the turbines will save 127,197 tons of CO2 (carbon dioxide) from being put in the air. That's the equivalent of:

- The weight of 10 Titanics.
- Burning 524,525 gallons of gasoline.
- Planting 1957 acres of dense forest.
- Eating 1,565,507 cheeseburgers.
- 925 cars removed from the road.
- 50 trips to the moon and back in a Toyota Prius, assuming gravity and air resistance.

POLICE BEAT

Duo charged with using counterfeit coupons

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 37-year-old man and a 15-year-old teen, both from Randolph, are facing Cohasset charges after allegedly using counterfeit "Extra Care" coupons at the CVS stores in Scituate and Cohasset last Friday (July 11).

Police Chief James Hussey said Scituate police contacted Cohasset after arresting the two individuals. While inventorying their belongings, Scituate came across some items that showed they may have done the same thing in Cohasset earlier.

"Our officers investigated and we are seeking charges," he said.

The adult is being charged with uttering a false document and larceny under $250 by a single scheme; the teen is being charged with uttering a false document and attempt to commit a crime (larceny under $250).

The two, who were arrested in Scituate, are being summonsed to court on the Cohasset charges.

"Our officers investigated and we are seeking charges."
— Police Chief James Hussey

OUI arrest

Police have charged a 46-year-old Hull man with drunk driving following a single car accident on Sohier Street on Wednesday (July 9) around 7:30 p.m. Officers charged him with OUI (liquor) and marked lanes violation after smelling alcohol on his breath and further investigation.

Paint incident

Police responded to a complaint last Friday (July 11) about paint being dumped on the ground near a creek at a house on Black Horse Lane. Police said there was a small amount of paint on the ground but it had not reached the creek. Authorities were contacted to see if the DEP or other agency needed to be contacted.

At the same time, concern surfaced about the paint that was being scraped from the house in preparation for more painting.

"There was concern that it might contain lead," Chief Hussey said.

The Board of Health and Building Inspector were contacted and arrangements were made with the contractor to ensure that all the paint chips were collected, removed and disposed of properly, police said.

Police took the names of the painters at the scene for further reference, Hussey said.

Blank checks

Detectives are investigating allegations that a woman illegally used two blank checks belonging to someone else at Shaw's to buy gift cards in excess of $500.

A walk-in to the police station last week reported that his checks had been used at the supermarket. In addition to the investigation, police advised the victim about completing the proper paperwork on identity theft.

MV crashes

- At 11:35 a.m. on Wednesday (July 9) a 1994 Chevrolet that was operated by a Hingham man and was traveling south on Route 3A near upper King Street failed to yield when turning left and hit a 2008 Nissan.

The Nissan, operated by a Braintree resident, was traveling north and was trying to make a right at the same time that the Chevrolet was making a left, into the same driveway.

Chief Hussey said the Nissan had the right-of-way. Both cars had to be towed.

The operator of the Chevrolet was cited for failure to yield.

- At 9:35 p.m. on Thursday (July 10), a three-car collision occurred on the northbound side of 3A near Joseph's Hardware. Police said a vehicle was waiting to turn left. The 1997 Ford, operated by a Hingham man, traveling behind that car was able to stop, as was the 1997 Lexus, operated by a Scituate woman, that was behind the Ford. But a 1997 Nissan, operated by a Scituate man did not stop. It struck the Lexus forcing that car into the back of the Ford.

All three cars had to be towed. The operator of the Nissan was cited for failure to use care when stopping.

- At 11:12 a.m. on Saturday (July 12), a 2006 Toyota, driven by a Cohasset woman, failed to stop and struck the back of a motorcycle that had stopped at the stop sign on Elm Street near the Cohasset Harbor Inn. The Cohasset woman told police that she thought the motorcycle had pulled away and moved forward. There was minor damage, including a broken light and dented molding on the motorcycle, that was owned and operated by a Cohasset man, police said. The Cohasset woman was cited for failure to use care when stopping.

Car break-in

A Fairoaks Lane resident reported his 2000 Saab was broken into sometime over night Saturday into Sunday (July 12-13). Taken were a laptop and other items. The theft is under investigation. The car was left unlocked, police said.

Child in car

A concerned woman called police after seeing a child left alone in a car in a parking lot at a shopping area off King Street at about 2:46 p.m. on Tuesday (July 8).

As it turns out, the father of the child had the child in his sight at all times. Police said the child was asleep and he was picking up his daughter a few yards away.

The man became aggravated when the concerned woman said she was calling the police. Nothing he said rose to the level of a crime, police said.

Chief Hussey said the car windows were down and the child, who is around 5 years old, was not being abused in any way.

"We do not have a problem with the fact the woman called us," Chief Hussey said. "It is always better to be safe than sorry."

Noisy neighbor

Police responded to two noise complaints about 40 minutes apart on Monday (July 7) on Howe Road at about 7:30 and 8:10 p.m. Police said the resident playing the loud music was cooperative and turned it down; and after the second call shut it off.

Chief Hussey said the usual test of "loud" is if the officer can hear the noise from the street. He said if someone is playing music after 9 p.m., they would be encouraged to turn off because people might be going to sleep.

Beach drinking

A group of men, some of whom were drinking, were told to pack up and leave Sandy Beach on Saturday (July 12) at about 4:12 p.m. Police received a complaint about a rowdy group but did not find the men, who were mostly in their mid-20s to be unruly.

Police explained no public drinking was allowed and stood by while they packed up. Some had been drinking but others were sober and could drive, police said.

Note on car

A Good Samaritan left a note on a person's car stating another car had struck it, breaking the mirror. The Good Samaritan provided the plate number. The victim went to police and found out that the motorist, who had hit the car, had already reported it to police. "We put the parties together so they could hook up and resolve the matter," Chief Hussey said.

Sandy Beach requests diligence in picking up after dogs sure they bag or scoop and to watch their dog closely even when off-leash.

"Remember that 12-month old kid crawling in the sand later in the day," said DiSabatino.

"Mutt mitts," or plastic bags designed for quick pick-up and proper disposal of dog feces, are available on posts at the beach. Nearby trash receptacles allow for easy disposal, said Lawrence.

"We're really asking for help from people who use the beach to take care of the beach as if it is their own," said Lawrence. "We want people to leave the area in better condition than when they arrived."

"We are worried particularly for the children who frequent the beach."

— Robin Lawrence, Sandy Beach Association

Sandy Beach isn't the only place where the issue of dog owners not picking up after pet has come up. A few years ago, a town bylaw exists making not picking up after your dog a finable offense. the Board of Health made it a town regulation to pick up after your dog. To help residents comply, dispensers of mutt mitts were placed at dog-friendly locations around town, like the Common, ballfields and Wheelwright Park.

"Certainly, it's a problem all over town. Some people just don't pick up after their dog," said Health Agent Joe Godzik.

Much of the problem lies in enforcement.

"What typically happens is the owner is long gone and all you have are the remains," said Godzik. He thinks most dog owners are aware they are supposed to clean up after their dog, "it might be a matter of getting into the habit of bringing (plastic bags)," said Godzik. "It's about getting people to be a little more thoughtful of others."

Dog clean-up regulations

In 1999, the Board of Health recognizing that the number of dog residue complaints town-wide had been increasing, passed a regulation to make cleaning up after your dog a part of the town bylaws.

- Authority: This regulation is promulgated under the authority of MGL Chapter 111 Sections 31 and 122.
- Purpose: To abate the potential health danger in public places of fecal material from dogs.
- Applicability: This regulation applies to all persons who own, possess, care for or control a dog while located within the area of the Town of Cohasset.
- General:

1.) Any person who owns, possess, cares for or controls a dog shall take every precaution to not permit his or her dog to defecate on any sidewalk, street, parking lot or any other public place. Further, the above pertains to private property not owned by the above person.

2.) It is the responsibility of any person cited above to promptly remove any fecal matter deposited on a public place or on private property not owned by that persorf and properly disposed of.

- Enforcement: This regulation shall be enforced by the Board of Health and its agent and the Cohasset Animal Control Officer under the provision of M.G.L. Chapter 40, Section 21D.
- Fines for Violation: For a first offense, the fine is $25; for a second, $35; and for a third and subsequent offenses, $50.
- Exemption: This regulation shall not apply to any dog accompanying any disabled person, who because of his or her disability is unable to comply with these requirements.
- Effective Date: This regulation shall take effect on Jan. 1, 2000.

Officials oppose Aquarion rate hike

About 60 Hull, Cohasset, and Hingham residents turned out for the Department of Public Utilities hearing last night at Hull High School to vehemently oppose Aquarion Water Company's request for a $3.1 million, or overall 24.8 percent, increase in water service revenues.

Cohasset selectman Paul Carlson said that while only 20 percent of Cohasset residents are served by Aquarion, the town is "looking forward to working with Hingham and Hull in fighting this rate increase."

Most of the increase is attributed to investments totalling $21.4 million that Aquarion has made for water utility infrastructure improvements since 2001 in such areas as increased water supply and replacement of aging and undersized pipes, as well as other needed water system advancements.

"We've tried to stay out of the rate increase arena for as long as possible," Aquarion Sr. Vice President of Operations Larry Bingaman said.

The majority of those speaking were from Hull, but Hingham selectman Bruce Rabuffo also spoke strongly against the proposed increase. "Our rates are already 58 percent higher than those in the MWRA district. I spent 32 years in the utility business and I find this increase request overwhelming," he said. " Are the current rates even justifiable? It's in the evidentiary process that more details will be forthcoming."

Hull town manager Philip E. Lemnios noted the irony of the targeted rate increase being set for April 1, 2009. "This is truly a joke," he said. "The boards of all three towns have hired expert consultants and we will go to battle to fight this proposed rate increase. It's absurd."

Customers may provide comments via email until 5 p.m. Fri., July 18, addressed to dpu.efiling@state.ma.us and also to the hearing officer, carol.pieper@state.ma.us.

Village 'musical chairs'

Movement downtown is positive

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It may seem like a little like musical chairs down in the village with some established businesses moving, new businesses opening and some businesses closing. But, all in all, the mood is optimistic for the village business district.

Try to keep up with some of the changes and you might get dizzy.

The Red Geranium has closed. Atlantic Brokerage Group is moving into their space from Depot Court. The Focus Gallery is moving to the new Depot Court building. Carousel Antiques has closed and All the Best Natural Foods has opened there. Adrian Morris Salon is re-locating out of the village to Route 3A in the King Jewelers building. Cohasset News has closed and a dance studio is coming soon in its place.

That leaves "holes" on Ripley Road, on Depot Court and in James Brook Crossing.

Much of the movement is with businesses with established followings moving to bigger spaces or more visible locations. That is the case with All the Best Natural Foods, which was tucked in the James Brook Crossing shops, but recently opened its doors at the former Carousel Antiques building on Ripley Road.

The Focus Gallery, currently housed at 115 Ripley Road, will move from its current location to a larger space in the almost complete Depot Court building come the fall. Owner Cindy Vallino opened the Focus Gallery about a year and half ago and now represents 10 photographers.

"We need the extra space to show the breadth of what we have," said Vallino. "We've had a lot of support in Cohasset and in the village so we wanted to stay."

The new space will be two times the size of the current one and be in a place where there is more foot traffic, said Vallino. She plans to host more events and teach photo workshops. The Focus Gallery will join a yoga/pilates studio, a new women's clothing store, Pink Tulip, and Sullivan, Garrity and Donnelly Insurance Agency (currently housed at 21B South Main Street) in the new building.

"Overall, I think the changes (in the village) are positive. There is some growth going on with businesses moving up and out, but I think it opens up the opportunity for more businesses to come in and diversify the area," said Vallino.

And the even better news is prospective tenants are already looking at her current space nestled between the South Shore Art Center and Bernard's.

Other businesses are expanding within the village. The owners of Carmela Drew Fine Foods and Accessories at 39 South Main St. have bought the Goodfella's Pizza business located behind and between Adrian Morris Salon and Bernard's. Much of the menu of Goodfella's will remain the same and gives Carmela Drew its own kitchen to make their own fresh prepared meals daily.

"It's great for Carmela Drew and for our customers," said Michele Rizzo, who owns the business with her sister Maria DePaoli. The storefront on South Main will stay put. Carmela Drew had been renting kitchen space to make their prepared meals, but now will have their own place to cook. Already taking advantage, they are making summer picnic baskets for the beach and boat and are looking to do more catering and prepared foods.

"I think people are trying to find their spot that suits them. Hopefully, the businesses will settle in a place that works and it will be better overall for the village," said Rizzo.

With David Bigley's All the Best Natural Foods moving to Ripley Road, it leaves a hole in the James Brook Crossing Shops. Judy McColgan, owner of the Windsor Tea Shop and Tea Room and part owner of the building, said there has been some interest in the space and expects it to be leased soon.

However, McColgan said the movement in the village proper, so to speak, across the tracks, has little affect on the James Brook Crossing shops.

"We're at a big handicap behind here. We are where you can't see us," said McColgan. Although close to the rest of the village, the James Brook Crossing Shops and the Boys of Summer sometimes can seem a world a part. "Unless other businesses talk us up, people don't know we're here…we work really hard as a whole to get people to come."

What can be described as a gaping hole still exists in the heart of the village at the former hardware store on South Main Street. It has been up for sale by owner since late October. The owners could not be reached by press time.

Economic Development Committee chairman Peter Brown believes the flurry of activity is a good thing.

"As changes happen in the movement of some Cohasset businesses, it is mostly a story of activity. There is a statement in the real estate business that says, 'activity breeds activity and new opportunities.' The vagaries of some vacancies are due to many different reasons, some of which have little or nothing to do with the marketability of individual spaces," said Brown.

Regardless of the movement, Planning Board Chairman Al Moore said retail business in the village is a struggle. Cohasset's small size and seasonal flux contribute to the challenge. "It's not an easy place to have a business," he said, adding the down economy is taking its toll everywhere.

On the horizon could be new development in the village under the recently amended village zoning bylaws, but no formal filings have been made at the Planning Board office. A few of the developers have been before the Planning Board in preliminary capacities to discuss their plan

"Just some chat, but that's all," said Moore. The struggling economy and outstanding question of town sewer capacity may delay new development.

Sewer Commissioner Wayne Sawchuk said the Commission should have a better idea of how much capacity the wastewater treatment plant could take on in the fall after improvements to the plant have been made and tested.

Cohasset Tennis Benefit this weekend

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit, a charity that began in the 1950's by Cohasset's legendary philanthropist Jesse Cox, will again host the annual auction and tennis tournament this weekend to help fund a newly-created trauma care program at Children's Hospital Boston.

The weekend will begin with a launch party on Friday, July 18, at the Lightkeeper's Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane on Cohasset Harbor, from 7 - 10 p.m. Tennis matches will be played on privately-owned courts throughout Cohasset on Saturday and Sunday, July 19 and 20, within three playing categories: advanced, intermediate and social.

More than $100,000 has been raised in the past 10 years alone for Children's Hospital. This year's benefit will fund the pediatric trauma unit, with proceeds paying for the transportation, lodging and other necessities for extended family members and friends who travel to support the parents or guardians of trauma patients. This newly-created fund was developed by Children's Hospital Director of Trauma, Dr. David Mooney, who saw a tremendous need for helping those who come to support the parents and guardians of critically ill or injured patients.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

Hello Cohasset and Happy Mid-July! This week has been so nice, sunny and warm for all to enjoy. Happy Birthdays galore have been happening throughout the town and one of them was Kyle Burke. Happy Birthday pretty girl, I hope you had a super special day.

Thank you also to all of you who wished me a special day as I celebrated my day yesterday. Whoever the person or people are who sent in the information to Mary Ford as well as Mary, you guys got me good!

Thank you so much! All of you who helped to celebrate mean so much to me. Happy Birthday wishes need to be sent out to Peg Litchfield as she celebrates her "39th" again like me and as she continues to get stronger in her knee after surgery, etc. Enjoy your special day Peggy!

WELCOME HOME

A group of amazing volunteers recently went to Kentucky to help with the Appalachia Service Project (ASP) of 2008. This group of teens and adults from Cohasset met at the St. Anthony's Church parking lot very early on the morning of July 5th and left on an adventure of great meaning and reflection to help families in the building, repairs and rebuilding of their homes while developing friendships and learning about a whole different way of living. They arrived back here in Cohasset on the night of July 13th and the looks on the faces of them all as they got off the busses said so much. Gratitude for what they have here at home, exhaustion that was so evident, however they all looked so happy that they helped and worked as hard as they do each year. You are all wonderful in what you do and Cohasset is so proud of you all!

Tour highlights Cohasset's 'stately mansions'

A beautiful mahogany trimmed study is one of the many rooms you will see on the Historical Society's "More Stately Mansions" tour.

bill duck — shooting season. In its heyday in the latter years of the 19th century, coot shooting often saw a hunter bring down more than 100 birds in a day. Preston Clark was not alone either; many of Cohasset's "great estates" and cottages are a direct result of this enthusiasm for duck hunting.

The house tour has been in the works since before even 2008 began. Bleakie, a North Scituate resident but a Cohasseter at heart, simply called up many of the homes' owner to ask for their permission to feature their homes on the tour. Although some did turn down the request for the most part she says she was met with enthusiasm.

'More Stately Mansions'

- "Cary Point," 79 Atlantic Ave.
- 300 South Main Street
- "The Oaks," 49 Margin St.
- 155 Border St.
- 181 Atlantic Ave.

The house tour itself is being met with excitement itself because it offers a glance into homes some prominent in town, but rarely open to the public.

"It's an amazing opportunity to see historic houses built in the late 19th century and the early 20th century which were connected with a certain lifestyle — an era and lifestyle now long gone from Cohasset," says Garrison of the well-heeled Bostonians who used Cohasset as their summer playground. "It's a real treat."

Although elegant to begin with, the "More Stately Mansion" committee is pulling out all the stops to make the houses look their best. A sub-committee is in charge of decoration and fresh flower arrangements will be featured in each home.

In addition to the waterfront views and structural grandeur, Garrison and Bleakie are as excited about the beautiful gardens and landscaping in store for attendees' viewing pleasure. They hope many will make a day out of the event and leisurely go from house to house, which are all located within a short drive of each other.

"We know this will be a popular event," says Bleakie.

Following the house tour, attendees are invited to a "high tea" from 2 to 4p.m. at the Historical Society headquarters at the Pratt Building (106 South Main St.). In addition to light refreshment, a brief history of the South Shore Players and Cohasset's theatrical past will be on display.

STAFF PHOTOS/DAVE NEAULT

This is the pool house at one of five mansions that will be on the tour.

The homes will be open from 10a.m. to 4p.m. and there is no set route. On street parking will be available at all the residences. Hostesses will be at the houses to welcome guests and point out the not-to-be-overlooked features of the homes.

The proceeds from the event will go toward future Historical Society programs, continued improvement of the Pratt Building (Historical Society headquarters) and maintenance of its collections.

Tickets are $30 for Historical Society members and $35 for non-members. Tickets are on sale at the Historical Society headquarters at the Pratt Building, Fleming's, Darilynn's,, Buttonwood Books and Toys, Adrian Morris salon and next Thursday's Farmer's Market. The Old takes on the Young

The "older" crew, with the average age of 51 was determined to keep up with the young guns. They came in behind the young crew by a mere one minute and one second. From left to right, Chris Fraher (cox), Mike Pecca, George Bushnell, Rick Lyons and Ed Baldry.

CMI crews compete in Blackburn Challenge

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The question was simple. Could a crew with an average age of 51 keep up with a crew with an average age of 21? That's what two Cohasset Maritime Institute crews set out to answer last weekend at the marathon row: the Blackburn Challenge.

The 20-plus mile course tests the physical strength and mental fortitude of hundreds of rowers make their way around Cape Ann beginning and ending in Gloucester. A good-natured rivalry developed between the two four rowers and one coxswain crews.

"We had to beat the old guys and put them in their place," kids 20-year-old Alice Bellone, the sole woman on the "young" crew. She is quick to acknowledge the toughness and pure strength of the "older" crew.

"It was really a race between strength and form," said Bellone. The "young" crew racing in CMI's Joseph Antoine was made up of local college students who are mostly rowers at school and in the summer serve manage and cox the CMI boats.

In the end, it was the young crew that won out, but not by much. The young crew came in 3:01:41 and a minute and one second later with a time of 3:02:42 the older crew crossed the finish line.

"We tried our best to catch the younger boat, but they pulled out in front of us right from the start and we stayed behind them for the whole race. When we pushed hard to try and take them, they pushed hard and kept their lead," said Rick Lyons, a member of the older crew in the Jack Hubbard.

Although Bellone said her muscles were still sore and her hands torn up, "it was very satisfying to reach the finish line knowing you've done something not many people can do."

That sentiment seemed to be the same all around. Mike Pecca, a member of the older crew said, "we had a blast competing, you were not only competing against each other, but the sea as well. Last year, the young ones beat us by 49 minutes, this year by one minute (and) one second. Who knows what will happen next year!"

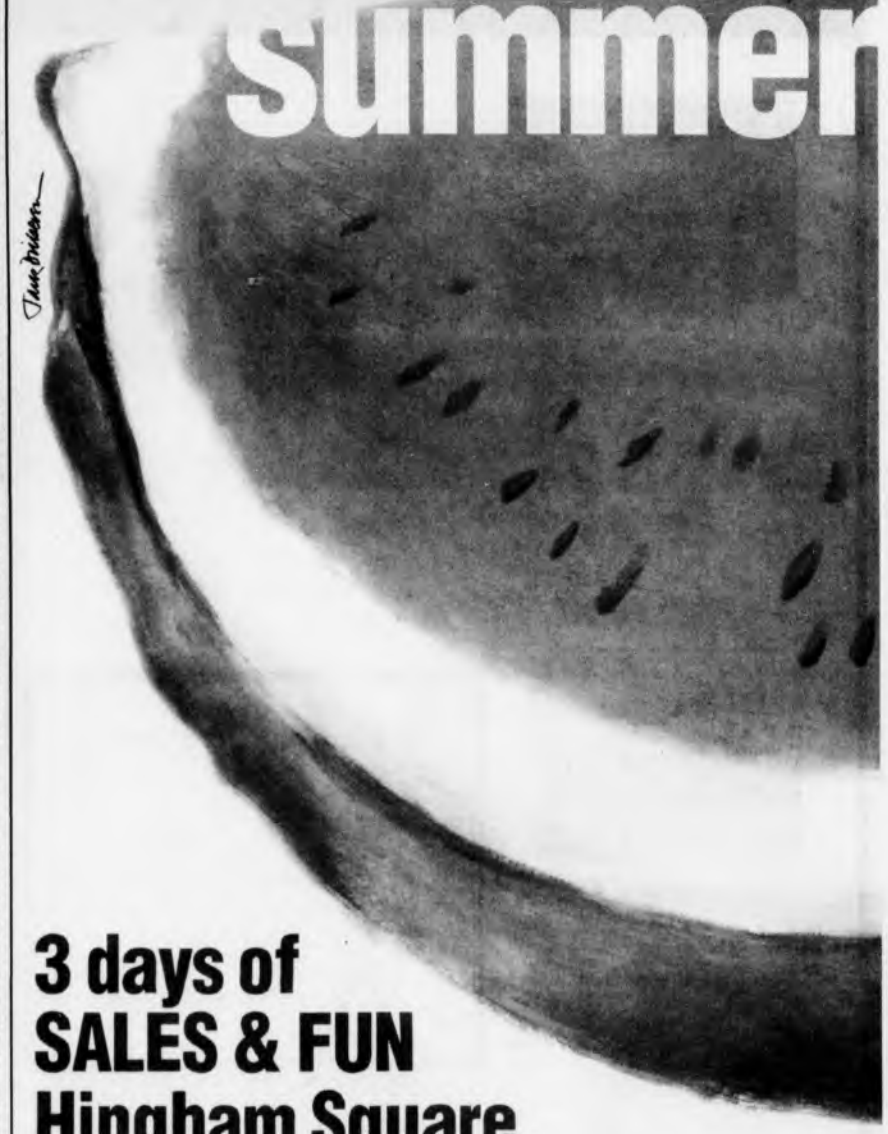
"We were all blistered and exhausted when it was done but I bet we'd all love to do it again next year," said Lyons.

Don Trisler, another CMI member, tackled the over 20-mile course all by his lonesome, finishing the race in just over four and half hours.

About the Blackburn Challenge

The annual race pays tribute to one of Gloucester's most famous fishermen — Howard Blackburn. In January 1883, during the height of Gloucester's fishing heyday in the latter part of the 19th century, Blackburn took a job aboard the Gloucester schooner Grace L. Fears as a fisherman. Schooners would head out to the plentiful banks miles off land and then send out rowers in dories with long fishing lines and multiple baited hooks.

After two weeks at sea, a blizzard blew in causing Blackburn and his dorymate, Thomas Welch, to separate from the schooner, leaving them stranded 60 miles from shore. They decided to make for the coast of Newfoundland, but Welch gave up and froze to death. Blackburn, however, courageously continued to row as his hands froze to the oars and touched land in Nova Scotia where a family nursed him back to health.



The next summer, Blackburn returned to Gloucester without fingers, half of each thumb, and most of his toes. The town praised his return that attracted national press and soon made Blackburn a sea hero.

The 20-plus mile circumnavigation of Cape Ann allows a wide variety of water conditions, testing not only each rower's physical fitness, but also their knowledge of weather conditions and its affects on a boat.

In his name, the Blackburn Challenge celebrates the dedication of dorymen while bringing light to Gloucester's strong history as the largest fishing port in the world.

Each year in mid-July, rowers of all types and from all across the world test their own endurance in the race.

The Blackburn Challenge is open to all seaworthy oar or paddle-powered craft. This year, there was a wide range of participants. There was a group of huge Hawaiian style outrigger canoes, all kinds of kayaks, old-fashioned wooden lifesaving boats, single man rowboats and even a guy on surfboard who paddled the whole twenty miles by hand—"a really hardcore bunch of people," said Rick Lyons.

Cleaning up after Fido

Some of you may recall having sandboxes for your toddlers in the days before the coyote invasion when you could let your cat outside at night.

If you did not cover the sandbox then Fluffy, your calico feline, would use it as a litter box.

You could not really blame the cat for doing what comes naturally. But having your child playing in cat poop or worse, trying to ingest it, is not only nauseating but unhealthy.

Dogs are not known to be as tidy as cats, so they do not hide their "stuff" after going to the bathroom.

But apparently some of their owners are covering it up after a nice early morning walk on Sandy Beach.

Others are not covering it at all.

Regardless of which category, the dog owners fall into – Fido's "stuff" should not be left on the beach where it is not only a nuisance but could also pose a health issue.

No one likes to step in dog poop (we all have at some point) and then have to try to scrape if off a sneaker, sandal or shoe.

Having a small child sit in it, step in it or even put it into their mouth – is in a word, disgusting.

Those dog walkers out there, and you know who you are, who are walking on Sandy Beach and leaving your dog's "stuff" behind – please stop!

The problem is a growing one, hence a call from the Sandy Beach Association this week asking us to raise public awareness.

Let's take it a step further. We should applaud all responsible dog owners who carry pooper-scoopers, special mitts or plastic bags to clean up after their dogs.

We urge Cohasset dog lovers, no matter where they walk their dogs, be responsible citizens.

Most people know there is a leash law in Cohasset meaning the dog must be under its owner's control at all times.

Well, dog cleanup regulations have been codified in a 1999 bylaw, the creation of which followed concern about rising dog residue complaints in town.

The bylaw means dog walkers can be fined for leaving their dog's "stuff" behind.

But it is not just a nuisance.

According to www.doodycalls.com, which states its sources include the Environmental Protection Agency and Department of Public Health, "woof-woof waste" is not good for your lawn or humans.

"Beyond your grass, it has been estimated that a single gram of dog waste can contain 23 million fecal coliform bacteria, which are known to cause cramps, diarrhea, intestinal illness, and serious kidney disorders in humans. EPA even estimates that two or three days' worth of droppings from a population of about 100 dogs would contribute enough bacteria to temporarily close a bay, and all watershed areas within 20 miles of it, to swimming and shell fishing."

Doodycalls states dog feces is one of the most common carriers of the following diseases: heartworms, whipworms, hookworms, roundworms, tapeworms, Parvo, Corona, Giardiasis, Salmonellosis, Cryptosporidiosis, and Campylobacteriosis.

We do not know what these diseases are, nor do we want to find out!

However, we think that dog walkers without a pooper-scooper or other collection equipment – should receive the same protests from the public and health officials as someone, who lights up a cigarette, does.

The alternative is simple: "No Dogs Allowed!"

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation

TO THE EDITOR:

I write to express my thanks and appreciation to members of the Cohasset Fire Department who transported me to the South Shore Hospital on the morning of July 1.

Breathing difficulties caused me to visit my personal physician in Cohasset, who immediately called 911.

The four-member team, which included Capt. Frank Mahoney, Jim Curley, Dan Smith and Jonathan Hickey, arrived at my doctor's office in minutes.

I salute their concern, urgency and consummate professionalism. Some might suggest they were just doing their job, but to me, the way they assisted in a medical emergency was extraordinary.

They began appropriate treatment in the ambulance, contacted the ER at South Shore Hospital en route and delivered me there with great dispatch.

I have now fully recovered from what could have been a serious problem.

Again, you all have my sincere thanks.

SunPipes placement and other issues

COMMENTARY

ANDREW WILLARD

The Deer Hill School offers the best location to evaluate the technology and have a positive impact on lighting.

In the July 11, 2008 edition of the Cohasset Mariner, town resident Mrs. Lee Jenkins raised some good questions regarding the pending installation of Sun Pipes in the Deer Hill School. The AEC would like to answer these questions and clarify our actions.

There are to be 10 solar tube devices installed at the Deer Hill School. Eight units will be installed over the "stage" portion of the cafeteria where there are no windows and lighting is considered poor. Two additional units will be installed in a small classroom to provide more natural lighting.

Mrs. Jenkins noted that the DPW building would be a better location for the devices. The committee agrees the DPW garage truck bays suffer from very poor lighting and therefore our original grant proposal planned to place the units in the DPW garage. Unfortunately, following extensive meetings with the DPW, the Sun Pipes supplier and local installers it was agreed by all that the corrugated metal roof of the DPW could not handle the SunPipes.

The committee evaluated the Deer Hill School, Middle High School, Town Hall, Paul Pratt Library, and the Harbor Master's building for a possible back up location. The Deer Hill School offers the best location to evaluate the technology and have a positive impact on lighting.

The solar tubes being installed are commercial grade and 13 inches in diameter. The total cost for the 10 units installed is approximately $14,000. We have chosen Sun Pipes solar tubes in part based on their ability to provide references of local commercial installations as well as their past work with local roofing contractors. It was the committee's opinion if we were asking the town to cut multiple holes into roofs that we work with firms that have experience and can stand behind their work.

The town requested bids from three certified roofers who follow the state competitive/prevailing wage policies. The winning bid was submitted by local roofer R.L. Lackey & Sons who has expertise installing these devices in commercial and residential buildings.

The Alternative Energy Committee takes the spending of tax dollars very seriously. We feel our primary responsibility is to find ways to lower our town's energy usage as well as our energy costs. We believe this Sun Pipe project is a good step in showing the town technology, which could be incorporated into many of our buildings thereby reducing our need for electric daytime lighting.

The Alternative Energy Committee meets monthly at the Town Hall, normally the second or third Tuesday of the month. We welcome all to come and listen and ask questions as the more input we receive the better we can serve the taxpayers of Cohasset.

Andrew Willard is chairman of the Cohasset Alternative Energy Committee.

Dancing in the streets on Deep Run!

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – If you heard shouts of joy coming from Jerusalem Road area near the ocean, it was from the Deep Run residents. As we mentioned last week, Deep Run was scheduled for paving on Thursday, July 10th.. It really happened, thanks to the hard work of all involved with the project.

It's amazing how fast paving goes when the large paving contractors get all of their equipment on site. By10 a.m., Deep Run was about half finished and by 3 p.m. the paving was completed.

The dirt and grime that is a natural by-product of a project like this will disappear for Deep Run residents. As one resident remarked to us, they can finally get their car washed!

Oops! – You may remember that last week we had a photo of a new catch basin that was being installed to deal with a road drainage issue on Deep Run. At least one eagle-eyed observer noticed that there was something wrong with that catch basin. The photo clearly showed hollow concrete block being used for the construction of the basin. That is a no-no in the construction business. With hollow concrete blocks it is possible for water to sometimes get into the hollow spaces and become trapped. When it does and freezes the blocks literally break apart. However, in this case we are aware of the situation and the project engineer will have the hollow blocks replaced with solid blocks before the roadway receives its final paving. Using hollow blocks was an expedient so the project didn't delay the paving.

Whitehead Road – When we had the meeting with the Whitehead Road residents in anticipation of paving that road, one of their major issues was the gas leaks on the street. Numerous leaks have historically required frequent gas line repairs. Clearly, after the road is paved, the last thing anyone wants to see is the brand new road torn up to fix more gas leaks. Based on the resident's comments, the Town took a multi-pronged communication approach with the gas company to see if a permanent repair could be effected. Well, it worked. As we write this, NGrid is replacing about 650 feet of gas line with brand new gas line. So, even though this delays the paving, it should make for a substantially better job in the longer run.

The main gas line should have been completed this past Wednesday, according to NGrid's contractor. (As we write this on Wednesday, they are feverishly working on-site.) The next two days were allotted to run new lines to each of the three homes along the new gas main. Why so much time? Essentially, they will be running new plastic lines inside of the existing lines to each home. Since some of the homes are quite a distance from the street, NGrid is not sure what difficulties they will encounter as they thread the new line inside of the present line. Next Monday (July 21) they are planning to tie the new main line into the gas main at Atlantic Avenue and at the other end of the "old" gas main.

Little Harbor paving clarification – The topic of paving seems to be uppermost in the eyes of those who travel the road beset by construction. However, paving, although it seems simple, is really quite complex. The paving for the Little Harbor Project is going to be treated two different ways, depending on the work that was done in each street.

Some streets will be paved by the "patch and overlay" method. So, what does this gobldegook mean? Well, if the road has only a single trench for a new sewer or water main, the trenches will be patched with asphalt. The patching takes place shortly after the trench is backfilled and compacted. Atlantic Avenue is a good example of this trench paving. But, often the road will be dug up a second time to put the lateral lines that will bring sewer or water to each property, or for other underground work. Then, these secondary excavations will be compacted and patched. After the patching is complete, the road will be allowed to settle for 6 to 9 months.

After settling, the road is ready for final paving. The road will be ground to a level surface, and any low spots will be filled with additional asphalt. And, finally, the coup de gras, a brand new top coat of asphalt will be placed on the road from one edge to the other.

The second paving method is by "reclaim and paving." This paving is generally used when the road has multiple trenches and it just doesn't make sense to patch it. Instead, the road surface is ground up completely to the point where the old surface is finely pulverized and this is mixed with some of the material under the paving. The result is then rolled to compact the base. This builds an entirely new road surface literally "from the ground up." This part is the "reclaim". Reclamation can take place either before construction or after the new utility lines are installed.

After all of the utility work is complete, the road will be graded to create the contours desired in the final roadway. A base coat of asphalt will be laid over this surface and allowed to settle for 6 to 9 months. Finally, after settling, the road will be leveled (In the event that any of the construction excavation has settled.), and given its top and final coat of paving.

Remember, if you see a base coat laid down and then excavated again, this could be a normal course of events depending on a number of things like other utility work. The good news is that it is not the final paving. That comes later.

New words for the dictionary

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Perhaps you have a friend who is a "pescatarian" and all these years you never knew it.

Well, it's official now. Your friend, the vegetarian who also eats fish, can come out of the closet. "Pescatarian" is one of about 100 new words that have made it into the latest edition of Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary.

Since there are only some 150,000 words in that particular dictionary, that's quite an achievement. It's easier to make the football team at Notre Dame than it is to makes the pages of Webster's Collegiate.

The folks out in Springfield who publish the dictionary are known to monitor the English language, sometimes trailing a word for years before it is able to stand on its own without any explanation, the key qualification.

It's a good thing I wasn't on the jury that passed on "pescatarian" since I never heard the word or its explanation in the places where I hang out, like cocktail parties at the Neighborhood Club in Quincy or the bar at Haddad's in Brant Rock.

I never heard of another addition to the dictionary, either, the word "soju." The 6-to-1 martini is the drink of the evening at the Neighborhood Club and a shot and a beer will do at Haddad's. "Soju" is a Korean rice-based vodka.

I actually thought I invented a word once. As each edition of Webster's Collegiate hit the stands I rushed out to buy it just to view my handiwork. Alas, it never made it, which is probably a good thing.

The whole phrase was, "They wined him until he was ory-eyed." A few years ago, I wrote a column bragging about it. Back came a note from an old colleague, Pete Brewer, noting that humorist H. Allen Smith had used the word 20 years before.

Since Smith was one of my favorite authors in the '30s and '40s I thumbed through his "Life in a Putty Knife Factory" and "Low Man on a Totem Pole" to find the word, and there it was, only Smith spelled it "orry-eyed."

So I have to apologize to anyone who read that column and if they send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and the masthead of that paper, I'll gladly refund their money.

But I digress . . .

My earliest experiences with the dictionary came in the Thayer Public Library Branch next to the gas company on Quincy Avenue where my friends and I, spurred on by raging hormones, went to look up dirty words.

We never found any because books, even dictionaries, were G-rated in those days.

In the course of doing research for a story, I came across a strange little volume called "The Professor and the Madman," by Simon Winchester, the story of the compilation of the first Oxford English Dictionary.

A committee got things started by sending out a general request for submission of words and definitions. They got more than 10,000 from one man, an American, Dr. W. C. Minor.

Impressed by his erudition, they set out to honor him, only to find Dr. W. C. Minor was an inmate in Broadmoor Asylum for the Criminally Insane.

That could tell you something about people who compile dictionaries, only I don't know what.

Day of the Lepus

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Okay, has anyone else noticed that Cohasset is being overrun by bunnies? Are parents flushing unspayed Easter rabbits down the toilet once the kids tire of them? Half the sewer pipes in this town simply empty onto Nichols Road right now, so I don't know what you people are thinking. I walked outside this morning and almost tripped over two of them. I'm serious, they're using the buddy system now. They're intimidating. I tried to shoo them off my walkway and they gave me a look like, "Oh, bring it, mister." I had this strange urge to scamper away, dive into my house and have a nice salad. What is going on?

Meanwhile we've got giant turkeys strutting down the middle of Forest Avenue every day, glaring at the passing cars, just hanging out on the yellow line without a care in the world. It's like some kind of wild animal park over here. Bring the kids. Bring your skeet shooters. Just be sure to stop off at John's Famous Turkey Vista and Turkey Burgers for a the best cold lemonade you'll find on your safari. The Robins girls have a competing stand across the street, but I should tell you they have pox.

Anyway I thought I'd get everyone up to speed on the Lengyel Family summer plans. We go away on one or two trips this time of year like most families in town, although ours aren't as expensive, and I know how disappointing it is when you invite all your neighbors to a backyard barbecue and no one shows up. I wouldn't like our vacation to spoil anyone's barbecue, particularly when we're so keen to socialize.

The first thing we're doing is abandoning our house to the carpenter ants for a few weeks. I feel awful, because I kept stomping and poisoning them until I realized they were trying to finish up our family room, which needs baseboard and crown molding. They're actually much nicer to work with than my last general contractor. For one thing they show up on time every day. We leave out a few open bags of Cheez-Its at night and by 8 a.m. we've got a full crew. Not even untraceable cash payments were enough to entice our last carpenters to work as hard as these little guys do. So aside from their tendency to raid the pantry I'm quite satisfied with these ants.

The Lengyels will also be out of circulation the first few weeks of August, when a Japanese exchange student is staying with us. The head of the program that arranged her trip said our family was ideally suited to hosting foreigners, because we already speak English slowly and a little extra loudly — even by American standards. The girl's name is Naoko, but if you meet her you can call her "Noki". I haven't run that by her yet but I'm sure she won't mind. Noki is such a cute name, and still sounds Asian.

We've racked our brains trying to think of something exciting to do with her in Cohasset. In the end we decided to focus on out-of-town trips, although I refuse to take her to Plymouth Rock. Obviously it's historical as a primitive example of a tourist attraction, but once you've stared down into its concrete pen for a few minutes and had a waffle cone, what else is there? Now the Irish — they know how to spice up a rock. To experience the Blarney Stone you have to kiss it while being held upside down by the ankles. Wouldn't it be cool if we all told out-of-staters it's considered good luck to have your picture taken on Plymouth Rock without wearing pants? I'm telling you we'd have every odd Vermonter down here pounding waffle cones before a month was out. This idea might even work as a fund-raising scheme for Cohasset, if only we had a rock.

Bottom line: once the ants are done with the family room and Noki heads home our schedule should open up for sleepovers, pool parties, yachting — we're pretty flexible. We're good at spotting things as we drive around, but it's more convenient for us to get an official invitation, so we can give you ample warning about our food allergies. Thanks, and see you soon!

Gov. Patrick has 'conversation' with local voters

'Town Hall' regional meeting held in Hull

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The governor lived up to expectations Thursday (July 10) in Hull where area residents got to spend upwards of an hour with Deval Patrick in a cozy setting on a perfect summer evening.

About 300 people, many of whom walked up from the beach when they heard the microphones, got the chance to listen to Patrick field a range of questions from the largely enthusiastic crowd.

Cohasset officials, including Selectman Fred Koed, Advisory Committee member Chartis Tebbetts, and Town Manager Bill Griffin were in attendance, among other Cohasset officials and residents, including Coleman Nee, who is Undersecretary for the Department of Veterans Services.

The event at the Bernie King Pavilion started off when Patrick, who was approached by Cohasset's Polly Logan, 83 — the Grand Dame of state GOP – gave the diminutive Logan, who stands less than five feet tall, a gigantic hug.

Logan was clearly a fan and said later she wished the GOP had a candidate like that.

With state representatives Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham and James Murphy, D-Weymouth, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, seated behind him, Patrick wooed the audience with his diplomatic, unflappable style.

While the governor fielded questions, his staff walked around with microphones. Attendees asked Patrick about everything from Medicaid waivers to global warming. The governor, who wore a wireless microphone and who had his sleeves rolled up, asked each person posing a question for his or her first name.

"We are really here to have a conversation," Patrick told the crowd. "I did not come to make a speech."

The event was the second of 11 town hall-style meetings the governor has planned across the state over five weeks. The first was held in Salem.

Patrick chided the media, which, he said, reported on his new haircut following a press conference at Massachusetts General Hospital and not about the $1 billion life science initiative that will help the state become a world leader in biotechnology.

"We need a strong independent media to have a strong democracy," he said. "But I also need to have a direct relationship with you."

Patrick said he needed to hear from the people without the filter of the media, hence the town hall-style meetings.

"I believe government has a role in helping people," said Patrick, adding he did not have all the answers, nor would he make promises. "I am not here to make a speech but to listen to you."

Polly Logan of Cohasset and a state Republican committeewoman, gets a big chuckle out of meeting Gov. Patrick face to face during the town meeting-style question-and-answer forum in Hull.

Marshfield resident Gia Lane questions Governor Deval Patrick on energy conservation, clean energy solutions and the Global Warming Solutions Act.

One of the first questions of the evening came from Kevin, who said the governor had met with Mass Equality but not with Mass Resistance, a pro-life, anti-gay marriage group. He said the governor wants to be governor of all the people but has not heard the other perspective. Some in the crowd started to boo Kevin's remarks.

Patrick stopped the negative reaction in its tracks. "We may not agree on everything," Patrick said. "But Kevin's voice counts too." He stressed that Kevin should feel comfortable saying what he had to say. He did say, however, if Mass Resistance had "an attitude" he would decline to meet with them. In a handout, the Patrick-Murray administration lists marriage equality for all Massachusetts residents as its number two accomplishment of 20 listed.

Part of the evening was devoted to energy questions. Soaring oil prices was on the minds of the many members of the audience.

Patrick suggested that everyone get an energy audit of their homes, a service, he said was offered free of charge by utility companies. He drew laughter when he explained he and his wife, who have a refrigerator in the basement that is only used at Christmas but is plugged in all yearlong, and "could not afford to do that."

Education was another hot topic. There were questions about special education money and MCAS graduation requirements.

Patrick is proud of the "Readiness Project" which is building on lessons learned over the past 15 years of Education Reform. He promised there were no unfunded mandates for citizens and towns in the initiative. He said everything is on the table in terms of ways to increase revenue except property taxes.

The environment was another focus. Hull is at the forefront of wind technology. One questioner asked about taking wind generation a step further and installing a wind-generated desalinization plant for Hull.

Several registered nurses from the Massachusetts Nurses Association were in attendance and asked about legislation that would put a limit on the number of patients under a nurse's care. Patrick would not commit to signing the bill but did say that patient welfare and safety were paramount. He said the needs of particular patients vary and that the issue was very complex.

He drew applause when he said the serious shortage of registered nurses in the state needs to be addressed.

Patrick delivered a somewhat hopeful message on the economy.

"It is all cyclical," he said. "Do what you can do and try your best to hang on until we cycle out of this."

"I believe government has a role in helping people."

Gov. Deval Patrick speaks to area residents at the Bernie King Pavilion in Hull during his second of 11 Town Hall-style meetings being held around the state. Patrick fielded a series of questions ranging from energy and the economy to health care and gay rights.

Budget strain due to too much spending

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

I agree with the statement released last week by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation that additional cuts are needed now to prevent significant cuts down the road.

A good sign of whether the state is facing tough financial times is when budget negotiations start to stretch into July. It took the Legislature until July 3 this year to finally adopt a state budget for the fiscal year that began three days earlier – a sure sign that our chief budget writers are uncomfortable with how this year could play out.

To be sure, even though the House and Senate took the unusual step of meeting in formal sessions the day before a major holiday to pass the Commonwealth's $28 billion budget, we're already seeing evidence that this budget is need of some reworking.

One major concern is whether the state's revenue growth projections will hold up. For example, Wall Street had a very poor month of June. If this develops into a trend, the state could see a significant drop in the amount of capital gains taxes we collect.

The biggest hinge point, however, is whether the federal government will grant the Commonwealth a three-year Medicaid waiver extension. If this waiver isn't approved, we could find ourselves having to cut as much as $600 million from the budget. To prevent this from happening, the Patrick Administration has been lobbying the federal government hard, and has even reached out to Republicans such as Mitt Romney and Andy Card in an attempt to secure the waiver.

Regardless of the outcome of these negotiations, I remain adamant that any budgetary strain we may experience largely originates from the spending side of the ledger, not the revenue side. And it's for this reason that I joined my five Republican colleagues in voting against the budget.

The state budget has doubled over the past 20 years, and even by the most conservative estimates, state revenue is expected to grow by about 3.8 percent next year – a figure that doesn't include the more than $800 million in new taxes the Legislature has imposed over the past couple of weeks on business, smokers and homebuyers.

Back in May, I and my Republican colleagues commended the Senate for recognizing our fiscal situation and demonstrating some fiscal restraint in passing a budget that was $130 million less than the one approved by the House. However, the budget that was adopted by the Legislature on July 3 wasn't just more than what the Senate approved, but also $30 million more than what the House approved. According to reports, House Ways and Means Chairman Robert DeLeo, embroiled in an internal leadership battle, dug his heels in and refused to budge on many of the spending figures and earmarks. And unfortunately, my Senate colleagues gave in and signed off on the largest state budget in the history of the Commonwealth.

It should be noted that Gov. Patrick has so far vetoed $54 million worth of these earmarks – including a few projects in my district – and is looking for power to do more. I agree with the statement released last week by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation that additional cuts are needed now to prevent significant cuts down the road.

The final version of the state budget also lacked many of the amendments that I co-sponsored that would have brought some responsibility to state spending, including prohibiting the use of tax dollars for sex-change surgeries, hormone therapies, or laser hair removal for prisoners.

Other successful amendments that I co-sponsored that were stripped from the budget included:

- A crackdown on the support network for illegal immigrants and require companies doing businesses with the state to verify the status of their employees;
- Allowing towns to grant excise tax abatements to residents on active military duty;
- Creating special license plates for veterans of the Iraq and Afghanistan wars;
- Establishing a special statewide commission to look at our water infrastructure needs, and;
- Banning the Lottery from giving away tickets to sporting events as rewards to well connected and already well compensated Lottery agents and employees.

There were also several other "good government" types of amendments that either I or my Republican colleagues sponsored that didn't even make it to the conference committee, including proposals to;

- reform our pension system by capping annual payouts and prohibiting state employees from having absurd allowances such as housing and parking spaces included in their pension calculations;
- strip the Lottery of its $10 million advertising budget, and;
- give state college students a $500 user fee tax credit.

And although it wasn't successful, I am proud to once again have pushed for the income tax rollback that my constituents – as well as the rest of the state – voted for back in 2000. Considering voters will be given the option this fall to vote to abolish the income tax altogether – a proposal that almost passed in 2002 – I argued that finally rolling back the income tax to 5 percent may defuse this potential political bomb. But only one Democrat, Sen. James Timilty of Walpole, was willing to vote in favor of the amendment.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth Norfolk District including Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

Grant helps keep vans running

Golden Living presents $1000 for van gas

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's no secret the price of gas is rising — and it is affecting everyone's wallets. This week, the Cohasset Elder Affairs got a helping hand from the Golden Living Center Cohasset to keep their vans running as need requires.

The Golden Living Center of Cohasset presented the CEA staff with a $1000 grant to help defray the rising cost of fuel for senior center vans.

The vans are used almost daily to take seniors to medical appointments, food shopping and activities at the Senior Center who might otherwise not be able to get out on their own.

Without the help of the grant, Director of Elder Services Linda Elworthy said they might have had to institute a fee for the service burdening those members of the community who may be least able to afford it.

"I am delighted for this grant from the Golden Living Center of Cohasset and so grateful," said Elworthy, adding a special thanks to the Golden Living Center's marketing and sales director Colleen Kissell for writing the grant.

The Town of Cohasset pays for the gas for the Elder Services vans. The $1000-grant amounts to nearly half of the budgeted fuel cost for the elder services this fiscal year. Finance Director Mike Buckley said $2,293 is devoted to that line item for fiscal 2009.

The grant is part of Golden Living Center of Cohasset's ongoing efforts to be a part of the greater community. Golden Living is a long-term care and rehabilitation facility located off Route 3A near the Hingham line (formerly Cohasset Knoll). It is one of about 350 Golden Living Centers across the US.

"The philosophy of Golden Living Center is to be a part of the community and to give back to the community," said Kissell. The grant was awarded under the Golden Living Center's Community Service Initiative.

Golden Living also offers free membership to residents 65 and older for the center's nine-piece fitness center designed for older people to keep bones and muscles in shape. They also hold a monthly breakfast buffet and a monthly barbeque for the town's seniors.

Sam DeGiacomo launches a home run for Post 118.

Post 118 on the brink of playoffs

Doonan's one hitter beats West Roxbury on the road

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

It's crunch time for the Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 Legion baseball team. After splitting a home and away series with Holbrook, losing to Weymouth Tuesday and beating West Roxbury Wednesday, Cohasset/Scituate needs a little help to get into the District 6 East playoffs for the first time since 2004.

Cohasset/Scituate and Holbrook are vying for the fifth and final playoff spot. By losing 4-3 to Weymouth at home Tuesday night, Post 118 forced a situation where it needs Holbrook to lose to Milton, Thursday night, passed Cohasset Mariner deadline, to clinch a berth. Post 118 also had to win at West Roxbury Wednesday night for a chance to get in. They did that winning, 1-0.

Both teams would be tied with 14 points in the fifth spot if Holbrook beats Milton, but Holbrook has the tiebreaker because they scored more runs against Post 118 in head-to-head action.

With all that said, Post 118 needed Brendan Doonan's heroics to pull out a 1-0 win over West Roxbury. The CHS star threw six no-hit innings and allowed one hit in seven.

"He was amazing," said Post 118 head coach Scott Arnold. "They could not hit him."

Cohasset/Scituate scored after Tommy Chase walked, stole second and was knocked in by Brad Sportack.

Heading into Tuesday's game with Weymouth, Post 118 controlled its own destiny. Two wins and they were in no matter what happened with any other teams. Sam DeGiacomo did his best throwing a complete game loss on the mound. He also connected on a two run home run.

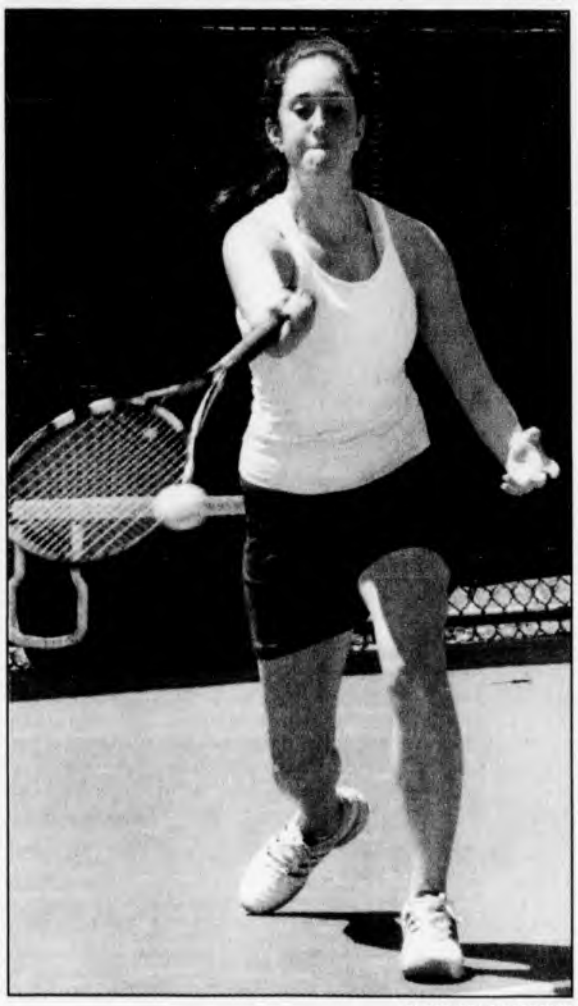
Cohasset/Scituate pulled its Jekyll and Hyde with a 9-0 loss against Holbrook Thursday and a 10-3 win against the same squad Monday. Thursday's blowout gave Holbrook the head-to-head run differential edge.

Brian Hill gave up three early runs Monday but settled down and pitched a complete game four hitter with five strikeouts.

Tommy Chase singled, doubled, walked and scored three runs at the plate. Brendan Doonan doubled, singled and scored two runs while DeGiacomo added a double.

Scituate native Mike Signorelli had the biggest day at the plate hitting a home run and a triple.

BAY STATE GAMES HIGHLIGHTS



Cohasset's Maddy Altholtz won a Gold Medal for the 16 and Under division in girls tennis at the Bay State Games. The Cohasset High all-star won four matches Saturday to clinch the Gold with relative ease. The matches were eight game pro-sets.

"It was a good experience," Altholtz said. "Doing match play helps for spring tennis and other tournaments that I do during the year."

Altholtz, who will be a junior next season, was surprised by the level of competition, or lack there of, at the Bay State Games.

"The competition was not as good as I expected, but some of the last couple matches were tough."

Altholtz competes year-round in USTA matches and plays for the Weymouth Club.

Coastal 6, Southeast 1

Coastal leadoff hitter Jaclyn Enos (Taunton, Coyle Cassidy HS) ended her day going 3-for-3 with two singles and a double as Coastal beat Southeast. Also playing well for Coastal was Katie Quintin (Dartmouth; Bishop Stang HS) who reached base three times, going 2-for-3 with a walk. Scoring Southeast's lone run was Carly Salerno (Cohasset; Cohasset HS).

Southeast 8, West 7

The top two hitters in the West's lineup, Leah Spring (S. Hadley; South Hadley HS) and Kasie Fagan (Longmeadow; Longmeadow HS) combined to score six of the seven West runs. Their efforts weren't enough to win as Southeast scored four runs in the bottom of the fifth. Carly Salerno (Cohasset, Cohasset HS) led the charge for Southeast as she went 2-for-3 on the day with a run scored.

Great eight

Four state title games in four seasons for 2008 boys lacrosse class

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Eight former Cohasset High School boys lacrosse players are gearing up for college this summer. They represent a senior class like no other at CHS. During their tenure on Pond Street, P.J. McCaw, Cliff Musto, Peter Ernst, Charlie Czerkawski, Mark Flibotte, Mike Grimm, Jake Cuneo and Nate Porter all made a major impact on one of the best lacrosse programs in the state of Massachusetts.

Flibotte, Grimm, Czerkawski and McCaw played on all four state title teams. They went 2-2; beating Dover-Sherborn in 2006 and Scituate in 2007 and losing to Medfield in 2005 and Scituate in 2008.

Of the eight soon to be freshman in either college or prep school, remarkably seven and possibly all eight will play lacrosse at the next level. It's an amazing accomplishment and a testament to the talented group. But, it is not surprising considering their level of success at the high school level.

"They were obviously the backbone of a lot of very good occurrences," said Cohasset High head coach Stew Curran.

Seadogs take New England crown

Cohasset represented on two championship teams

The Seadogs traveling baseball team scored a rare "triple" in the recent New England AAU championships, capturing three different age group championships – 15U, 13U and 12U.

The Seadogs/AAU Traveling Baseball program is part of the South Shore Baseball Club, which has been a member of the Massachusetts Association of the Amateur Athletic Union since 1994. The Seadogs compete against other Massachusetts AAU teams for the right to qualify for the AAU National Baseball Championships held all across the country. The Seadogs program is intended to supplement, rather than replace, local Little League, Babe Ruth, or American Legion baseball programs.

It took the 15-and-under Seadogs two days to win the NEAAU title. In the championship game against Central Mass Smash, Troy Salvatore set the stage in the opening inning with a single, stolen base and he scored on a single by Jeff Cavanaro, who came home on a double by Phil Sciretta. Three more runs in the third gave the Seadogs a 5-0 advantage, but the game was suspended due to inclement weather with the score 8-3 in the bottom half of the fifth frame. The game was picked-up where it left off and the Seadogs went on to win, 9-4.

"This veteran group did their best when their best was needed," head coach Frank Niles commented. "The new guys – Silva, Mildner and Rozanski – provided a great spark."

15U Seadogs Roster: 2B Jimmy Adams (Walpole), C Nick Barker (Weymouth), SS/CF/P Jeff Cavanaro (Cohasset), P/1B/3B Matt Goreham (Quincy), P/3B/1B Jesse Loughlin (Rockland), OF/P John Mildner (Newton), INF/P Demetri Monovoukas (Lexington), 3B/SS/2B John Mullen (Walpole), OF/P Collin Rozanski (Canton), OF/P/2B Troy Salvatore (Walpole), P/IB/OF Phil Sciretta (Duxbury), INF/OF/P/C Matt Sheehan (Scituate), OF/P Kyle Silva (Fall River), C/INF/OF Joe Zanca (Braintree), head coach Frank Niles (Weymouth), assistant coaches Vin Hillyer (Abington), Dave Mullen (Walpole), CJ Hillyer (Abington).

The 12-and-under Seadogs club edged Team Nokona, 5-4, in an exciting New England championship game. The Seadogs scored two runs in the six and reliever Will O'Sullivan closed the door, striking out two straight hitters with tying and go ahead runners on second and third.

Pinch runner Sean Scales escaped a rundown between second and third to score the tie-breaking run and Sammy Ballerini followed with a double off the fence in left, scoring Gus Culpo with the eventual game-winning tally. Culpo and starting pitcher Evan Morris had two hits apiece.

The 'Dogs are preparing for the AAU Nationals, which starts July 19 in Richmond, Virginia.

"We played well as a team throughout the entire tournament," Seadogs 12U head coach Matt Manders said. "Our pitching and defense stepped-up, showing the maturity of this team. We had some goals as a team coming into the 2008 season and winning the New England championships was right at the top. I'm really happy for this group of kids. We have worked hard since November and I'm excited to see what we can do at The Nationals."

"They are a good hard working bunch of kids."

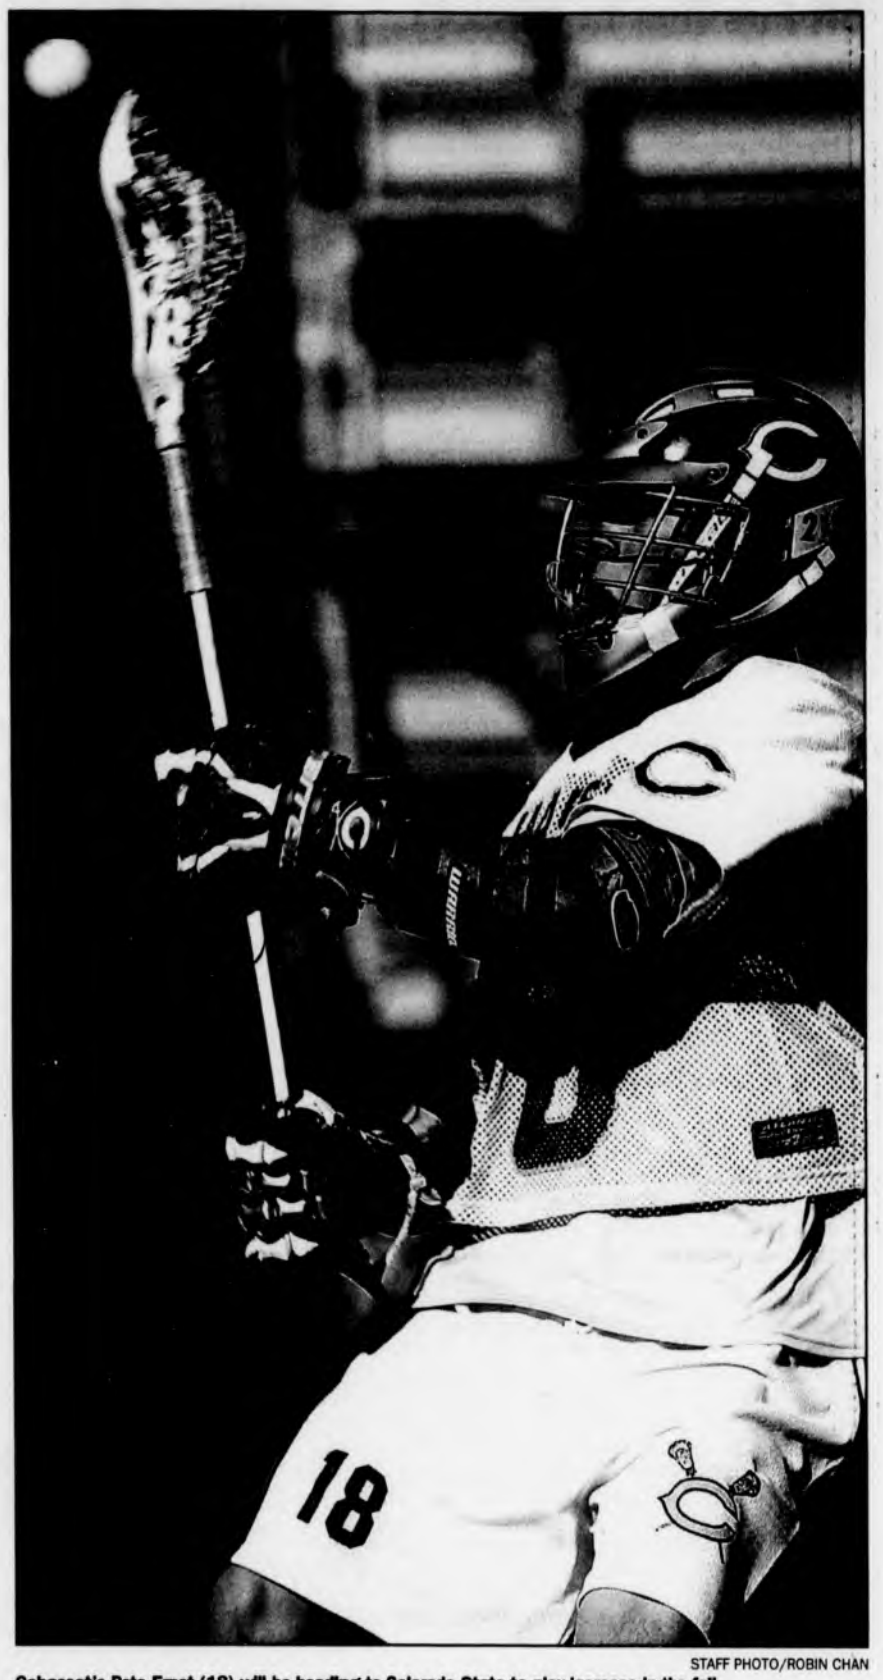
Curran recently took time out to talk about each former player.

P.J. McCaw—"A really hard-nosed athlete. He is a big strong kid that is absolutely fearsome." McCaw will be attending prep school in Connecticut where he will play football and lacrosse.

Cliff Musto—"Like P.J., he is raw. He is also athletic and brought a lot of heart to a young defense." Musto will be attending the University of Connecticut. They have a club team and Musto isn't sure if he will play, according to Curran.

Peter Ernst—"He is very steady, the fastest kid on the team the last three years. Lightning quick and undersized, he gets a lot out of what God gave him." Ernst will be attending Colorado State to play very competitive club lacrosse at the Division 1 School.

Charlie Czerkawski—"I was after him to do better all year and he [responded] by working harder than anyone. He won 70 percent of his faceoffs this year and after losing 60-40 to Wes Hawkins in the Chowder Cup he ended up winning 65 percent in the state title game." Czerkawski will be attending Connecticut College next year and playing lacrosse.



Mark Flibotte—"He is an exceptional lacrosse player with extraordinary skills. He can finish with people on him and when he gets open he puts the ball in the back of the net." Flibotte will be attending Bowdoin where he will play lacrosse.

Mike Grimm—"He gave us outstanding stuff as a freshman scoring over 20 goals. Then he had a knee injury his sophomore year and came back at the end of the season to help us get to the finals. His junior year he erupted on the scene and broke 100 points. This year he was dinged up early and wasn't quite full speed but he gave his all on the field. He was a good captain his senior year." Grimm will be attending Lehigh where he will play lacrosse.

Jake Cuneo—"He and I butted heads but it is because we are kindred spirits. We are both vocal when we don't need to be, sometimes. He worked hard and was rough but the good Lord blessed him with size and speed so some officials were on him. He is a throwback defensemen." Cuneo will be attending prep-school in the fall where he will play lacrosse.

Nate Porter—"He loves the game and works hard for a lot of what he has. He passed well and positioned himself well. He had a lot of weight on his shoulders in net." Porter will be attending the University of New England in Maine and will play lacrosse.

Curran added, "They are a good bunch of seniors. I'm gone miss em' all."

There's a lot new to see in Washington, D.C.

Greg Reibman
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

Washington -A new family will be moving into 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue early next year. And although John McCain and Barack Obama aren't new to Washington, D.C., this city has changed a lot since George W. Bush moved in a little less than eight years ago. Earlier this year, my wife, 11-year-old son and I explored some of our capital city's latest attractions. Here are some of our favorite finds:

Newseum

555 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W.; 888-639-7386; www.news-eum.org

News junkies will feel they've landed in heaven as they take in prize-winning photos, jaw-dropping archival film clips, fascinating artifacts - everything from a pencil used by a reporter at the Battle of Little Big Horn to massive slabs of the Berlin Wall - and an always-changing display of the front pages of 80 of that day's newspapers.

But the best part of the new Newseum - open here since April, although an earlier version operated for five years in Arlington, Va. - is the interactive exhibits that put you in the news gatherer's seat: Snap photos at the scene of a dramatic river rescue. Stand in front of a TV camera and pretend you are doing a live report from the White House lawn. Put on your editor's hat and give yourself an ethics test.

Just as dazzling is the Newseum building itself. Like the news business, architect James Polshek's stunning seven-story glass building is all about transparency, including grand views of the Capitol and Supreme Court. The Newseum houses two broadcast studios where live programs (ABC's "This Week With George Stephanopoulos," NPR's "Talk of the Nation") are sometimes broadcast. And tucked into a basement theater is a 3-D film that disguises lessons about the value of a free press with roller coaster-like special effects.

Nationals Park

1500 South Capitol St., SE; http://nationals.mlb.com/was/ballpark/index.jsp

Some people like the smell of a new car. I prefer new baseball stadiums.

And as far as ballparks go, the brand new home of the Washington Nationals baseball team provides a lot to cheer about. We're talking panoramic views of the Washington Monument and Anacostia River, Dixieland bands, state of the art video technology and the happiest hawkers I've ever seen. And that's just what you notice before getting to your seat, where you'll find plenty of legroom.

Open since March, the new 41,888-seat stadium stands to not only revitalize baseball in D.C. but the riverfront as well. Don't leave without enjoying a "chili half smoke" (chili dog) from Ben's Chili Bowl up behind the third base line.

The International Spy Museum

800 F. St., NW; 866-779-6873; www.spymuseum.org

If you think a visit here means an afternoon of looking at dusty old lapel pin cameras, that notion disappears the moment you step off a futuristic elevator and are told to spend a few minutes in the Briefing Room selecting and memorizing every detail of your secret identity. From there, roaming the halls unfolds like a good spy novel - full of twists and turns. Yes, they have hidden cameras bugs, weapons, disguises and more tools of the trade than you could ever dream of. You'll also learn about famous spies throughout history (Moses, George Washington and, maybe, that tourist standing next to you). And you'll be invited to decipher secret tap codes used by prisoners in the Hanoi Hilton. Take the kids to the International Spy Museum and they'll never realize that they're learning something about political history because it's so much fun. But also don't forget your secret identity or you may never be allowed to leave.

Fujifilm Giant Panda Habitat at the Smithsonian National Zoo

3001 Connecticut Ave. NW; http://nationalzoo.si.edu/default.cfm

OK, the National Zoo opened during the first Grover Cleveland administration (1885-89) but the star attraction these days - a giant panda cub named Tan Shan - was born on July 9, 2005, during George W. Bush's second term. The good news is that Tan Shan (tie-SHON) is going to stay in Washington, even as Bush gets ready to depart. The cub was scheduled to return to China this month but his stay has just been extended for at least another year. And while there's so many other animals to enjoy at this zoo, my family spent nearly two hours transfixed watching Tai Shan and parents Mei Xiang and Tian Tian's do what giant pandas do, which essentially is to eat bamboo. Lots and lots of bamboo.

Advance tickets are no longer needed to view the pandas and, like all Smithsonian museums and parks, admission is free.

If you go...

STAYING THERE: St. Gregory Luxury Hotel & Suites near Dupont Circle (2033 M Street, NW; 800-829-5034; www.stgregoryhotel-wdc.com) is a comfortable, contemporary hotel with the jolliest doormen we've ever met. Standard rooms from $229 per night on weekends, and through August you can stay the second night for just $1.

EATING THERE: Just off the lobby of the St. Gregory is the M.Street Bar and Grill (202-530-3621), a casual, brightly lit room where Chef Ronde Murphy dabbles in an international mix of cuisine. The menu changes about six times a year, but if you see rosemary lamb chops tenderly cooked in a lentil stew don't pass it up.

For a more boisterous dining experience, head to the theater district and Jaleo (480 7th Street NW; 202-628-7949; www.jaleo.com), an authentic Spanish tapas restaurant created by PBS chef Jose Andres. Our waiter did a great job helping us sort through a menu of some 70 items (a Spanish omelet with potatoes and onions for our 11-year-old son; Brussel sprouts with apples, apricots and grapes for my wife; and seared trout wrapped with Serrano ham for me) plus some great Spanish wines, sangrias and beers. Try the flan for dessert.

If you're shopping in Georgetown, stop in at the original Clydes of Georgetown (3236 M Street, NW, 202-333-9180; www.clydes.com). It's a cozy, old-style saloon, where (one suspects) the old stories of the politicians and power players who have sat on its bar stools are nearly as good as the burgers and the crab sandwiches. The chain now has eight locations.

Our favorite meal of our trip was also the least expensive: Ben's Chili Bowl (1213 U St NW; www.benschilibowl.com) has been serving the planet's best chili dogs, burgers and breakfast since the '50s. Be sure to sit at the counter because, as good as the food is, the real fun comes from watching the crowd and the chatting with the short-order cooks. Ben's is easy get to by the Metro (take the Green Line to the U Street/Cardozo stop). On weekends, it's open until 4 a.m.

Cohasset Middle School honor roll

Some of our students were inadvertently left off of the public honor roll list at varying points during the year. The students at the middle school work hard for their much deserved spotlight! In recognition of all of these hard-working, dedicated middle school students who have made the honor roll during one, some, or all of their four terms this past school year, please see the updated listing below. Congratulations to all of you.

Enjoy your summer and we will see you in September. – Mrs. Sandler, assistant principal.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 14, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your persistence pays off as the information you demanded starts to come through. The pace is slow at first, but it begins to speed up as the week draws to a close.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unwelcome bit of news jolts the Bovine, who would prefer that things proceed smoothly. But it's at most a momentary setback. A Leo brings more welcome tidings.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You need to pay close attention to the details before making a commitment. Don't accept anything that seems questionable, unless you get an answer that can be backed up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations on getting that project up and running. But as exciting as it is, don't let it carry you away. Make sure you set aside time to spend with family and friends.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Be sure you're part of the discussion involving your suggestions. Your presence ensures that you can defend your work, if necessary. It also helps gain your colleagues' support.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding needs to be dealt with, or it can grow and cause more problems later on. Be the bigger person and take the first step to clear the air.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Set some strict guidelines for yourself so your heavier-than-usual work schedule doesn't overwhelm the time you need to spend relaxing with loved ones.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel a little uncomfortable being among people you hardly know. But remember that today's strangers can become tomorrow's valuable contacts.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Reward yourself for all that you've accomplished despite some annoying situations that got in your way. Enjoy a well-earned getaway with someone special.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Realizing that someone else is taking credit for what you did is bound to get anyone's goat, but especially yours. Be patient. The truth soon comes out.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Forget about opposites attracting. What you need is to find someone who thinks like you and will support your ideas, even if others say they're too radical.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Workplace problems can affect your financial plans. Be prudent and avoid running up bills or making commitments until things begin to ease up by the 25th.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

He's got Daddy Warbucks down pat

This time, Plymouth resident stars with Sally Struthers in 'Annie'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When he walked into Pembroke Community Middle School with his head shaved, teacher and actor Terry Runnels knew he'd get a reaction out of his students.

"Some of them didn't even recognize me, while several of the other kids just gave me a hard time," said Runnels — temporarily bald-pated for his role as billionaire businessman Oliver Warbucks in "Annie"— by telephone last week en route to a matinee. "Our principal, Steven LaMarche, was great about it, however, and suggested that he'd shave his head, too, if all the other teachers joined him."

Fortunately for barbers and hairdressers in the Pembroke area, the other teachers passed on the offer to join Runnels on what has become a ritual for the Plymouth resident. Runnels first played the chrome-domed capitalist who adopts the orphan with the crimson curls in the Tony Award-winning musical's fourth national tour in 1981.

"I shave my head each time I play this character," said Runnels.

The Plymouth resident has played Daddy Warbucks in two national tours and in another 10 or so regional and stock productions. This time, he is on stage with the Reagle Players in Waltham, joined by two-time Emmy Award-winning actress Sally Struthers ("All in the Family") as Miss Hannigan, and the original Rooster, Robert Fitch. Fitch is not only reprising his Broadway role, but also directing the show that won seven Tony Awards in 1977, including Best Musical. "Annie" features music by Charles Strouse, lyrics by Martin Charnin, and a book by Thomas Meehan, based on the Harold Gray comic strip "Little Orphan Annie."

The show's 20th anniversary Broadway mounting, with the late Nell Carter as Miss Hannigan, won the Tony Award for Best Revival of a Musical. The production left New York for a national tour, with Struthers taking over from Carter. Runnels wasn't associated with that production, but he welcomes the chance to appear alongside one of its leading ladies.

"Sally Struthers is an absolutely wonderful Miss Hannigan, and also a wonderful person. She earned lasting fame from television and films, but there is no star turn with her. She is just a very real person who is great with the kids," says Runnels. "I've worked with a lot of Hannigans over the years, many of whom were great, but Sally ranks as one of the very best. It is a treat to work with her and to get to know her a little bit, too."

Runnels, who spent his childhood in Oklahoma and Texas, was pursuing his career in New York when he was cast to play Drake and understudy Warbucks in his first "Annie." It was also during this time, in the early 1980s, that he appeared in the national tour of the musical "Zorba," starring Anthony Quinn, as well as many more plays and musicals.

After earning a master's degree in directing from the University of Connecticut, Runnels taught at Syracuse University. He later relocated to Massachusetts with his wife and three children, and took teaching assignments at Plymouth South and Silver Lake Regional high schools. Runnels now teaches dramatic arts and vocal music in Pembroke.

"Whenever I see a show with a big, burly baritone part, I think to myself 'I wish I could play that role,'" said Runnels, who has sung with the Pilgrim Festival Chorus, the Falmouth Chorus, and the Plymouth Philharmonic. "I'm a proud member of Actors Equity, however, so I can't just take roles in community theater.

"My oldest daughter, Kaytee, a senior at Bridgewater State College this year, was in the ensemble of '42nd Street' at Reagle Players and when I saw the high quality of that production, and learned they used Equity actors in lead roles, I was very interested in working with them. And when 'Annie' came along, everything just fell into place."

With its story of the street-smart little girl who moves from a Depression-era orphanage into Oliver Warbucks' Park Avenue mansion with a sandy-haired stray dog in tow, and memorable music like "It's the Hard Knock Life," "Easy Street," and, of course, "Tomorrow," "Annie" has spawned everything from a 1982 feature film starring Carol Burnett and Albert Finney to seemingly continuous U.S. national tours. There were also two ill-fated sequels: "Annie 2: Miss Hannigan's Revenge," and "Annie Warbucks," neither of which ever made it to Broadway.

Runnels, 60, will direct his middle-school students in a production of "Annie Jr.," a version of the show specially tailored for a young cast, during the coming school year. Until then he is content to once again bring Warbucks to life.

"I want the audience to perceive the change in Warbucks from stern businessman to the caring person who falls in love with Annie, the way a father does with his daughter. I want the audiences to believe the changes in my character are real," said Runnels, who says a Warbucks solo from act two is his favorite song from the show. "I love 'Something Was Missing,' in which Warbucks describes what his life was like before he met Annie. It gets to me every time."

The Reagle Players' production of "Annie" will be at the Robinson Theatre, 617 Lexington St., Waltham, through July 19. For tickets and information, call 781-891-5600 or go online at reagleplayers.com.

Two McDonalds for the price of one

Dylan McDonald opens for his famous dad at Music Circus

Michael McDonald will perform July 23 at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Michael McDonald has earned five Grammy Awards and a legion of loyal fans as the voice of hits like "I Keep Forgettin'," "Yah Mo B There," "On My Own," and, during a memorable period with the Doobie Brothers, "Takin' it to the Streets," "Minute by Minute," and "What a Fool Believes." But earning the respect of his 20-year-old son, Dylan McDonald — now embarking on his own music career and opening for his father at the South Shore Music Circus July 23 and at the Cape Cod Melody Tent July 25 — has been another story altogether for the singer-songwriter, whose own music career goes back more than 30 years.

"When Dylan was just a boy, we would jam together. A little bit later, he got self-conscious and it got to the point where he wouldn't discuss his music with me at all. He was much more interested in the music of people like Bob Dylan, Emmy Lou Harris, and Neil Young than he ever was in my music," recalled the elder McDonald by telephone from his home in Nashville last week. "He put his guitar down for a while and it looked like he might leave music behind him. But, before too long, he started up again."

"I caught him in my studio cutting a demo with a few other young musicians from his group, The Avians, and he wasn't happy at all. I think he would rather I caught him having sex. Unfortunately, when I'm thinking I'm offering helpful suggestions, he thinks I'm being too critical," McDonald said.

Next week's dates in Cohasset and Hyannis, where Dylan McDonald will be his father's "special guest," may go a long way toward smoothing out relations between the musical McDonalds.

"Now, when he wants to open for me, I'm not chicken liver anymore," said McDonald with a laugh. "I'm actually very proud of Dylan. He's a good musician and he is not fazed at all by the things that would have frenzied me at his age."

A St. Louis native, McDonald has had fans of his now patented brand of blue-eyed soul in a frenzy since he first gained recognition as a touring musician with Steely Dan in the early 1970s. Joining the Doobie Brothers in 1975, replacing the ailing Tom Johnston as lead vocalist, McDonald found ever-increasing fame.

His song "What a Fool Believes," co-written with Kenny Loggins and appearing on the Doobies' 1978 Warner Bros. album "Minute by Minute," was the group's second single to go to number one and earned them a 1980 Grammy Award for Pop Vocal Performance by a Group and its songwriters a Grammy for Record of the Year.

By 1981, McDonald was ready to embark on a solo career that continues to flourish today. Indeed, for the past five years McDonald has been exploring the Motown Records songbook on the Motown label, with his 2003 platinum-selling, double Grammy Award-nominated "Motown;" the 2004 follow-up, "Motown Two;" and his newest album, "Soul Speak." On this latest release, McDonald doesn't restrict himself to covers or hits from one record label. He takes on everything from Burt Bachrach and Hal David's "Walk on By," a chart topper for Dionne Warwick, to a solo spin on "I Knew You Were Waiting for Me," a 1987 duet hit for Aretha Franklin and George Michael.

"In some ways, 'Soul Speak' is what I would have done with all three albums if it had been left totally up to me," McDonald said. "I would have done more B-sides on all three albums and more of the greater, lesser known songs, like Leonard Cohen's 'Hallelujah' and Van Morrison's 'Into the Mystic.' I really want people who listen to the new album to say to themselves, 'Oh, I haven't heard these songs in years.'"

McDonald acknowledges having a similar reaction to some of the songs when he was preparing to go into the recording studio.

"In some ways, these songs were stuck in my subconscious. I've listened to some of the songs like Delbert McClinton's cover of 'Baby Can I Change My Mind' many times over the years, but others not so often. Over the years, I'd make lists of songs like these that I wanted to record, but then I'd lose them before I got anywhere near the recording stage."

These days getting near a recording studio doesn't even require McDonald to leave the 15-acre Nashville farm he and his family have called home since 1995. McDonald, 56, did venture off the farm, however, for his most recent albums.

"The two Motown albums and 'Soul Speak' were largely recorded in Los Angeles. On the first two records, we built the tracks on computers and then brought in the musicians. It worked well, so it was tempting to continue to build stuff on the computer for the latest album, but it is not the same as having live musicians playing in a room together on live mics. We recorded 'Soul Speak' in a more old-school, live fashion. Eric Clapton's longtime collaborator Simon Climie was the producer and we pretty much had Eric Clapton's band in the studio with us. We did almost everything live, in two or three takes, which gives the tracks a real vitality."

The album features not just remakes, but three new songs by McDonald that serve to remind listeners that he is as much a songwriter as a singer.

"We actually went back and forth choosing the originals," he says. "'Only God Can Help Me Now' and 'Getting Over You' are kind of retro feeling, which helps them to fit easily with the rest of the album, but 'Enemy Within' stands on its own. It is a song about human nature that makes the point that the greatest enemy to the American people is the American people. Simon thought it added a little bit of a turn that the album needed, so it wasn't just a collection of oldies."

McDonald's distinct vocals have long been his signature, but on "Soul Speak," he wanted to push himself to match the songs rather than the other way around. "A lot of these songs required me to step up to the plate as a singer even more than the ones that I write. But, if I'm going to record a song that's well known, I won't lower the key. That is part of what goes into respecting the original — whether it's in the most comfortable key for me or not."

In concert, McDonald applies the same tenet to his own songs.

"Most of the records I made were purposely in higher keys than I was really comfortable in, because if you push it up it gives it more urgency and a greater sense of passion. And, even today, I'm always reluctant to change keys. When we do 'What A Fool Believes' in concert, we do it in the same key it was recorded in 30 years ago. Some nights it isn't easy, but we do it that way, because that's the way it should be done."

Michael McDonald will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on July 23. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-931-2787. McDonald will be at the Melody Tent, 21 West Main St., Hyannis, on July 25. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 1-800-347-0808.)

Avalon apartments moving ahead

Cooperation agreement with Water Comm. allows on-site sewer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Over four and half years after the Avalon Cohasset project was granted a comprehensive permit by the Zoning Board of Appeals, the project is on the road to break ground within the next six months.

The major piece delaying the project — sewer connection — has fallen into place. This past week, the Cohasset Water Commission, which had appealed the Department of Environmental Protection's approval of the on-site groundwater discharge permit a year ago, reached a cooperation agreement with the Avalon developers.

"(This agreement) clears the way for use to move forward with construction," said Scott Dale, Vice President of Development and project manager for Avalon Cohasset. What can be described as a controversial project will bring 200 apartments, evenly split between one- and two-bedroom units, to a 62-acre plot off Route 3A. The entrance to the complex will be across from Good Sport.

The cooperation agreement stems from the Water Commission's long concern over the project, which is sited in the Lily Pond watershed. The Water Commission appealed the project at nearly every turn from the on-site wastewater treatment to the comprehensive permit itself.

"It has been an on-going conversation with the Water Commission for years," said Dale. "I think we both came out with a greater understanding of the issues on both sides."

Avalon has agreed to design changes to the site's wastewater treatment plant, including additional technologies intended to enhance the removal of phosphorus and nitrogen from the treated effluent. The treated effluent will be discharged into the ground and could eventually end up in Lily Pond — the prime source of the town's drinking water located approximately one mile from the Avalon site. The commission was concerned the wastewater treatment system would contribute to groundwater pollutants, increase nutrient loading and adversely impact water quality in Lily Pond.

Bigley finds All the Best

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Without a doubt anyone who has driven up Ripley Road during the past two weeks has noticed a new icon destined to become a Cohasset landmark — a smiling bearded man against a green background next to the words "All the Best."

If you venture inside the shop, you'll find a striking resemblance to the face on the sign in owner and Cohasset resident David Bigley. The natural food store, formerly located across the tracks in the James Brook Crossing shops, has moved out to the "main street" and Bigley could not be more excited.

"Now, we're so visible and easy to find," said Bigley taking a break from unpacking boxes and rearranging furniture in his new space. Despite the boxes and the need for some fresh paint, All the Best Natural Foods opened for business at its new location this week.

David Bigley stands in front of the new location of All the Best on Ripley Road.

One month shy of his four-year anniversary in the James Brook Crossing shops, Bigley had built a solid core of regular customers, "I felt I built (the business) to what I could in the back there. I have a very solid core of regular customers who come in, but to survive and flourish you need more than that."

With the new more prominent location, formerly the home Carousel Antiques, across from the post office and next to Epiphany Designs, he hopes to gain new regular customers and walk-in traffic.

Despite the change of scenery, All the Best will be sticking to its roots

If your dog loves treats (and what dog doesn't?) then two kids in Cohasset want to meet you. The founders of Doggie Delights, Owen Kefallinos and Grace Gaumer, are baking up fresh, all natural dog treats and selling them at the Farmer's Market.

More than just a fun summer business, Owen, a sixth grader, and Grace, a fifth grader, are working to raise money for the Scituate Animal Shelter. Already the business endeavor of Doggie Delights has been able to donate $127 to the local shelter that serves Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull and has a goal to donate $500.

The project started off when Owen received the dog bone recipe book from his mother's friend. He made one of the book's treats and tested it out on his lab-mix dog, Athena. She loved it.

"Some people don't have dogs, but they like our logo so we're going to be selling shirts soon."
— Owen Kefallinos

Would other dogs feel the same?

To find out Owen left some of them in his Fairoaks Lane neighbors mailboxes and offered them to dogs he saw along the way. The dogs just ate them up, literally.

Owen knew he was on to something and decided to take the product to the masses, or at least the hundreds of people who flock to the Thursday afternoon Cohasset Farmer's Market. With the help of his mom, Lisa, they got a permit from the Farmer's Market and his next-door neighbor Grace joined the effort.

Towns oppose Aquarion increase

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

Some 60 Hull, Cohasset, and Hingham residents turned out for the recent 3-1/2-hour Department of Public Utilities hearing at Hull High School to vehemently oppose Aquarion Water Company's request for a $3.1 million, or overall 24.8 percent, rate hike.

This would amount to an increase of about $10.80 a month for customers using an average of 175 gallons (about seven full bath tubs'— worth of water, company officials say) daily. Aquarion provides water to Hingham, Hull, and North Cohasset.

The majority of those speaking were from Hull, but Hingham Selectman Bruce Rabuffo also spoke strongly against the proposed increase. "Our rates are already 58 percent higher than those in the MWRA district. I spent 32 years in the utility business and I find this increase request overwhelming," he said. "Are the current rates even justifiable? It's in the evidentiary process that more details will be forthcoming."

Most of the increase is attributed to investments totaling $21.4 million that Aquarion has made for water utility infrastructure improvements since 2001 in such areas as increased water supply and replacement of aging and undersized pipes, as well as other needed water system advancements.

Cohasset Selectman Paul Carlson said that while only 20 percent of Cohasset residents are served by Aquarion, the town is "looking forward to working with Hingham and Hull in fighting this rate increase."

Four Hull selectmen — Joan Meschino, Domenico Sestito, John Reilly, and Dennis Blackall — also spoke against the increase. In fact, Reilly, a lifelong Hull resident and 14-year selectman, called for a rate decrease.

"These are difficult economic times for our citizens. About 40 percent of our residents are low-income, and many seniors are on fixed incomes. We're concerned about their ability to adapt to these higher rates," Meschino said. "We need to ask the DPU to ensure this isn't an overestimation [by Aquarion]."

Calling the increase absurd, Blackall called for Aquarion "to suck it up just like the rest of American businesses and consumers are doing. The shareholders, not the ratepayers, should bear these costs," he said. "Hull customers are being asked to bear a disproportionate amount of the increase, considering that less than 5 percent of the capital system improvements have been applied to our town. I say, don't negotiate, don't give Aquarion a piece [of the rate increase], give them zero. We need to tell Aquarion 'no.' Make them run their business more efficiently."

This is the first rate increase request since 2001. Aquarion acquired the utility from Massachusetts-American Water Company in 2002.

"We've tried to stay out of the rate increase arena for as long as possible," Aquarion Sr. Vice President of Operations Larry Bingaman said, adding that "this is a very public process." He also noted that in 2006, customers saw a four percent decrease in their water bills.

Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, both spoke in opposition to the increase. They recently sent a joint letter to the DPU stating their position.

Hedlund, did, however, commend Aquarion for working with him and Bradley to reinstate the recently expired water-rate subsidy program. "The company has hired lobbyists at its own expense to assist us," he said.

At the same time, Hedlund said "we need to look at Aquarion's operating efficiencies in more detail. The percentage [of the rate increase] is inordinate."

Bradley said it's as if Aquarion "is trying to get seven years' worth of increases all at once." He also opposed the institution of inclining block rates, which would result in higher charges for customers who exceed a certain threshold of water use. "This is dangerous territory, and untested in our region," Bradley said. "This will affect families more than anyone. We have three kids and our washing machine never stops. We'd love to cut our water use, but we can't. It's not like we're leaving the faucet running."

A large number of Hull, a couple of Cohasset, and a handful of Hingham residents spoke in opposition to the rate increase. Many of the concerns shared by Hull residents centered around water quality – particularly, they said, since Cohasset water started being pumped to Hull to replace the Aquarion water used to serve the Linden Ponds retirement community in Hingham. (Cohasset water is "wheeled" through the Aquarion system, but not through the Hingham treatment plant.)

"I think the Lily Pond [Cohasset's water supply] water should go to Linden Ponds, not to Hull," said Hull resident Charlotte Anne Murray.

A number of speakers from Hull also questioned why they should be paying the treatment plant surcharge included in all Aquarion bills when their water is coming from Cohasset and is therefore not being treated at the Hingham plant.

Hingham resident Sam Manian called for a feasibility study to see if the three towns could run the water company better than the current managers.

Cohasset resident Jeffrey Smith quoted much lower water bills in the MWRA district, even in Los Angeles, and in other areas. "There's a big disconnect here," he said. "Aquarion needs to justify these differences."

Hull town manager Philip E. Lemnios noted the irony of the targeted rate increase being set for April 1, 2009. "This is truly a joke," he said. "The boards of all three towns have hired expert consultants and we will go to battle to fight this proposed rate increase. It's absurd."

Information about Docket DPU 08-27 for the Aquarion rate case is posted on the Mass. DPU website at http://www.aquarion.com/massachusetts.html.

Customers with questions or concerns or who need assistance with water service needs may contact the Aquarion Customer Service Center at 1-800-732-9678.

Vandalism incidents lead the log

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

• On Saturday (July 19), a resident went to police headquarters to report his car had been scratched with an object and the convertible top ripped. The car was parked on Summer Street. The resident said the car was fine when he came home from the Red Sox game at 11:30 p.m. the night before. There were scratches on the hood, trunk and doors, police said.

• At 9:13 a.m. on Thursday (July 17), a Summer Street resident called police to report that someone had thrown a rock into the windshield of her son's car.

The investigating officer saw the broken windshield and a rock on the ground in front of the gray Nissan. The hood was also dented.

The car was not damaged before 11 p.m. when it was last seen, police said. Therefore the vandalism occurred sometime overnight Wednesday (July 16) to Thursday (July 17) when it was discovered at 7:30 a.m.

• At about 9:30 a.m. on Thursday (July 17), there was damage to mailboxes in the 400 block of Atlantic Avenue. The officer, who responded, saw two mailboxes on the ground, and a third, whose post was hit but was still intact.

• At 11:45 a.m. on Thursday (July 17), a Border Street resident reported that his car was scratched overnight. There were scratches to the passenger side door, the hood and rear quarter on the passenger side, police said.

Chief Hussey said police are investigating these incidents to see if any of them are related.

Missing sweetheart

A note stating "I love You Sweetheart" left on the dashboard of an unoccupied van with New Hampshire plates that had been parked for three days generated enough concern for a resident to approach an officer working a detail near Howard Gleason Road on Sunday (July 20). A towing company was contacted and police gained access to the van. Everything appeared OK. Dispatch was able to contact the family of the registered owner. As it turned out the man, who had driven the van, was in town visiting friends and had been staying on their boat for a few days.

Stolen bikes

A Ripley Road resident reported that two bicycles were taken from the front porch of the home sometime overnight Monday (July 14) to Tuesday (July 15). The missing bikes are a maroon, men's 26-inch Giant, and a boy's 24-inch Wal-Mart-brand bike. The theft was reported at about 10 a.m. July 15.

Larcenies

Police believe some of the items being reported missing last week from residents' cars may have been taken during the rash of car break-ins several weeks ago in the Jerusalem Road area. Police made three arrests in those incidents. Over the past week, car owners have reported a missing digital camera valued at about $85 and a garage door opener.

Another resident reported the key to a new car was missing. Police do not think that incident is related to the others because the car was located in a different part of town.

Summonsed

A 22-year-old Quincy man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and speeding after a traffic stop on North Main Street by the ball fields on Wednesday (July16) at about 7:10 a.m. The officer stopped the car, which was traveling in excess of 48 mph where the speed limit is 30.

The operator handed the officer a Brazilian passport. The officer told the man that he could not drive on the Brazilian license. The car was towed, police said.

MV crashes

• Monday (July 14) at 4:30 p.m. a 1991 Honda, driven by a Cohasset resident, was unable to stop behind a 2002 Ford at the lights on Route 3A and Pond Street. The Ford, which was operated by a Middleboro resident and was traveling south, had stopped behind others cars at the light. The Honda hit the Ford, damaging both cars. The driver of the Honda was cited for following too close, police said.

• A 1998 Subaru, operated by a Cohasset woman, was backing up at Cohasset Collision at about 10:15 a.m. on Tuesday (July 15) when she struck an unoccupied, parked rental car.

There was ~~minor~~ damage to the right side door on the passenger side of the 2008 Chrysler rental car that was parked in front of a bay, police said.

Dog bite

On Monday (July 14) a Nichols Road resident notified police that a dog had bitten her the day before. Police said the dog's license had lapsed but it was up-to-date on its vaccinations. However, the dog is being quarantined for 10 days, which is standard practice in these incidents.

The dog's owner was ordered to license the dog, police said.

Dog OK

A walk-in to the police station on Friday (July 18) reported that his dog was missing and that someone may have taken it. The dog owner had left the dog leashed to the car with water and food while he was at the Music Circus and when he returned the dog was gone. As it turned out another person found the dog, which was still wearing the leash, and took care of it overnight. The dog was reunited with its owner, police said.

Dog in car

Several concerned citizen notified police after seeing a small dog locked in a convertible with the top up and the windows barely cracked at about 2:30 p.m. on Thursday (July 17). As it turned out, the owner of the dog was at the Farmer's Market and was within 100 feet of the car, monitoring the situation, police said.

Doors stolen

Police are investigating the theft of two removable doors from a Jeep Wrangler parked at a business off Route 3A last week. The doors were taken sometime over the weekend between 7 p.m. Saturday (July 12) to 7 a.m. Monday (July 14). The doors are valued at $2,500, police said.

Property damage

Chief Hussey said the water and sewer departments are working with the contractors for the water/sewer projects to ensure that any property damage is taken care of. Last week a Nichols Road resident called asking that a police officer view the damage that included tractor marks on the grass. In most cases, it is not a police issue, he said.

Signs taken

Four real estate signs from various locations along Jerusalem Road and Deep Run were taken last week. Two were later recovered on Nichols Road. A missing lawn mowing sign was also found.

Chief Hussey explained that while some may think stealing lawn signs is a prank – it is a crime.

Bathtub running

A Nichols Road resident became concerned last week when she arrived home and found the water in her bathtub was running. The water department was called to confirm that no one had been in the house testing the water. The water faucet had not been completely shut off, police said. The water department had been checking the lines that could have caused the water to come out.

Avalon apartments moving ahead

The parties also agreed to additional monitoring wells between the site and Lily Pond and a more frequent monitoring schedule.

"The additional treatment measures and safety precautions addresses the Water Commission's concern with the development's impact on drinking water quality. The removed phosphorus and nitrogen would otherwise contribute to organic plant growth, which deteriorates the raw water the department draws from its primary reservoir, Lily Pond," said Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt.

"This agreement gives us protections and remedies if something goes wrong at the plant," said Pratt. The agreement also restores the Water Department's one-time system connection fee, which was previously waived by the Zoning Board of Appeals. The fee amounts to $670,000 to be paid in two installments; half at the issuance of the building permit and the balance at the issuance of the first occupancy permit. The agreement also defines the parameter for the distribution system within the new Avalon community.

The Avalon developers still have many little steps to take before breaking ground. Final plans need to be drawn up. Building permits need to be pulled. The Zoning Board of Appeals needs to be visited to give an update.

"We're pretty excited. It's been a long journey to this point and we're confident what we built is going to be successful."

— Scott Dale, Avalon vice president of development

"This was really our last big hurdle, the next steps to construction are administrative," said Dale. "We're pretty excited. It's been a long journey to this point and we're confident what we built is going to be successful."

Although other developments in Cohasset have stalled due to the struggling real estate market and generally down economy, Dale is confident the market will accept the Avalon rental units. Avalon currently is in or close to the leasing stage of similar developments in both Hingham and Sharon.

"We are optimistic the current market conditions on the South Shore will accept this project," said Dale. The 200-unit complex will include a fitness room, pool, resident lounge, walking/jogging trails around the perimeter of the property and a washer and dryer in every unit.

"The apartments themselves will be very well-appointed and will have spacious floor plans," said Dale.

The Avalon project was issued a comprehensive permit from the ZBA for 200 apartments more than three years ago. It was approved as a 40-B project. Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Twenty-five percent of the units, or 50, will be considered affordable. The state encourages rental housing, and because all 200 Avalon units would be rentals, all units — affordable and market rate — would be counted toward the town's affordable housing inventory. However, Cohasset currently has 76 units (or 2.8 percent) of affordable housing. The project will bring Cohasset within about 30 units to compliance with 40-B.

"We are pleased to have worked out an agreement which addresses our original treatment concerns and provides an extra measure of protection for our water supply well into the future," said Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer.

It should be noted, the three-person Water Commission was not unanimous in its decision to sign the cooperation agreement with Avalon. Water Commissioner John McNabb voted against signing the agreement.

"I thought we should have kept fighting the project, because an onsite wastewater treatment plant for 200 units is not good for protecting watershed quality, no matter how well it is designed or operated," said McNabb, adding he believed there were other shortcomings in the cooperation agreement. The agreement prohibits the Water Commission from speaking up or taking any action on the project going forward, including, he said, the clean up of the possible hazardous waste contamination left behind by the previous property owners.

Padre Pio Day of Prayer at St. Anthony

St. Anthony Parish, Cohasset, will host a celebration on Saturday, Aug. 2, commemorating the life of St. Pio of Pietrelcina – Padre Pio, who died 40 years ago. The celebration will begin at 11 a.m. with a Holy Hour, which will include the recitation of an international rosary. Confession will also be available at this time. At noon, the Liturgy of the Mass from Padre Pio's Beatification Ceremony will be celebrated. Veneration of seven of Padre Pio's relics will take place within the liturgy. Following the liturgy, the celebration will continue in the Parish Hall where refreshments will be served and a video on the Life of Padre Pio will be shown.

Parishioners and friends are invited to attend the celebration.

Town Hall restoration concept supported

Selectmen like auditorium second floor, offices first floor scheme

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

While flip-flops are the unofficial footwear of summer, the Town Hall could be doing a flip-flop of its own in the coming years.

The Board of Selectmen supported in spirit the option to restore the old portion of Town Hall to its original state. When the Town Hall was first built in 1857 the auditorium was on the second floor and town offices on the first.

The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee requested the Selectmen to make a preliminary decision on the design concept so they could begin the long and involved process of seeking out grants and other funding sources.

The committee has been working alongside architectural consultant Carr, Lynch and Sandell to devise a comprehensive plan to update the antique building.

Despite the Selectmen's decision, the ultimate judge will be Town Meeting. The second option has a price tag of $1.2 million over the option that leaves the current layout basically in tact. Preliminary estimates for the two designs are $3.2 million to leave the general building configuration the same (scheme A) and $4.4 million to change it (scheme B).

Following a presentation two weeks ago, four of the five Selectmen spoke in support of scheme B.

"When (switching the auditorium to the second floor) was first mentioned to me, I thought, this is a little strange," said Selectman Karen Quigley. After hearing of the extensive utilities work that would have to be done in both options and what she saw as improved use of space, possibility for green technology and better access in scheme B, she said she came around.

"It's a big thing to come around to. It's a tremendous amount of money no matter how you look at it," said Quigley. Selectman Paul Carlson seconded Quigley's sentiments.

"(Scheme) A seems like a partial job. We need to gut it and do it right," said Carlson, adding the last time the old part of Town Hall had a true makeover was 80 years ago (in 1928).

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer wasn't ready to jump on the scheme B bandwagon just yet.

"I'm not really ready for this yet," said Dormitzer. He described concerns that adequate meeting space hadn't been addressed, not only just for space, but for use. "Even in this meeting space there is no room or equipment for show and tell or to make presentation. I'm not convinced a large auditorium is the answer."

Donna McGee of the Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee said the architectural plans weren't cast in stone and elements like sliding partitions in the auditorium could be added to increase meeting spaces.

Dormitzer said his other concern was getting public input. "I'm not convinced we have heard all viewpoints.." The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee plans to hold a public forum on the Town Hall restoration project sometime in September.

"There are a lot of steps before this hits the road," said Carlson. In a 4-0 vote, with Quigley, Ted Carr, Carlson and Koed voting in favor and Dormitzer abstaining, the Selectmen supported the concept of scheme B. The Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee will go forward in applying for funding from different sources, some of which have deadlines in August.

How will the town pay for the Town Hall restoration?

With a $4.4 million price tag on the scheme B restoration plan, the question of how to pay for it is bound to come up. From the very beginning, Town Hall Restoration and Renovation Committee chairman David Farrag has said other funding sources would be sought outside of the town. Tax credits, which could pay up to 20 percent of the project's total cost are being applied for in the coming months.

As a building on the National Historic Register, Farrag said the group plans to apply for grants with the National Park Service and Massachusetts Historical Commission.

"We're investigating any and all funding sources from different non-profit foundations and trust to tax credits," said Farrag in a phone interview. They will look at other similar projects in the area done in recent years to find out how they were paid for and if those funding programs are still available. The committee will be breaking off into teams to look for funding sources as well.

"Some might pan out, some might not but you we're not going to know until we try," said Farrag. "We just have to go for it, we really do. The Town Hall is only going to get worse with time."

In addition to seeking money, Farrag will bring the project before any audience willing to listen.

"We want to shop this around," he said.

Interested residents can read the complete feasibility study done by Carr, Lynch and Sandell at the Selectmen's Office, the Town Clerk's Office and the Library.

If residents know of any possible funding sources for the project, Farrag would love to hear about it. He can be reached by e-mail, legaleagle02@yahoo.com.

Parking changes for Elm Street

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Multiple situations converged to make the parking on Elm Street, near Fleming's and Dean & Hamilton, a subject of concern for the Board of Selectmen.

The narrow road makes a tough fit for emergency vehicles that routinely use the route to respond to calls throughout town. Legal parking on both sides of the street made the narrow road even a tougher squeeze. Cars parking with one set of wheels on the sidewalk made baby carriages and other pedestrians move on to the street. For cars parking half on the sidewalk, there was no signage making tickets difficult to enforce. Clients of local businesses got ticketed for staying longer than one hour when much of the business in the area necessitates a longer period.

A majority of the Selectmen has approved three changes to parking regulations in that area to resolve most, if not all, of the issues brought forth.

The marked spaces on the Fleming's side of the street will be re-configured and parking posted for two hours. Closer to South Main Street, three spaces that allow on set of tires on the sidewalk will be added. A white line will be painted on the sidewalk to ensure a minimum four-foot passageway for pedestrians. The line will also give the police department a concrete gauge to go by when issuing tickets.

"Police really don't have the ability to determine if there is adequate room or not," said Selectman Ralph Dormitzer. With a lack of signage and unclear parking guidance for drivers, many of the tickets issued were not sticking. "They need a defined way to determine if a ticket should be issued."

These half-sidewalk spaces will be posted for two hours as well. Selectman Karen Quigley was concerned with adding more spaces and whether they were necessary. She raised concerns that some employees were parking the those spaces all day long and if they were asked to park elsewhere there would be ample parking for shoppers/clients. She asked whether the board would consider consulting the Economic Development Committee and the Planning Board's village consultant.

"Parking downtown is what it is, it is always going to be quirky," said Jim Watson, owner of the Cohasset Hardware building.

The final change would be creating a 15-minute hash-marked space for loading and unloading on the Cohasset Hardware side of the street. No other parking would be permitted.

The Selectmen approved the parking changes in a 4-1 vote. Chairman Ted Carr, Selectmen Paul Carlson, Dormitzer and Fred Koed voted in favor. Quigley was the sole "nay" vote. She said she specifically opposed the addition of parking on the sidewalk. She cited the Border Street parking, which has a painted line on the sidewalk to allow on-street parking, as not being effective.

"We all know people still walk on the street down there," said Quigley.

Selectman Paul Carlson requested the parking changes be reviewed in six months time.

Elm Street parking changes

The following changes to Elm Street parking will be made in the coming month:

- Two-hour parking on the Dean & Hamilton side of Elm Street (currently, it's one hour parking)
- Three additional spaces (one set of tires on sidewalk) on the Dean & Hamilton side of Elm Street closer to S. Main. A line will be drawn on the sidewalk to ensure a minimum four-foot wide passageway. Two-hour parking and no parking over the line.
- Loading and unloading 15-minute parking on the Cohasset Hardware side of Elm Street in a hashed line area. No other parking permitted.

Kids make all natural canine treats

Each week they bake up fresh nearly 400 dog treats in at least two different flavors. They bag a dozen of them in bags decorated with the company's logo and sell them at the Farmer's Market. The treats come in different dog-centric shapes: the classic dog bone, a doghouse and a fire hydrant.

The treats come in different flavors from peanut butter to cinnamon to barbeque, even a "diet" bone for those pups watching their waistline. Each week, the kids cook up a different assortment.

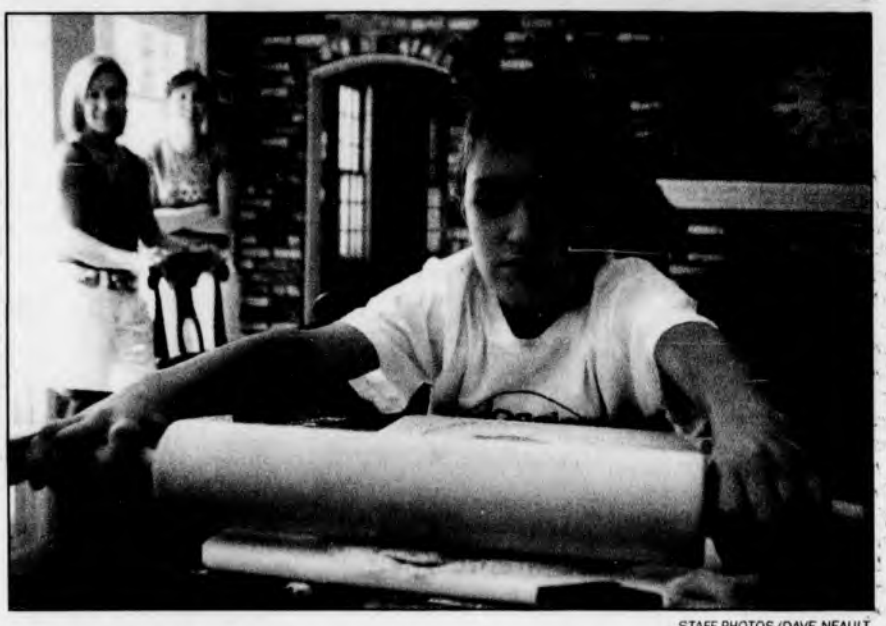
The treats come in different flavors from peanut butter to cinnamon to barbeque, even a "diet" bone for those pups watching their waistline.

The recipes, gleaned from a colorful picture book, have all natural, human grade ingredients. The treats are even edible by people, but they don't recommend serving them for dessert at your next dinner party.

"I tried it, but it was gross," said Grace. But, the dogs all seem to like them, which is a key part of their "marketing strategy." Owen and Grace take their product to the Common and go up to Farmer's Market visitors and ask if they have a dog. When dogs are with their owners, they offer samples to the furry friend. If the dog approves, they ask the owner to come over to their stand to buy some.

The direct consumer marketing is working. Each week at the Farmer's Market they seem to gain in popularity. They now have a logo, a t-shirt with Doggie Delight logo and customized bags. Every week they've sold out of the biscuits.

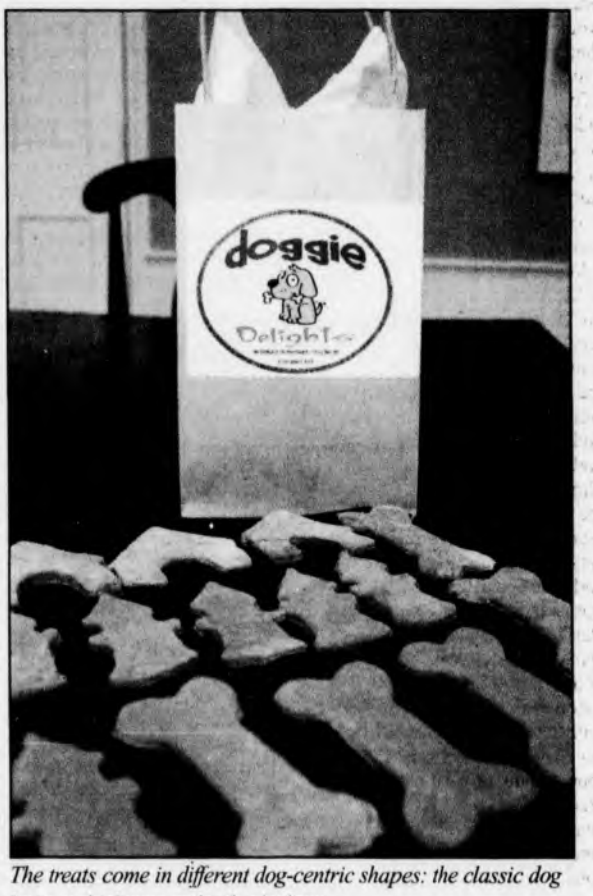
"Some people don't have dogs, but they like our logo so we're going to be selling shirts soon," said Owen, an entrepreneur in the making. He likes the money that comes along with the business and the feeling he gets when donating a portion to the Scituate Animal Shelter.



Grace, on the other hand, is the natural salesperson of the duo, according to the parents. She animatedly describes the many different types of dogs and owners she runs into at the Farmer's Market — there are dogs that don't eat in public, others are on a diet, and many refuse treats due to allergies.

"But most of the dogs are glad to get a treat," said Grace.

Both Grace and Owen describe themselves as animal people. Grace lives with three dogs and two cats, while Owen has one dog and two frogs.



Owen and Grace will be selling the treats at the Farmer's Market roughly every other week. Their table is located near the Holly Hill Farm stand and Sagestone Beads. When the Farmer's Market season ends in October, they plan to sell the treats at Twist in the Village.

A bag of a dozen treats can be purchased for $5 and two bags can be purchased for $8.

STAFF PHOTOS/DAVE NEAULT

Doggie Delights helper Sam Kefallinos, who is Owen's younger brother, rolls out the dough that will soon become yummy dog treats.

The treats come in different dog-centric shapes: the classic dog bone, a doghouse and a fire hydrant.

Miss Stoddard taught at North Primary School

Endowment Wall honors library donors

The Cohasset Library Trust has recently installed an Endowment Donor Wall at the entry to the library. It honors the more than 20 persons who have, over more than 100 years, made significant gifts to the library. These gifts have created the library's endowment. Some gifts have been as bequests in a donor's will. Others have been gifts from friends or family to memorialize or honor individuals.

From time to time, the Library Trust plans to offer short sketches of the persons whose names are on the Donor Wall.

In the first year that the Paul Pratt Memorial Library opened, 1903, it received a bequest of $5,000 from the estate of Miss Susannah L. Stoddard, a long-time, unmarried Cohasset schoolteacher. (In current dollars that gift would be the equivalent of more than $100,000.) The Library Trustees Report of that year stated "This generous gift may be considered a token of Miss Stoddard's affection for and loyalty to the town she served so faithfully and efficiently in her capacity of teacher for a quarter of a century."

Miss Susannah Stoddard taught in the North Primary School from 1875 through the end of the century. At that time, Cohasset had four primary schools that covered the first four years of school. They were named North, Center, South and Beechwood Primary Schools and there were similarly named Grammar Schools that covered the next three years of school. The North Primary School was on the west corner of Jerusalem Road and North Main Street, and Miss Susannah lived with her parents, Bela and Lucretia Bates Stoddard, across the street on the east corner of this intersection. Her father was a stonemason and both he and his wife lived to be 79 years old. Both her mother and father died within four months of each other when Susie, as she was called, was 44 years old. Unfortunately, Susie died three years later in 1902 of complications related to diabetes.

COURTESY PHOTO

Miss Susannah L. Stoddard

During Miss Susie Stoddard's working life, the establishment and growth of a public library in Cohasset was one of the central issues of the time. The Superintendent of Schools, Joseph Osgood, had been lobbying for several years in the 1870s for a public library that was needed to "complete the educational system of the town." In his 1879 report, he proudly reports the details of the $300 raised privately to match the $300 voted at Town Meeting for a Library to be placed in rooms in Town Hall. The schoolteachers raised $279 of this.

Shortly before Miss Stoddard's death, there was great enthusiasm and excitement about the new library to be built on South Main Street as the result of Harriot Pratt's bequest in 1898. With her generous gift, Miss Susannah Stoddard helped to build a firm foundation for Cohasset's treasured library.

The Cohasset Library Trust was established to increase and prudently manage the Library's Endowment. Tax support of the Library has been declining as a percentage of Cohasset's budget for at least a decade. New gifts to the Cohasset Library Trust will join old gifts to assure the continued quality of this town treasure. A gift of $5,000 to the Library Trust earns listing on the new Endowment Wall in the Library Entry.

COHASSET CONSIGNMENT SHOP HAS STOOD THE TEST OF TIME

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Consignment Shop, located in the CVS Plaza on Route 3A, has been in operation since the 1950s.

"The consignment shop is really our biggest baby," said Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League. "There is a lot of energy here."

With the down economy, Carpenter said she is glad the consignment shop is able to provide quality items at a reasonable cost to patrons. At the same time, she said the consignment shop provides an outlet for those downsizing, redecorating or dismantling a family household.

"It's a fun and interesting business, we get to meet a lot of different people with a lot of different stories" said Carpenter. Some consigners don't want to give up certain items, like their mother's china, even if they don't have room for it.

"We assure them we can find a good home for it and they feel better about it," said Carpenter. The large open space allows them to carry a big selection of pretty much everything from home décor to seasonal items to furniture to women's, men's & children's clothing, jewelry & accessories.

Marita Carpenter is the new president of the Social Service League of Cohasset. The SSL does myriad activities to serve the underserved on the South Shore.

SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE AT A GLANCE

- Founding objectives: To foster "cooperation for the temporal welfare of the townspeople in relieving poverty, promoting thrift and helping those who are trying to help themselves.
- Mission: To identify the most important and least served social services problems and to create, develop, and support ongoing programs, which can have significant positive impact on those problems.
- Towns served: Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Norwell and Hull.
- Recent grants: $5000 to Elder Affairs to help them find a new home and $5000 to the 3A Farm Fund to support their efforts to build a new Scituate Animal Shelter.

WHAT'S NEW

As the new president of the SSL, Marita Carpenter is hoping to cultivate a more hands-on, individual basis outreach to those in need. She will be contacting local school district administrators to let them know if there is a student who can't afford a calculator or other more expensive school supply to let them know.

"In the past occasionally guidance counselors have called us, but we'd like to do it on a bigger scale and still do it quietly," said Carpenter, who has co-managed the consignment shop for the last, two years.

In addition, the Cohasset Senior Center is looking for a new home and the SSL is hoping to aid in both the search and the funding.

Carpenter is backed by a very active 12-member board.

The SSL is constantly evolving and its role has changed over the years. Throughout its history the league has employed the town of Cohasset's nurse, a social worker and has had a board dedicated to providing programs and funding in conjunction with the schools, elder services and various community groups doing work consistent with our mission.

Today, they collaborate with the Wellspring Multi-Services Center in Hull to help fund the much needed and very successful Domestic Violence Program. This evolved even further in 2003 when we decided to fund a position at Wellspring to provided direct services rather than employ our own Social worker.

For the elderly, they administer and deliver Meals on Wheels in Cohasset, provide holiday meals and make baskets of gifts for those homebound at Christmas.

For families, they have a scholarship for students going into the field of health sciences and frequently run programs on pertinent issues facing parents and students at local schools.

Natural food store moves to Ripley Road and continue to carry all of his same product lines while expanding in some areas.

Look forward to a greater selection of vitamins and supplements as well as more gluten-free products. Health and beauty products like all natural shampoos, soaps and even household cleaner will be available.

His tried and true product lines, the ones that have helped gain him a following, will join him in the new store.

He carries Dean's Beans, an organic, fair-trade coffee and local eggs from a farm in Rockland with about 100 hens. Both products he said enjoy a loyal following. His popular organic dark chocolate (some of which is fair trade as well) will be on the shelves as well.

"Dark chocolate is actually a really a good food full of antioxidants and endorphins," checking himself a little bit, he adds with a laugh, "taken in moderation it is a very good food."

Over the past few years, Bigley says many of the products he currently carries have been suggested or requested by customers along the way.

"As always, we'll be adding new products all the time," he says. "I got there for product I can't get anywhere else," says Cohasset resident and longtime customer John Chapman, who is an avid fan of Dean's Beans, the fresh local eggs and the (when in season) fresh garlic. "It's a nice concentrated selection in a friendly atmosphere."

Chapman says the new space, which has several smaller rooms, will give the shop an old-time general store feel to complement Bigley's friendly personality.

Bigley came to the business of natural foods with a good understanding of the business and products. He owned an organic farm in Cohasset for many years and says he has always tried to eat healthfully. The last four years in the business have taught him a "tremendous amount."

For Bigley, his job is a combination of three of his loves — good food, good health and good conversation.

"I love to talk to the customers," says Bigley. The job also eliminates a long commute as he walks from his home on James Lane each morning.

"With the move, my commute has doubled from two to four minutes, but no one seems to sympathize with me," says Bigley with a smile. It's clear the store is as much a part of him as he is to the store. His mid-length gray beard is somewhat of a trademark for him and his store — his face now immortalized in his prominent Ripley Road sign. Although his once multi-colored beard with streaks of red, blond, and brown, a feature he ventures to call "handsome," has faded mostly to gray he has no intention of becoming clean shaven.

"My philosophy is to offer a selection of good quality products at a reasonable price with excellent customer service."
— David Bigley, All the Best

"I absolutely hate shaving," says Bigley, joking he has had the beard for as long as he can remember. "It's au natural." Over the years, it's been many lengths from close cropped to a lengthy "ZZ Top" style.

Bigley says it's that beard (and the man behind it) that sets him a part from the chain stores. He competes with one of the biggest names in natural foods, Whole Foods, which opened about the same time he did at the Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham. Like many other village merchants, Bigley is hoping both the emergence of more environmentally conscious society and the rising cost of gasoline will propel residents to shop locally.

"I'll never have the selection Whole Foods has. They have everything you need — except me," he says. If he doesn't have something you are looking for, he can place a special order almost immediately and if any issues arise, he says he can resolve them very quickly.

"There is a growing segment of the population who are rediscovering the pleasure of shopping locally," says Bigley. The pleasures, he says, include being called by name when you walk in the door (and usually what you came to buy) and a responsive proprietor.

"My philosophy is to offer a selection of good quality products at a reasonable price with excellent customer service," says Bigley.

Bigley, who is now immortalized in his prominent Ripley Road sign, asks customers to be patient as he puts together his new space. The windows, currently covered in brown paper, will eventually be decorated, his shelves filled with natural foods and his space all together welcoming. He plans to have his daughter Deirdre (who painted his sign) do a mural inside the store as well.

Bigley also is actively involved in the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and its various events throughout the year and other community initiatives, like the Appalachia Service Program. In early July, he traveled with local teenagers on the annual service trip.

He is looking forward to many more years in Cohasset and behind the counter at All the Best in his new location.

"We thought we had 'all the best,' but we've found more," says Bigley.

All the Best Natural Foods will be open Monday through Saturday from 10a.m. to 6p.m. For more information, call 781-383-3005.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Your opinion counts

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, opinions count. In any given year, the Mariner receives upwards of 225 letters and commentaries from our readers.

On each of those "opinion pieces" is a name and street address.

We are proud to provide the means for our readers to share their views and participate in the debate whether that is traffic, tax relief, affordable housing or other quality-of-life issues.

We also have a Readers Advisory Network of email addresses through which we can ask for opinions, such as the recent question for our July 4th issue: "What makes a Patriot in today's society?" Through our network, we also can seek reaction to stories or news events, or help with stories. After last year's commuter boat collision, we were able to find some commuters, who were either on the boat or on the next boat, to help us with the story. If you want to join our Readers Advisory Network, please email editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com. We promise not to share your email address with anyone and to remove your name from the network if you request we do so.

Today with our online presence on the Web, we have added another way for our readers to express their opinion.

We are able to conduct polls on various topics of interest.

Over the past week, we asked readers what they think about "bridge jumping" off the Border Street bridge.

As of Thursday morning, 101 readers had participated in our poll.

Here are recent results with more still coming in (votes are in parentheses):

What should police do to curb bridge jumping?

- Issue tickets to repeat offenders (51 votes or 50.5 percent)
- Station a police officer at the bridge at all times (7 votes or 6.93 percent)
- Hold a forum on the issue with kids and their parents (26 votes or 25.74 percent)
- Ban kayakers and boats from traveling under the bridge (5 votes or 4.95 percent)
- Ask the town to install a deterrent such as a higher fence on the bridge (12 votes or 11.88 percent)

The poll is not meant to be scientific. We did discover that a reader could only vote once from an IP (Internet protocol) address – so it would be difficult to "stuff the ballot box!"

Also as pointed out by some readers, we should have included a "none of the above option" or a response option to the effect, that bridge jumping is really a "non-issue." This was our first poll and we hope to improve as we go along!

We think the polls are a fun and interactive way to engage our readers. We hope you agree.

We are open to suggestions for more polls! Email mford@cnc.com with your ideas.

See the box below for this week's poll on why people don't pick up after their dogs.

Sandy Beach and dog poop

TO THE EDITOR

Last week's front-page article on the above subject is a tempest in a teapot. I regularly take my two cocker spaniels to Sandy Beach during the off-season and pick-up after them, other dog droppings, as well as flotsam and jetsam. Once, the weather improves and families begin to enjoy the beach, I take my dogs elsewhere.

We are blessed with many nearby walking trails, Bare Cove - best entrance opposite SS Country Club/Hingham Train Station as well as Stodder's Neck Park, Off Route 3A on the right heading north with Lowe's on the left-beyond the Park are my personal favorites. The rule should be simple: Dogs can use Sandy Beach from Nov 1 through April 30. The beach would be totally off-limits to dogs from May 1 through Oct. 30, 24 hours/seven days a week/including inclement weather days. Sadly, even if "doggy bags" are available, 10 to 20 percent of dog owners will never pick-up after their pets.

Parking plan on Elm St. should be curbed!

TO THE EDITOR:

If you didn't see the last selectmen's meeting, the board made a decision 4 in favor (Carr, Koed, Carlson, and Dormitzer) to 1 (Quigley) to allow parking on the north side of Elm street. Now I don't know about you but putting the convenience of the merchants in front of public safety just doesn't sit well with me. It would be one thing if it was to make it easier for patrons to shop in town, but it's not.

The fire equipment has a hard enough time getting down the street without cars parked half on the side walk and half on the street. What's going to happen when the snow is piled up in the middle of the winter? As it is now, two people can't even walk down the street side by side, without one having to stop and walk around the vehicles.

The solution is to paint a white line down the sidewalk and the car can not park over it. It sounds like, to me, the four on the board are setting the town up for a potential laws suit in the sue happy world we live in.

At the end of the night the idea was floated that if the solution they came up with doesn't work — that is if there are enough complaints come into the selectman in writing – Elm Street, from Brook to Main will become a one way. Seems a long way to go to for three parking spaces.

If this bothers you as much as me, please send your complaint to 41 Highland Ave. in care of the Board of Selectmen, (not selectwomen!)

HEALTH NOTES

Mutt Mitts are located around town

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In January of 2000, responding to numerous complaints about dog droppings on walking paths and beside frequently traveled public roads, the Board of Health enacted a dog nuisance abatement regulation applicable to "any person who owns, possess, cares for or controls a dog". The person must "take every precaution to not permit his or her dog to defecate on any sidewalk, street, parking lot or any other public place." Further, the regulation "pertains to private property not owned by the above person."

If the dog owner hasn't read the regulation and for some reason violates it, the owner is further ordered to "remove any fecal matter deposited on a public place or on private property not owned by that person" and see to it that it is "properly disposed of."

The regulation goes on to levy fines up to $50 for multiple offenses. Further, it does not apply to any dog accompanying a disabled person, who because of disability is unable to comply with its requirements.

It's very comforting for those who walk in Town to see folks with dogs holding a Mutt Mitt and plastic bag in their hand; sort of a badge of honor.

Recognizing that individuals unaware of this regulation find themselves unprepared to carry out these provisions, the Board of Health has placed at convenient locations in high dog-traffic areas a means of dispensing "Mutt Mitts" for coping with and disposing of ones dog's transgressions. These Mutt Mitt stations are always placed near trash barrels.

The Town has issued licenses to upwards of 600 dogs. However, according to Animal Control, there are many more. It's very comforting for those who walk in Town to see folks with dogs holding a Mutt Mitt and plastic bag in their hand; sort of a badge of honor. The Board of Health maintains Mutt Mitts in at least five places in Town with the Trustees of Reservations maintaining them at Wheelwright Park and Turkey Hill. Other places where they can be found are Town Hall, Parker Avenue, Government Island, and at the Aaron River Reservoir. The Mutt Mitt station at Sandy Beach alone has to be refilled about every 6 days. The Board of Health pays for Mutt Mitts and Paul Murphy, the Animal Control Officer, provides regular replacement.

The Town uses an astonishing number of Mutt Mitts necessitating the replacement of more than 50 in the space of a week at high traffic stations such as Sandy Beach and the Common.

I wonder if there is anyone who hasn't had to clean a shoe after stepping in a dog dropping. We do what we can, but it seems to be one of life's perennial annoyances.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Board of Health.

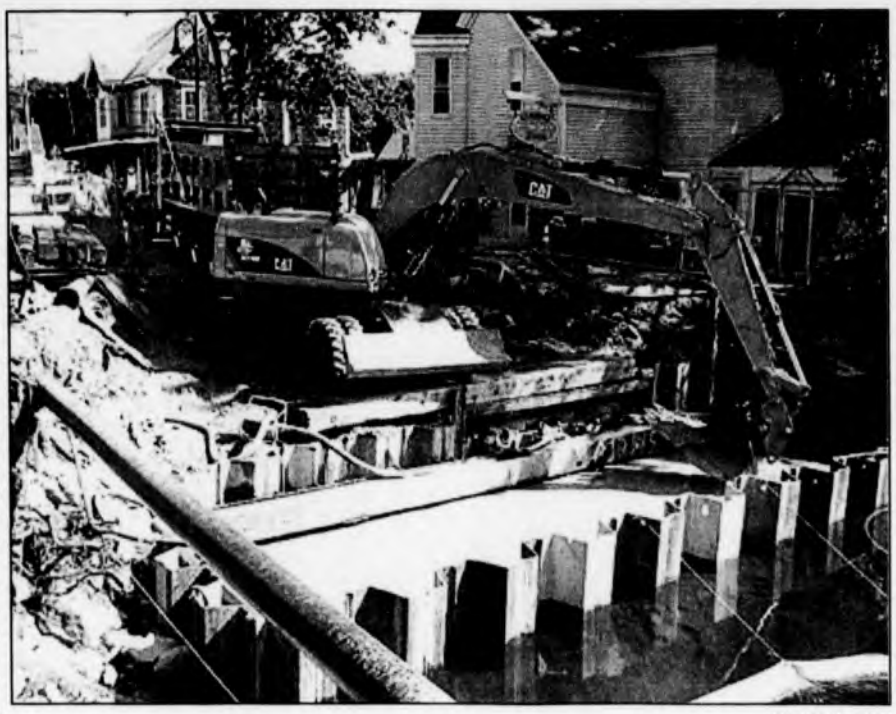
Bridge completion by school start

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Bound Brook Bridge — This past week we ventured down to the end of South Main Street to Country Way in Scituate. As you may recall, this road is closed just before North Scituate so that the MBTA can construct a bridge over Bound Brook. This area is a veritable hubbub of activity with Cashman working extended hours to meet their projected schedule of completion before the start of school. The accompanying photo shows the excavator digging material so that a foundation can be constructed for the new bridge. Although it is hard to see from the photo, the excavator is digging down through about five feet of water. Each bucket of muck that is raised brings with it a like amount of water. Before it can be dumped in the truck, located behind the excavator, the operator must wait for the water to drain out. Overall, the progress appeared to be a bit slow and difficult.



Greenbush Route 3A at Lower King Street — Work continues widening Route 3A to add an additional lane. Construction has slowed a bit this past week. We understand that there have been discussions between the Project and Mass Highway Department over some small construction changes. When this is resolved, we expect more vigorous construction to resume.

Greenbush tidership — As is our custom, we periodically visit the Cohasset Greenbush station and count the number of cars as a rough measure of ridership. We would guess that the recent drop in cars is due principally to this being the peak of the vacation season. We'll check it again after school resumes.

Little Harbor Project — We have the feeling that next week another very long-suffering residential area will be a lot happier. We are making plans to pave Nichols Road. After living through water work, sewer work, drainage and then gas line work, a paved surface should be very welcomed. As we have mentioned before, this paving will only be a base coat of asphalt. The topcoat will be placed, next year after the road has had a chance to settle. The base coat will be very similar to the work done on Deep Run two weeks ago. Hopefully, Nichols Road will be paved next week. The side roads off of Nichols will be paved later once testing of the new services is completed.

We sometimes get questions regarding why the Greenbush Guys, as we are known around Town Hall, are working on this project. After all, this work is not closely aligned to the railroad. First, we are assistants to the Town Manager and from time to time he has asked us to work on a variety of other technical issues around Town. A number of times we have worked hand in hand with the DPW to assist them with their construction needs. That happens to be the case with the Little Harbor Project.

As anyone can easily figure out, after the construction is completed, the roads need to be put back together and paved. It turns out that Cohasset belongs to a group called the South Shore Regional Services Consortium (SSRSC). This group assembles the paving and other routine construction requirements from all of their member towns. Using these large quantities the consortium goes out to bid for the best price for these construction items. The end result is through the SSRSC the Town has access substantially better prices than each town could possibly get on its own. In fact, the prices for paving are usually better than a contractor can get for a single project. As a result, the Town DPW is purchasing the paving and the Greenbush Guys are working hand in glove with the DPW and the Little Harbor Project to make it all work.

When Nantasket was swinging

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

In my continuing campaign to sample the luncheon offerings of every restaurant on the South Shore before I depart for the big fast food outlet in the sky, I found myself last week at Nantasket Beach, once an old haunt of mine, though not necessarily for the food.

The parking lot was full but the strollers on the Boulevard were few.

"Not many people around," I observed as we pulled into an open parking place in front of Schooner's, the restaurant we were sampling that day.

"Probably too early," said my friend. "They'll be around tonight."

That's not the way I remember it.

Paragon Park employed various acts like sway poles, tank divers and trapeze artists and one of the more popular was the Flying Lamarrs.

When I was young and ice covered most of the earth, I worked on the Beach in Paragon Park during the summers of '50 and '51. I was in college at the time and my uncle was picking up the tab but his generosity extended only so far and some of us had to hustle in the summer months to make ends meet.

It seemed like there was always something doing at the park in those days. Nantasket, particularly Paragon Park, was a swinging place.

We had three concessions, Skee Ball, Pokerino and a Greyhound Race. The owners were Larry Stone and Abe Feldman. The bosses were Red Dennehy and Harold Feldman. Red kept watch on Harold for Larry and Harold kept watch on Red for Abe.

My favorite was the Greyhound Race. Players put a dime in a tip tray and once four contestants were entered and the tray tipped, the players worked a lever to bounce a ball through a square hoop and move their greyhounds up a board while one of us called the race over a microphone.

I still remember the opening spiel — "Tally ho and there they go! Off again at Greyhound! Who's gonna be the lucky winner this time?"

Actually, there were times when luck didn't have any role in it. The greyhounds operated on a rheostat and if one player was so successful that he was driving the marks away, the man on the mike would signal his assistant who would go behind the board and turn down the rheostat on that particular dog.

I met Joey Bishop, the comedian, one of those summers, although I don't know if you could call it a meeting.

Paragon Park employed various acts like sway poles, tank divers and trapeze artists and one of the more popular was the Flying Lamarrs. I got to know the catcher fairly well, the catcher being the guy who caught whichever Lamarr happened to be flying at the time.

The Mayflower, one of the old Nantasket steamboats, had been beached on the bayside, renamed the Showboat, and opened as a nightclub. Joey Bishop was playing the Showboat and the catcher happened to know him from somewhere so we had to go see him.

He greeted the catcher warmly, then looked at me quizzically.

"He with the act?" he asked.

"Park help," said the catcher.

Joey Bishop lost interest in me.

After lunch we drove down the Boulevard toward Kenberma and I looked for the places I used to know so well. The American House, gone. Jimmy Karalekas' hot dog stand and souvenir shop, gone. And Paragon Park, gone, replaced by high rise condos.

All that remains is Joseph's, the place where we used to get the fried clams. Fascination and Playland, our competitors in those days nearly 60 years ago.

And the Merry-go-round, which used to be inside the park, now preserved as a relic of the days when crowds brought life to Nantasket Beach, even at lunch time.

Time to change our motoring ways

TOWARD A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

The business of coming and going has recently gotten a lot more complicated. How we choose to get around, we now know, has a particularly toxic effect on our environment. Lately, the consequence has been to our wallets. Gas prices have soared, and even more alarming is that the increasing cost of fuel is not simply a short-term problem. Many people forget that oil is a finite resource. Our insatiable hunger for it finally has reached the point where demand is outstripping supply. As a result, the ease and convenience of supporting our sprawling lifestyle is being challenged.

Take a look at any major highway during rush hour though, and it is evident there is little thought toward change — millions of cars, mostly with single occupants who are wasting hours of their life in traffic to get to jobs that are needed to support our big American ways. It seems as if we don't care.

But many of us do care. And we are ready to make changes. How to go about change is where things get sticky. However, the bottom line is that choosing how to get around, when to get around and even if we should be getting around at all, is one facet that each of us can control right now.

There has been a lot of information in the media on ways we can save money, increase fuel economy and decrease our carbon emissions. These suggestions are invaluable, but it's time to raise the volume and get more creative.

Consider, for example, the following useful common tips – with a twist:

1) Common tip: Commute to work by public transportation. Twist: Think about ways to not have to commute at all. Propose telecommuting at least a day or two a week. Do a cost analysis of starting a home or local office. Consider moving closer to work even if this means a big life change. Perhaps a lifestyle that made sense a year ago, does not make sense looking forward.

2) Common tip: Ride a bike and/or walk more. Twist: Nearly half of all trips in the U.S. are three miles or less, and a quarter of these trips are less than a mile – distances easily doable by bike. In decent weather, traveling al fresco is delightful and invigorating. But the joy ends when the route feels dangerous or overly challenging. Carving bike paths along the major thoroughfares through towns and cities, and proposing bylaws to support safety and efficiency will increase ridership.

3) Common tip: Trade-in a gas-guzzler for an economy car. Twist: Owning a car is an "entitlement" that most of us just presume. When is the last time we questioned if we even need to own a car? Car sharing networks like Zip Car are appearing even in suburban communities, challenging us to think about the high costs of car ownership versus other ways of getting around. Even downsizing the number of cars per family is an option that can have a significant financial, social and environmental impact.

4) Common tip: Chose trains instead of airplanes for shorter travel. Twist: Our public transportation system in the U.S. is abysmal. Train travel is not even an option for a huge swath of the country. Our train system needs a complete overhaul. Other public transit methods need to be explored — light rail, streetcars, Jetson-style people movers, even the age-old rickshaw — whatever it takes. Our leaders need to hear this again and again until something is done.

If the energy experts are correct, even a combination of these alternatives will still not support the infrastructure cheap oil has created. Conservation is still the clear winner.

5) Common tip: Buy a hybrid. Twist: All available alternative fuel technologies — including hybrid electric, diesel/biodiesel, ethanol, and natural gas — still have many drawbacks that need to be addressed; e.g., hybrid battery replacement and disposal, and food supply/pricing issues related to ethanol production. If the energy experts are correct, even a combination of these alternatives will still not support the infrastructure cheap oil has created. Conservation is still the clear winner.

6) Common tip: Eco-travel. Twist: Stay home. While this seems simple it takes a concerted effort to reverse our habitual on-the-go mentality. Try it anyway. Hang out with neighbors. Read. Make love. Tinker in the garage. Play cards with the kids. Plant a garden.

For most of us, determining how to run our lives less dependent on our cars is not a simple task. Not having a clearly superior alternative to driving, however, could be seen as a good thing. Instead of continuing on as happy motoring Americans, we will be forced to make some deeper behavioral changes. Perhaps instead of the focus being on the comings and goings of daily life, we might actually start living more meaningfully in the time between.

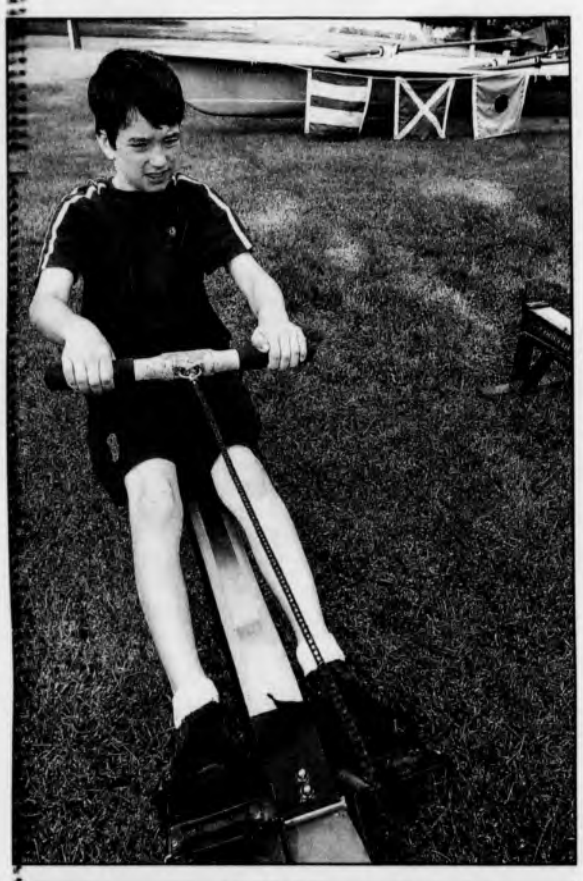
Brush chipping day changes

Residential brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area on the following Saturdays from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. July 26, Aug. 30 and Sept. 27. No trees over 5 feet in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.



The runners take off at the start of the Jack Hubbard Memorial Fun Run. All proceeds and donations will benefit the Cohasset Maritime Institute's (CMI) mission to provide a Cohasset community rowing program with access to the water for all.

As the plans begin to gel, the organizers are looking for community involvement. There will be myriad activities for kids (and adults) and some require registration.

Decorated bike parade

Cohasset kids are invited to join in the decorated bike parade down South Main St. in the village. Bikes must be decorated and there will be prizes for the most creatively decorated bikes. Each bike will be given a registration number for judging. To register, e-mail Christine Cunning at c.cunning@comcast.net. Unlike a traditional triathlon, there will be no swimming leg. Please include the full name of participant, his/her age and contact information (address, phone and e-mail address).

Classic Car Concours

The first annual Cohasset Classic Concours is a featured parade event scheduled to start on S. Main Street at 2p.m. Cars will drive along S. Main to and around the common and return and park in the village for all to get an up close look.

Event organizers encourage the local owners of antique and classic touring, racing or sports cars to register. Interested participants should e-mail Peter Brown at pbrown@campanelli.com for a registration form. Cost of entry is $25, which covers lunch and event costs.

Sponsors

Cohasset Day needs local sponsors. Businesses can sign on for a "Minot Light 1.4.3" contribution ($1,000), a "Cohasset Harbor" contribution ($500). Cohasset restaurants interested in serving their fare at Cohasset Day must sign up. Sponsors and restaurants must commit by July 31 in order to be placed on promotional materials. Checks for Sponsorship contributions are made to the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, PO Box 336, Cohasset, MA 02025. Check Memo: "Cohasset Day Sponsorship".

Lack of ticketing

Some residents have told Selectmen Karen Quigley there is a lack of ticketing in the areas of Government Island and Parker Ave./Mariner's Landing. She said non-stickered cars are taking up spaces and leaving no room for residents' cars with stickers. On Sunday night around 7p.m. she counted about half of the cars were non-resident cars. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would speak to Police Chief James Hussey about ticketing more often.

New ZBA member

The Board of Selectmen has named local attorney Susan Kent an associate member of the Zoning Board of Appeals. Zoning Board member Barbara Powers resigned from the board.

Kent said she would bring 23 years experience as a practicing attorney and 22 years as an interested town resident.

"I think (the ZBA) would be a good fit for me," said Kent. Kent has been fairly active in town government, serving two terms on the Advisory Committee and a committee created to examine the Town Manager Act.

"I think you would be a great addition to the board," said Selectman Karen Quigley. The board approved the appointment unanimously.

End of year transfers

The Town of Cohasset is in the process of closing out the books for fiscal 2008. Finance Director Michael Buckley and Town Manager Bill Griffin recommended the Board of Selectmen approve several end of the year transfers to take care of predicted end of year shortfalls.

Under Massachusetts law, the approval by the Advisory Committee is required for both reserve fund and budget transfers, while the approval of the Board of Selectmen is only required for the budget transfers.

The Selectmen approved the transfer of $85,753 from the health insurance budget surplus to several other budget accounts. The biggest piece went to the deficit in the legal account ($23,460).

The total amount of transfers ($185,720, including the reserved fund and health insurance transfer) represents approximately one-half of a percent of the fiscal 2008 operating budget of $35,385,541.

The following building permits were issued recently at Town Hall:

The upside and downside of wind power

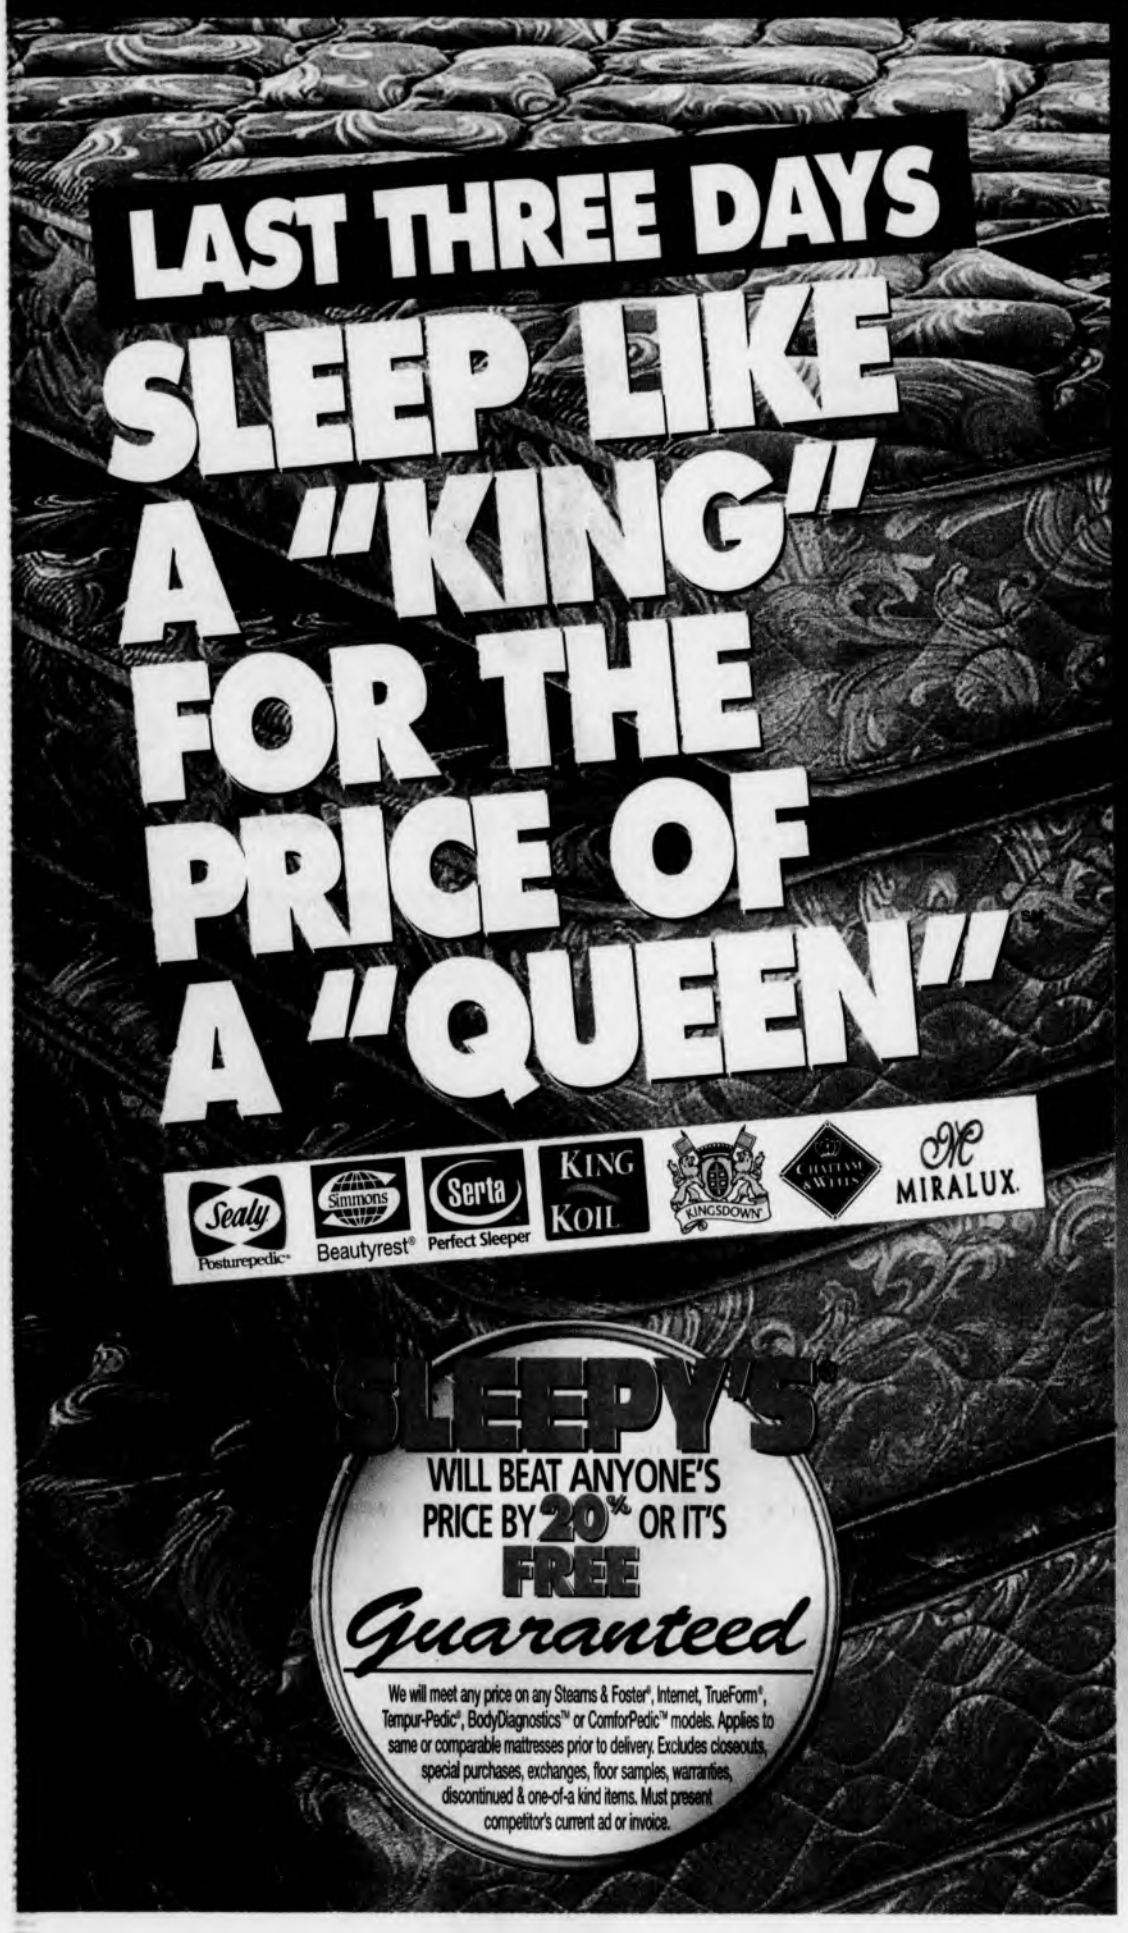
TO THE EDITOR:

The presentation on wind power last Wednesday evening, July 16, was enjoyed by a receptive and enthusiastic audience, as the subject well deserves. Certainly we need to reduce the use of fossil fuels by improved efficiency of energy use – conservation – and by exploiting every alternative source of energy.

About 50 percent of our electricity is generated by coal, much to the detriment of the environment. "Clean coal" means only that it is less dirty than as formerly used. Although little oil is used these days for electricity generation, transportation is about 96 percent dependent on it, and space heating over 20 percent. Obviously, our economic and political bondage to the oil producing nations – from which we import about 70 percent of our oil – is like the sword of Damocles, and it is imperative to reduce the risks of that bondage.

So the upside of wind and of other renewables is that they can and will considerably reduce our bondage to oil and reduce the environmental damage caused. by burning coal, petroleum products and natural gas. Unfortunately, the feasible total from renewables will be far from sufficiently reducing our use of fossil fuels, even with the maximum probable reductions of energy use achieved by conservation.

The downside is that the potential – real or imagined – contribution of wind and other renewables provides an excuse for our politicians to duck the hard decisions and strong leadership necessary to expand our nuclear-electric generating capacity, the only source capable of the massive energy infusions needed to reduce significantly the environmental effects of fossil fuels and our oil-import bondage. It is only a matter of time before vehicles are propelled by electricity, at first partially but soon almost totally, thus vastly increasing our electric generation requirements.



The politicians, and the entrenched bureaucracies, and too many utility executives, would be less prone to duck the nuclear issue if the public were not inclined to use the same excuse – irrational exuberance about the potential of renewables – reinforced by misinformation about nuclear waste and safety.

By all means, get all we can from renewables, because they are, next to energy efficiency, the best source of all. But that is no excuse to ignore the quantitative realities, and to avoid doing what must be done. The Asiatic countries are demonstrating the pragmatism we need to emulate, and will come to regret if we don't.

Walpole bats too much in series clincher

Season ends for Post 118 after making playoffs for first time since 2004

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

The Cohasset/Scituate Post 118 Legion baseball team knew what they were getting into when they qualified for the final playoff spot in the District 6 East playoffs. Walpole came into the best two-out-of-three playoff series 21-0, Monday, and left 23-0, after a 4-2 win at home Monday and a 9-1 win at Scituate, Tuesday.

"Basically, [I told them] I was proud of them," Post 118 coach Greg Taylor said after the game. "They fought real hard to make the playoffs. When we started off at the beginning of the season that was our goal, to make the playoffs and see what we could do. I just told them to hold their heads up high."

After Brian Hill pitched well enough to get a win in the series opener, and Post 118 missed on some opportunities to take the game, Walpole came into Scituate and showed off with its bats. Billy Hickey, Ricky Graham and John Phelan each hit home runs in the top of the first off Post 118's Brendan Doonan.

The message was sent early. Doonan made it to the top of the fifth inning, and Sam DeGiacomo relieved him, allowing one inherited runner to score, making it 5-1. Doonan reached a pitch count near 100, so Taylor pulled him from the game.

The coach was impressed with how his 15-year old hurler from Cohasset High School settled down after the unsettling start.

"[Doonan's] 15 but he's got the maturity of an 18, 20-year old," Taylor said. "He's got all the talent in the world and as he grows in baseball, he will learn how to use it to his advantage."

Walpole struck with the big bats again in the sixth, putting the game out of reach. Phelan hit his second home run of the game, a three run shot, and Pat Nicholson hit his first, giving Walpole a 9-1 lead.

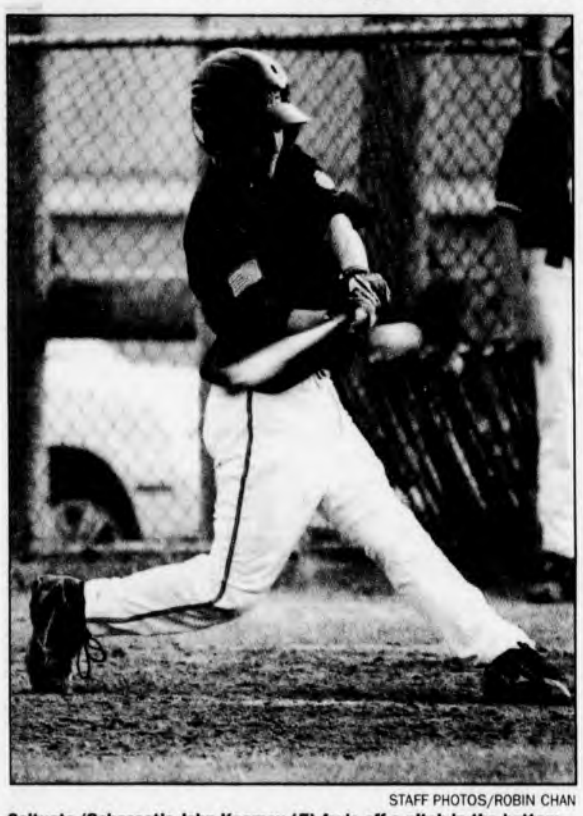
Taylor quickly pointed out that Walpole is a good team. And for his guys, he couldn't stress enough how proud he is of their season.

"I'm real proud of them," he said. "I stressed that [afterwards]. All year no one ever quit. It's tough, summer baseball. People have jobs, vacations, this, that and the other thing. A lot of kids, they could have folded early and said, 'you know, see you later,' go to the beach or whatever. But they stuck around and played hard so I'm just proud."

Post 118 Game Notes

Cohasset/Scituate will lose a few players off next year's team, including Tim McGrath, Kyle Pinkus, Marcus Joyce and Brian Hill. For a few of those Cohasset High kids, Tuesday marked the last time they will play organized ball together.

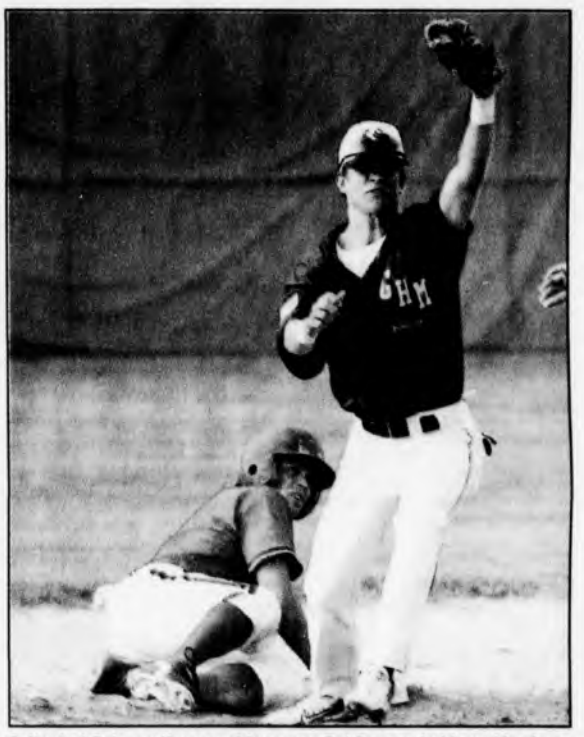
After Little League gave way to high school ball and a senior season that included the first South Shore League title in over four decades, it was fitting that the Post 118 Legion team made the playoffs after a bit of a drought.



"We've been playing together since we were eight years old, it's enjoyable," said Cohasset's Brian Hill. "It's been a good ten years and carrying over from the high school season when we had the same thing. We made the playoffs for the first time. We had a good group of guys and when we were all together we had a special team."

Tommy Chase, the Post 118 shortstop, will be running down balls in the hole at Notre Dame in South Bend, Indiana next season for the Fighting Irish. He capped off a great spring and summer that included a Division 1 state championship at BC High and a Legion playoff appearance.

"[This season was] surprisingly good," he said. "We exceeded expectations and we made the playoffs for the first time in a long time."



Scituate/Cohasset shortstop Tommy Chase (18) snares a hard grounder to his right before getting the 6-3 putout in the top of the fourth inning of their game against Walpole in the Legion playoffs. Chase, a Cohasset resident and Boston College High School alumni, will be heading to play baseball at Notre Dame in the fall.

Salerno helps Southeast win gold

Cohasset High shortstop brings top game to Bay State's

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Carly Salerno, you are not in the South Shore League anymore.

Playing softball for the Southeast squad in the Bay State Games, the Cohasset High School all-star shortstop helped guide her team of fellow all-stars to a gold medal.

"It was awesome," Salerno said. "I went in not knowing anybody so it was a little nerve-wracking at first but the team gelled really well. It's a whole different level of intensity. I've never played at that high a level of competition before."

Southeast defeated Coastal 8-2 in the final. Coastal is made up of players from a hotbed of local softball, the area around New Bedford and Taunton, so the win was all that much bigger for Salerno's Southeast squad. Southeast is comprised of kids from all over the map. Cohasset, Bridgewater and Needham, to name a few.

The gold medal was head coach Bruce Weckworth's first in 12 seasons as a Bay State Games coach. The 14-year Curry College coach enjoyed working with one of Cohasset's best and brightest.

"She is one of the nicest student-athletes I have coached in the last 20 years," Weckworth said. "After every practice and every game she would say, 'thanks coach.' She was very grateful to be out there."

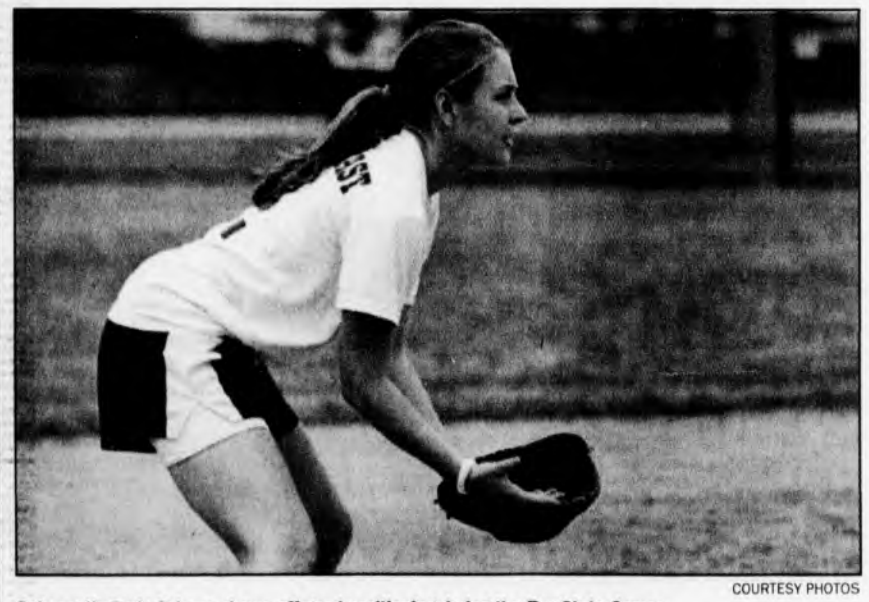
Salerno went 3-for-3 with three RBI and an off the fence double in the title game. She also went 2-for-3 with three RBI in the qualifying game.

"I learned so many new plays and different ways to approach [game] situations," Salerno said.

Salerno, who will be a senior next year, was named as a captain with the other upperclassmen on the team. She carried over her vocal spirit from the Skippers teams she led during the winter and spring sports seasons.

"I'm used to getting people pumped up," Salerno said.

She also made some good friends along the way.



"I'm definitely going to keep in touch with a bunch of them [teammates]," she said. "I made a lot of friendships. It was definitely a positive experience."

Cohasset Cobras live the dream

Team heads to Cooperstown, NY, for baseball tourney

"Live the Dream," that's the motto for the Cooperstown Dreamspark National Youth Baseball Tournament and 11 lucky Cohasset boys were able to do just that. For the 7th consecutive year, Cohasset sent up a group of young boys to play America's pastime in the hometown of the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York.

California, Hawaii, Ohio, North Carolina, Michigan, Indiana, Texas, Tennessee, Florida, New Hampshire and several other states were represented last week at the Dreamspark. Many teams were club teams, having played together all spring. One opponent the Cobras faced had already played 80 games together this year. The Cobras played their first game together at the tournament, although all participated in Cohasset Little League on different teams. Practice began several weeks ago for the Cobras, as coach Mike Maher began their training for the new level of baseball they would be playing in Cooperstown.

Longer base paths and walls 200-feet away were the physical obstacles. Stealing bases off the pitch (like the pros) was the biggest strategic challenge they faced. Many players tried their hand at new positions as well.

Although their record for the eight games they played was not stellar, the boys played terrific baseball and enjoyed the national spotlight for the week.

This year's players, Charlie Blackington, Timmy Cavanaro, Harrison Durant, Ryan Gillis, Timmy Gillis, Steven Iantosca, Rocco Laugelle, Steven Maher, Ryan McKeon, Mats Nelson and Brandon Winn played well and when the playoffs started won their first game 6-2 against the New Jersey Millville Bandits. It was a great win which featured a complete game six-hitter by Charlie Blackington.

According to coach Maher, "The week also had an outstanding display of hitting by Ryan McKeon, who batted .632 for the week."

Other notables who also batted over .300 for the week were Charlie Blackington, Rocco Laugelle, Harrison Durant, Steven Maher and Timmy Cavanaro. There were great defensive plays made all week by Mats Nelson, who became quite a second baseman. Brandon Winn did a great job as the team's catcher, and both Ryan and Tim Gillis performed well in the field. Ryan Gillis had a couple of web gems in right and younger brother Tim also filled the role of EH (extra hitter, kind of like a DH) several times.

Ryan did a remarkable job on the mound when the team needed him against Hawaii. Although Hawaii beat them handily, it was one of the most fun games we had. Their team presented ours with Hawaiian necklaces and macadamia nuts after the game. Both teams did a pre-game dance performance that brought smiles to all. Steven Iantosca contributed both in the field and at the plate.

In the first playoff game, Iantosca came up big at the plate with two singles. The ace, Durant, with Cavanaro, Winn, and Blackington also in the rotation handled pitching duties. Maher, Mckeon, R.Gillis and Laugelle all came on in relief. Each day, two games were scheduled and Wednesday, the boys played three games, one at 10:00 a.m., the next one at 2:00 p.m., and then at 4:00 p.m. Had they won the 4:00 p.m. game, which they lost to the White Marsh Warriors from Maryland, who were ranked 35th out of the 98 teams, they would have had to play two more games that day as well as two more Thursday in order to make it to the finals.

In addition to coach Maher, Jay Blackington and Johnny Maher coached the Cobras.

"This is my fifth time to Cooperstown, fourth as a coach," said Maher. "We went three times with Johnny and now twice with Steven. I love this team we had. Their chemistry is great, they all got along and improved their game and they did Cohasset proud. The parents were terrific, cheering us on and supporting us when we needed it most. It's hard to believe that this was my last time going, but who knows, maybe I'll go and cheer on next year's Cobras."

The team would like to thank all those who gave generously during fund raising at Shaw's, Stop and Shop, Fiori's Exxon, and at the Recycling Center.

Cohasset Tennis Benefit helps Children's Hospital

Forty teams of tennis enthusiasts rallied behind the Cohasset Tennis Benefit last weekend for friendly competition and to help support the Pediatric Trauma Unit at Children's Hospital in Boston. Matches were played on private courts throughout Cohasset with players competing within three divisions: advanced, intermediate and social.

Spectators watched as Paul Tedeschi and Lori Langenhagen battled to take top honors in the division one competition, narrowly beating out Tom Williams and Leslie Malerbi. Todd and Jessica Fitzpatrick took home the gold in the Level B category, with Sue Feit and Mike Ganz coming in second. The social level ended with Paul and Deidre Prescott earning their championship title against Martha and Michael Gangemi after two consecutive tie-breakers and a three-hour battle on the courts.

However, all 80 players were winners in the eyes of children facing their own battles at Children's Hospital, Boston. Proceeds from this year's benefit will establish a new foundation within Children's Pediatric Trauma Unit. Funds will pay for the transportation and lodging for extended family members and friends, who travel to Boston to support the parents or guardians of children undergoing treatment for trauma or life-threatening illness. This newly created fund was developed by Children's director of trauma, Dr. David Mooney. Some 50,000 patients come through the Children's Emergency Department each year; approximately 11,000 of those cases are injury-related, from minor to severe.

For information about the tournament, photographs and a list of those who made the Cohasset Tennis Benefit successful, visit the Web site at cohassettennis-benefit.org.

Montreal a foodie paradise

Erin Smith
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

MONTREAL - The alluring aromas wafting from the eastern European meat shops, sushi bars, falafel stands and French sidewalk cafes that line Montreal's busy Saint-Laurent Boulevard remind me of the city's vibrant immigrant history. The enticing smells also remind me of my grumbling stomach.

No worries. To walk Saint-Laurent Boulevard is certainly to lose any battle to stick to a diet. Montreal is a foodie's paradise, and this is its epicenter.

Saint-Laurent Boulevard divides the eastside of the city from the west - and traditionally, the English-speakers from the French. The street runs from the waterfront of Old Montreal and through Chinatown, the upscale restaurants and cafes in "The Plateau," "Petite Italie" (or Little Italy) and to the famous Jean-Talon Market.

You can eat your way through a busy three-mile expanse. A leisurely exploration of the entire stretch - with stops to nibble - takes a few hours. If you get tired walking, just hop on the number 55 public bus, which conveniently makes stops every few blocks - you can buy a Tourist Card for unlimited travel on the city's buses and subways for about $9.

The Old Montreal end of the street is the place to find hot, young chefs at trendy restaurants. The intrepid epicurean will want to check out L'Orignal - which translates as "the moose" - just blocks from Saint-Laurent Boulevard. The place is so hip it doesn't even have a sign outside the front door advertising that a restaurant exists in the small, alley-like street. The menu features traditional game meats with a trendy twist that some find fun and others find weird - seared duck breast in Coca Cola and cinnamon, anyone? The owners are the same guys behind the trendy Garde-Manger, which is a stone's throw away on Rue Saint-Francois-Xavier, and draws a lively, trendy 30s crowd who come for the oysters and fish dishes.

For the posh side of Montreal, head up the street to "The Plateau" section of Saint-Laurent Boulevard. This area, which begins near Sherbrooke Street, is known for its chic restaurants - and clothing spots - where Hollywood celebrities come to hobnob while they're in town (Paris Hilton was there right before my visit).

There are plenty of places for overpriced martinis, but close by as well on pedestrians-only Prince-Arthur are welcoming and intimate Polish, Greek and Italian restaurants. Some of the owners of these cozy spots don't mind if guests bring their own bottles of wine to drink with dinner.

The atmosphere is even more low-key at Schwartz's, a landmark spot - opened in 1928 - where hungry patrons sit elbow-to-elbow at the counter as waiters try to squeeze around the few small tables. The place may look like a greasy spoon, but customers often spill out onto the sidewalk, waiting for up to half an hour for a seat and the famous brisket sandwiches.

The charming food shop Vieille Europe is only about half a block away, and here you'll find hundreds of exotic cheeses on display at the Old European-style butchery where prosciutto, liverwurst and sausage links hang on rope in the window. This is also a good place to pick up coffee beans.

Montreal has gained acclaim for its bagels. Unlike New York-style bagels, which are cooked in gas ovens, shops here use brick ovens. The result is the bagel equivalent of brick oven pizza - some swear by the sesame seed variety while others prefer the poppy seed (warning, debating with Montrealers about the subject of bagels will produce a long-winded conversation). Fairmont Bagel is only about a five-block detour from Saint-Laurent Boulevard, and some proclaim it the best bagel shop in the city (again, a subject for long debates).

Back on Saint-Laurent, just past Little Italy - with its promise of pasta and other Mediterranean comfort foods - is Jean-Talon Market. At this year-round indoor/outdoor farmers market the vendors sell fruits, vegetables, pastries, honey, flowers and more, seven days a week. It's a popular hangout spot for locals to meet up to peruse the fresh berries and relax in a cafe with a cup of coffee.

A visit here and you'll bring your foodie-ism to a whole new level.

Schwartz's Montreal Hebrew Delicatessen is almost always packed. Customers will wait in long lines for the famous brisket sandwich.

IF YOU go...

EATING THERE: L'Orignal, 479 Saint-Alexis (514-303-0479), and Garde-Manger, 408 Saint-Francois-Xavier (514-678-5044), are two hip restaurants in Old Montreal.

If you head to Schwartz's Montreal Hebrew Delicatessen at 3895 Saint-Laurent Blvd. (514-842-4813; www.schwartzs-deli.com), expect to wait for a table - to avoid the long lines, try going before 11:45 a.m. or after 1:30 p.m.

Pick up fresh cheese and meats at Vieille Europe at 3855 Saint-Laurent Blvd. (514-842-5773). And try one of Montreal's famous brick oven bagels at Fairmont Bagel at 74 Fairmont St. (514-272-0667; www.fairmountbagel.com). Jean-Talon Market is east of Saint-Laurent Street on Jean-Talon Street (514-277-1379).

At nonprofit restaurant, Robin de Bois, 4653 Saint-Laurent (www.robindesbois.ca), you can sign up to volunteer to work in the kitchen or wait tables. All proceeds go to charity (see the Web site for details). It's a great way to be part of the food scene.

Esteemed Irish Choir Group sings at Glastonbury Abbey

Limerick, Ireland and South Boston have a special bond – singing. That bond started in the 1980s when the first troupe of young Irish singers came to South Boston from their Southill community.

One of those original performers was Ms. Tracey Fitzgerald. She never lost her love for music and went on to become a distinguished Choir Director at a church in the town of Adare with roots dating back to the year 1230 A.D.

The Holy Trinity Abbey Choir sings each Sunday at the 11:30 a.m. Mass and has sung throughout Ireland with world renowned Irish singers Frank Patterson, Finbar Wright, Delores Keane and Garda, the famous Irish Police Band.

Voted "Best Limerick Choir" and "Church Choir of the Year" in 2005 and 2007 at the Limerick Festival of Church Music, their 2007 Palm Sunday Mass performance was televised live on Irish national television.

COURTESY PHOTO

The Holy Trinity Abbey Choir will perform at Glastonbury Abbey on Aug. 2.

The Choir will be performing at several Catholic churches in the Boston area during a twelve day visit. The choir will perform at Glastonbury Abbey,16 Hull St., during the 4 p.m. mass on Saturday, Aug. 2.

Barron, founder of Barron's Financial Weekly and owner of the Wall Street Journal; one house is a French Chateau on the Gulf River; a Victorian house built in 1891 for a wealthy Boston resident was used for coot shooting and where stars performing at the Music Circus often stayed; a Tudor Mansion that has been beautifully restored. The formal gardens have been uncovered and a pool added and Cary Point overlooking a private beach is the site of a Mediterranean stucco house recently restored and decorated in a most imaginative way.

The Cohasset Historical Society maintains three buildings in Cohasset, each building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places: The Captain John Wilson House and Samuel Bates Ships Chandlery (Maritime Museum) located in the Village and the Pratt Building, formally the Paul Pratt Memorial Library and now the headquarters of the Society. SALOME'S STARS
JULY 21, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your zeal for challenges usually works well for you. But this week it's best to avoid jumping into new situations without more information. Vital news emerges by the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's patience pays off as that pesky problem works itself out without taking too much of your valuable time. A new task opens interesting possibilities.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Those suggestions you want to share need to be set aside for a while so you can focus on the job at hand. There'll be time later to put your ideas into a workable format.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be sure about your sources before you use the information in any decision you reach about your new project. Some of the data might be out of date or misinterpreted.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A sudden challenge might rattle you at first. But pump up that strong Lion's heart with a full measure of courage and face it with the continuing support of family and friends.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Watch your expenses this week so you can have a financial cushion to fall back on should things tighten up later this month. Money matters ease by the 31st.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Uncertainty over workplace policy creates anxiety and confusion among your colleagues. Don't be surprised if you're asked, once again, to help work things out.

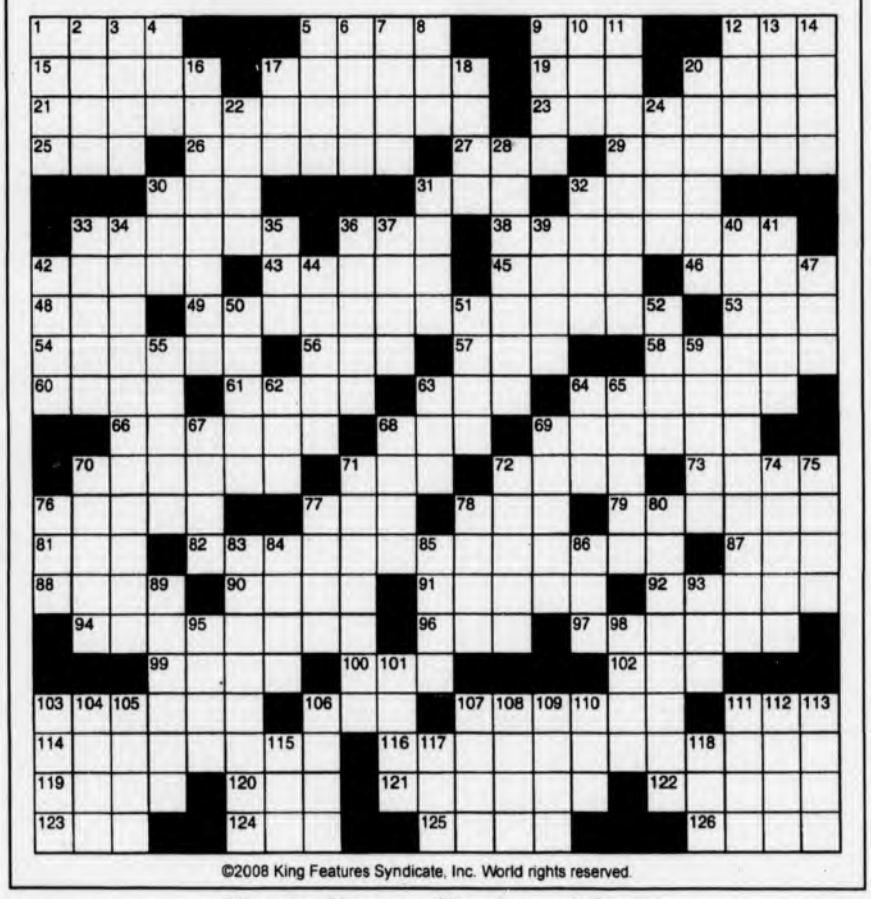
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The workweek keeps you busy tying up loose ends and checking data that needs to be verified. The weekend offers a chance to relax and restore your spent energies.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is not the best time to go to extremes to prove a point. Better to set a sensible goal now and move forward. There'll be time later to take the bolder course.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A step-by-step progression is the better way to move ahead. Taking shortcuts could be risky at this time. Important news arrives on the 31st.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Avoid getting drawn into workplace disputes that should be handled by those directly involved. Instead, spend your energy developing those new ideas.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You still need to be prudent about money matters. But things start to ease by the end of the week. A weekend encounter with an old friend brings welcome news.



(c) 2008 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You handle challenging situations with boldness when necessary and caution when called for.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Schools that really cook

Adult learners find flavorful careers in culinary programs

By Laura Chaput
DAILY NEWS CORRESPONDENT

Baking was always a passion for Jack Waters, a 54-year-old Millbury resident. But he wanted to become a more well-rounded cook.

"I have spent the last 10 years working in a bakery at Price Chopper in Boylston," he said as he kept one eye on a mixer full of dough to make sure it had the right texture. "I wanted to do more with cooking." So he enrolled at Salter College in West Boylston.

"Cooking is more of an art," said Program Director Kim Youkstetter, "whereas baking is more of a science; it's full of precise measurements. With cooking you can add or take away, but baking has to be exact."

Each of the 19 classes the school offers are five weeks long. Day students typically finish within a year; night students finish in two years.

"We are unique in the fact that we enroll every five weeks," said Youkstetter.

The school offers two times for day and night classes. The day classes run from 8 to 11 a.m. or 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; night classes run from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. or 7:40 to 9:40 p.m.

The certificate program, which trains students for mid-level cooking positions, costs $16,000 and includes books, cookware and cutlery.

"It gets them qualified to get a job in a short amount of time," said Youkstetter.

Salter College mixes students of all levels with seven chefs, two of whom are part-time and the other five are adjunct instructors.

The program can be tough for some students.

"Out of my original group, there are four of us left," Andrea DuPont of Boylston said. "But you get what you put into it. If you don't try then you won't succeed."

Being at the school not only helps students learn culinary and cutlery skills, but also enables them to learn what some words mean – like ratatouille, an eggplant dish.

"I like it here and I've learned quite a bit. My knife skills are so much better," said LaToya Hayes, a 19-year-old Worcester resident. "The teachers see the best in every student. They work one-on-one with you and make you feel comfortable."

Chef Patrick Rinne said students come back all the time and tell him success stories about their cooking skills.

"To show someone something and then they get the glory, that hits me right here," said Rinne, pointing to his heart.

Salter College began in 1937 as The Salter School, a secretarial school named after Dorothy Salter. In 2007, the school moved from Worcester to West Boylston and the name was changed from Salter School to Salter College, as the school now has degree-granting authority from the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education and accreditation by the American Council of Independent Colleges and Schools.

The college recently approved its 19th course in which students build college survival skills like test taking; budgeting time, life, work and school; and preparing for interviews.

For a culinary school a little bit closer to Boston, check out The Cambridge School of Culinary Arts.

First started in 1974 as a school to teach people how to further their cooking skills, Director Roberta Downing went with the times and turned it into a school designed to flow with the industry.

"She started teaching and kept getting more and more students," said Julie Burba, director of communications. "The students would apprentice, at that time, in a kitchen, and then when people wanted more formal education, she opened up the first kitchen downstairs in 1981 with a curriculum."

The school offers four tracks: the professional chef's program, culinary certificate program, professional pastry program, and a certificate pastry program. The school also offers basic cooking classes and couples cooking.

"The couples cooking classes have been getting very popular," Burba said. "Daughters bring their fathers, sisters come, newlyweds, the recently engaged, and three years ago we started the 'cooking couples cook pride' classes exclusively for gay and lesbian couples for the gay pride parade."

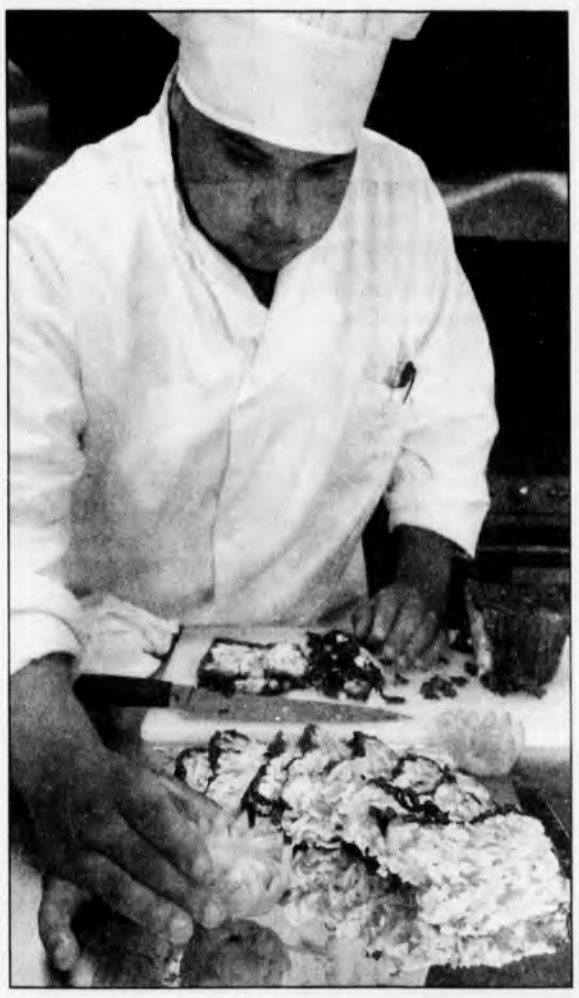
The school is equipped with four kitchens and is expanding with a fifth kitchen.

A former financial consultant, Elise Bayard Franklin, 29, of Boston, decided sitting at a computer all day wasn't for her – but cooking was.

"It was something I had been interested in since college and at that point I didn't like my computer," she said.

A career change worked for her. She still hates her computer but loves working at The Buttercream Baking Co. in Newburyport.

The cost of the school averages $25,000 for the professional programs and $12,200 for certificate programs. The price includes equipment kits, knives, cooking tools, class materials and a uniform.



"We focus on provincial French, Italian, intensive French, Indian, fusion, American and regional Asian cuisine," Burba said.

The school has two full-time chefs, Roberta Downing and Delphin Gomes, and other staff who have administrative duties as well as teaching duties.

Dee Hoty will appear in "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" at the Cape Playhouse, 820 Main St., Route 6A, Dennis, through Aug. 2

Hoty is a Dee-light

Actress gets her chance to perform in 'Dirty Rotten Scoundrels'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Broadway performer Dee Hoty is delighted to be back at the Cape Playhouse in Dennis — this time playing a romance-seeking socialite who finds herself in the company of a pair of charming con men on the French Riviera in "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels"—especially since she didn't even get a chance to see the 2005 Broadway production of the musical comedy. Hoty was on stage most of the same time starring in "Mamma Mia!" in New York and on national tour, including two sold-out stops at Boston's Colonial Theatre. Some of those closest to her did see the show, however, and they immediately thought of the three-time Tony Award nominee.

"When I was first approached to do 'Scoundrels' in Dennis, I went to the Lincoln Center Library to watch a tape of the show. Right away, I could understand what my well-meaning friends who saw the show in New York meant when they said, 'We've seen your next part,'" explained the Ohio-born Hoty recently by telephone from New York.

Once she had seen what Joanna Gleason did with the role in the Broadway company, Hoty was quick to fall in love with the character of Muriel Eubanks, a divorcee turned docent.

"Muriel is a riot. She's always turning up like a bad penny in all kinds of places, because she pitches in to help whenever and wherever she can. She's looking out for herself, and looking for new experiences, after her husband treated her so badly when their marriage ended."

Based on the 1988 Michael Caine and Steve Martin film of the same name, "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels," with a score by "The Full Monty" team of Jeffrey Lane and David Yazbek, earned 11 Tony nominations, with Norbert Leo Butz taking home Best Actor in a Musical. Butz opened the national tour of the show, but had left the production before it reached Boston's Opera House last season. Hoty, 55, earned Broadway fame in musicals like "The Will Rogers Follies" and "City of Angels," but her three earlier Cape Playhouse visits were in the plays "The Lion in Winter" (2000), "Don't Dress for Dinner" (2007), and last summer's "Regrets Only." She had been looking at doing another play this season, too, until she heard "Scoundrels" would be making its summer theater debut at the Playhouse.

"I'm definitely best-known for musicals, but I've loved having the chance to do plays each summer. Honestly, when I heard about this opportunity I was very curious about what it might be like to do a big, giant, huge musical extravaganza at the Cape Playhouse. And this is one that I really wanted to do. I'll only have so many chances to do it, and this is one I couldn't pass up. I'm not carrying the show either, which is nice for a change, but I'm still busy. The show is just a fun, beautifully constructed diversion that is just perfect for this time of year," says Hoty who, having spent childhood summers in Sagamore with her aunt, Ann Decaneas, is looking forward to being back on the Cape where her aunt and many of her cousins still spend summers.

"It's great to be able to work in a familiar place like the Playhouse, because I have my aunt and so many cousins, and now nieces and nephews, in Quincy, Sagamore, and Weston. I have many very vivid childhood memories of my childhood summers in Sagamore. It's the first place I ever saw a lobster, or had one for dinner."

As Hoty was preparing to open in Dennis, she had her eye on a certain movie opening at just about the same time.

"I'm going to see 'Mamma Mia!'" at a screening for anyone who has ever had anything to do with the Broadway show. From what I've seen already, however, the film looks great."

In the ABBA-inspired musical, Hoty played Donna Sheridan, a Greek Island taverna owner who is visited unexpectedly by three men from her past just as the daughter one of them unknowingly fathered is about to wed. Hoty was the first Broadway replacement for Louise Pitre, the original Donna Sheridan, has since played the role for more than three years in New York and on the road. Hoty acknowledges that she didn't only star in "Mamma Mia!" — she is also a fan.

"When I was first learning the music for the show, it felt inescapable. And even now, it is never far from me. Sometimes, I hear one of the songs, even if it's only on an elevator, and I'm tempted to start moving along with it."

While Hoty is eager to see two-time Academy Award winner Meryl Streep as Donna Sheridan, she isn't as sure she is going to like what she hears.

"All I can tell you is that I am a better singer than Meryl Streep will ever be, but she can dance circles around me as an actress. She's wonderful as an actress, and they can do wonders with her singing in post-production, so I'm hopeful that the picture will be just great."

'King of the Blues' performs in Cohasset Aug. 1

"I'm me," B.B. King told Time Magazine in 1969. "Blues is what I do best. If Frank Sinatra can be the best in his field, Nat King Cole in his, Bach and Beethoven in theirs, why can't I be great, and known for it, in blues?"

From another performer, those sentiments might have sounded ego-driven. From B.B. King, they were simply spoken truths — as true 50 years ago as they are today. Indeed, the man born Riley B. King on Sept. 16, 1925 will demonstrate why he has long been known as "King of the Blues" when he takes the stage at the Cape Cod Melody Tent on July 31 and the South Shore Music Circus on Aug. 1.

B.B. King

At age 82, King is still light on his feet, singing and playing the blues with unbridled passion. Since he began making records in the 1940s, he has released over 50 albums. His interest in music, however, can be traced to his earliest days on a Mississippi plantation. King spent his very early childhood playing on street corners for small change. Later, he would take the concept of one-nighters even further, sometimes playing in as many as four towns a night. In 1947, he made his way to Memphis to pursue his music career full-time. Memphis was where every important musician of the South gravitated and where every style of African American music could be found. King stayed with his cousin Bukka White, one of the most celebrated blues performers of his time, who schooled him in the art of the blues. Regular radio work soon followed and the young performer set out to hone in on a catchy stage name. What started out as Beale Street Blues Boy was shortened to Blues Boy King, and eventually B.B. King.

In the mid-1950s, while King was performing at a dance in Twist, Ark., two men got into a fight and knocked over a kerosene stove, setting fire to the hall. King ran outside to safety with everyone else. He then realized that he left his beloved $30 acoustic guitar inside, so he rushed back inside the flame-engulfed building to retrieve it, narrowly escaping death. When he was told later that the fight had been over a woman named Lucille, he decided to give the name to his guitar to remind him never to do a crazy thing like fight over a woman. Ever since, each one of King's trademark Gibson guitars has been called Lucille.

Soon after achieving his first number one hit, "Three O'Clock Blues," B.B. began touring nationally. In 1956, King and his band played an astonishing 342 one-night stands. From small-town cafes, juke joints, and country dance halls to rock palaces, symphony concert halls, and amphitheaters, nationally and internationally, King has earned a rock-solid reputation as one of the most renowned blues musician of the last half-century.

Over the years, King has also developed his own unique guitar style. He borrowed from Blind Lemon Jefferson, T-Bone Walker and others, integrating his precise and complex vocal-like string bends and his left hand vibrato, both of which have become indispensable components of rock guitarist's vocabulary. His every-note-counts phrasing has been a model for countless players, from Eric Clapton and George Harrison to Jeff Beck.

King has mixed traditional blues, jazz, swing, mainstream pop and jump into a sound that is all his own. As King himself once explained it, "When I sing, I play in my mind; the minute I stop singing orally, I start to sing by playing Lucille."

B.B. King will be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main Street, Hyannis, on July 31. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 1-800-347-0808. King will be at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Aug. 1. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-931-2787.

— SAMPLING COHASSET BEACHES —

Marcus Charles, 16, measures out 90 mL of distilled water in a graduated cylinder while testing his samples of Cohasset water back in the lab at the Center for Student Coastal Research on Tuesday.

CSCR teams up with Board of Health

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Like clockwork, every Tuesday during the summer Health Inspector Tara Tradd hits the beach. But no, it's not to take a swim or lay out on the golden sands of Sandy Beach, but rather to gather water samples from Cohasset beaches spots to ensure they are safe for swimming and other recreational activities.

Since the inception of the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), Tradd has teamed up with students each summer to help her gather the samples and then run a similar test in their lab. This summer, Marcus Charles, who will be a senior at Cohasset High in the fall, has been helping to collect the samples and running a test for the presence of enterococci — the red flag when testing for bacteria at town beaches.

The Mariner tagged along with Tradd and Marcus as they made their rounds to the town's beaches. Six locations are sampled: off the docks of the Sailing Club and the Yacht Club, Sandy Cove, Little Harbor, Sandy Beach and Black Rock Beach.

At each sampling location one sample is taken in a glass bottle then split the water between two sterile cups — one goes to the state lab, G&L Laboratories in Quincy, and the other to the CSCR lab.

So far this summer, the results done by Marcus and G&L have been nearly identical.

"They have a good system and good controls in place," said Tradd. When both results come back on Wednesday they compare the results via e-mail. Typically, Tradd mentors several students for the summer project, but this year only Marcus signed on.

"I wanted to do a project that helped the community," said Marcus, who is doing his first summer project at CSCR. Although he didn't start out doing this project, he now believes this is the "best one" because the impact on the community is immediate.

Determination says evidence insufficient in Lewis complaint

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The School Department was recently found to have not violated a student and an employee's civil rights in a complaint filed with the US Department of Education, Office for Civil Rights.

Peggy Lewis, who made headlines in December when the Cohasset Schools took her to Superior Court in order to keep her son in special education against her wishes, filed the complaint in late December on behalf of herself and her son.

Over seven months later, the Office for Civil Rights determined there was insufficient evidence to support a violation of the civil rights.

"The basic result was there was no finding," said School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn at last Wednesday's School Committee meeting. The ruling was not discussed in any detail at the meeting. However, Flynn said, residents could request a copy of the finding from the superintendent.

The complaint alleged district administrators retaliated against Lewis and her son since the close of the 2006-2007 school year, after she filed a complaint with the Massachusetts Department of Education and then her advocacy on behalf of the student during a hearing before the Bureau of Special Education Appeals.

Lewis is the secretary in the front office of the Middle-High School and her son finished his eighth grade year this past spring.

The specifics of the alleged retaliation included an administrator following the student around the school building observing him in a manner that he felt was intimidating and again when the

Public Heath Nurse Mary Goodwin settles in

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Keeping Cohasset as healthy and safe as possible is the aim of Mary Goodwin, the town's new public heath nurse. Nestled into a Town Hall office between the Planning Board and Building Department, Goodwin has been settling into her job since starting in early April.

Long-time public health nurse Judy Fitzsimmons retired in April after 22 years. Goodwin had served as assistant public health nurse for the past three years, which has made the transition smooth for the office.

"I felt I had a good feel for a lot of the job, but certainly I have a lot to learn," said Goodwin. The public health nurse's role is multi-faceted and in a given day she has to be ready for nearly anything. From checking in on elderly residents to performing regular blood pressure checks to keeping track of communicable diseases to educating

Building and harbormaster have positive reports

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Whether building or boating this summer the town departments behind those activities had relatively positive reports to give the Board of Selectmen.

As part of the Selectmen's ongoing effort to meet with each department head this summer on the trends, major challenges, grant opportunities and general big picture perspective, both the Building Department and the Harbormaster Department presented at the July 21 meeting.

With the struggling economy, Building Commissioner Bob Egan said the amount of permits being drawn is down 24 percent from the same time last year (July 2007). Yet, the building permit fees are only down 8.7 percent from last year's numbers.

"From what I've heard we are in better shape than surrounding towns," said Egan. He expects many residents are delaying home improvement projects due to the economy.

"The number of permits may be down, but the cost is still there," said Egan. The permit fees are based on the estimated cost of construction. The current permit fee is $10 per thousand dollars of construction cost. The fee is on par with other area towns, said Egan.

Some fairly large projects are expected to move ahead and break ground within the next six months. The mixed-use plaza in the transit-oriented district, Old Colony Square, and the 200-unit Avalon apartments are looking to pull building permits before the end of the year. The project will bring in new revenue for the town. The developers will pay for the building permits and once finished the projects will go on the town's property tax rolls.

Other permitting is done out of the Building Department office including plumbing and electrical inspections.

"We are doing the best we can with zoning enforcement, building permits and dealing with the needs of citizens," said Egan, adding courtesy, efficiency and follow-up are some of the most important pieces to success in the building department.

"There's no reason not to be courteous, whether it's a lawyer, an attorney, a developer or a resident," he said. "We try to treat everyone fairly and try to make them understand why things are done the way they are."

Egan also serves as the town's Sealer of Weights and Measures and is often called to judge whether customers are getting what they pay for at the gas pump or with a cord of wood.

"However much it costs, (the residents of) Cohasset are getting a full gallon," said Egan, who recently inspected all the gas pumps in town to ensure they were accurate.

Harbormaster's report

Harbormaster Lorri Gibbons updated the Selectmen on the busy summer goings-on in the harbor and waterfront. With herself and three assistant harbormasters and three boats, the department is in full swing. The impacts of the no discharge zone, a mile-long mooring waiting list, and a partially deteriorated town boat ramp were discussed.

This summer is the first that Cohasset Harbor and its outer waters have been officially declared a no discharge area. That means all overboard discharge of all boat sewage, even if treated, is prohibited within three miles of shore. In a no discharge area, vessel sewage must be discharged to a shore-side or mobile pumpout facility.

Accordingly, Gibbons said the town's pumpout boat has been busy.

POLICE BEAT

Suspicious shoppers spotted, then leave

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

CVS contacted police about two men who were inside the store and were acting suspiciously at about 4 p.m. on Monday (July 21).

Police said CVS clerks observed the men filling up shopping baskets with different items. One employee saw one of the men attempting to cover up some of the items.

One of the men then put the items in his basket back on the shelf and left the store. Then it appeared that he was talking with the other man, who was still inside the store, on his cell phone from the parking lot. The man, who was inside, then put his basket down and left the store.

Police were able to obtain a partial plate and description of the vehicle and confirmed it was registered to a man who is known to police for shoplifting.

CVS is considering taking out a no-trespass order against the man, whom police identified. The other man was not identified. In this instance, no crime was committed, police said.

Phone lines cut

Police are investigating a report of telephone lines that were cut to a local business in Tedeschi Plaza off Route 3A.

The caller explained that the telephone company was at her business to handle a problem she was having with the line and discovered that the lines had been cut intentionally.

Police Chief James Hussey said the room where the lines are housed is shut and locked. "Detectives are trying to determine what the intention was," he said. The incident was reported on Monday (July 21) at 1:50 p.m.

Illinois plates

Police were called to Sandy Beach about a car with Illinois plates and no sticker that refused to leave at about 2:17 p.m. on Monday (July 21). But by the time police arrived, the motorist was on his way.

Jaguar ornament

A Pleasant Street man reported that the hood ornament on his Jaguar had been broken off sometime overnight July 21-22. Police said the jaguar ornament had been snapped off and was missing. The incident is under investigation.

Hit and run

Police said a Pontiac drove through a stonewall on Cedar Street sometime overnight July 22-23, went into a sand trap and drove across part of the Cohasset Golf Club course, exiting back onto Cedar Street.

Police recovered black plastic pieces from a Pontiac at the scene.

"Whoever it was wanted to make good his escape," Chief Hussey said.

Summons

A 19-year-old Acton man is being summonsed to court for driving an unregistered vehicle. An officer ran a random check on the plate as the car was pulling out of Shaw's because the registration sticker was not visible.

The computer revealed the registration had been revoked because the car was not insured. The car was towed.

MV crashes

• An Abington man called police after the motorcycle he was driving hit a pothole on Atlantic Avenue near Lothrop Lane. He was traveling north when he hit the pothole and lost control, going into a 25-foot skid. He was checked out by paramedics and was able to drive the motorcycle away, police said. The accident occurred at 8 p.m. on Tuesday (July 22).

• At 5:26 p.m. on Friday (July 25), a 2003 Nissan driven by a Cohasset man stopped behind a line of cars at the lights at Stop and Shop when it was hit from behind by a 1995 Ford operated by a Hull woman. The Hull woman told police she had taken her eyes off the road for a second when the accident occurred. There were no reported injuries. The Hull woman was cited for failure to use care in stopping. Her car had to be towed.

• A Hingham mother called Cohasset police after her son was involved in a fender-bender on Sohier Street near the railroad tracks. She wanted to be sure her son got all the information. Police said the cars were traveling north (toward Ripley Road) when traffic was stopped at the tracks. A 2008 Nissan, driven by a Cohasset man, bumped the rear bumper of a 1994 Buick, driven by the Hingham teen. Police said there was minor damage to the Nissan. The Cohasset man was given a warning for failure to use care when stopping.

Metal plate

At about 8:50 p.m. on Wednesday (July 23), a motorist notified police that he had driven over a metal plate near Jerusalem Road and Bow Street. The plate sliced one of his tires. When he made the call, he was at the Mobil Station waiting for help from a wrecker. He told police he was planning to fill out an accident report.

Check fraud

Cohasset police are investigating a larceny by check and have a suspect, Chief Hussey said. The two-part incident began in Hanover after a Hanover woman reported that checks had been stolen from her pocketbook. Hanover police are investigating the theft of the checks.

The victim went to the Cohasset police headquarters on Friday (July 25) at 9:53 a.m. to report that one of the checks had been cashed at a bank in Cohasset. Cohasset police detectives went to the bank and obtained a copy of the check. The matter remains under investigation.

Missing boat

An Atlantic Avenue resident reported Friday (July 25) that a small rowboat with the letters "MD" and some numbers on its side was missing and asked if anyone reported finding it. Police said he did not want to make an official report yet because he thought that someone may have borrowed the boat and would return it.

At this time it is listed as "missing," Chief Hussey said. "He wants to wait and see if it shows up before making a formal report."

Almost hit

A caller notified police at 4 p.m. on Friday (July 25) that some teens were "almost hit" by a car as they were walking along Border Street by Atlantica. An officer went to the scene but the teens could not provide a plate number or description of the vehicle.

Garage break-in

A Ledge Way resident called police on Friday (July 25) at about 4:53 p.m. after he returned home from vacation. He reported that someone had tried to break into his garage. The doorframe to an entry door appeared to have been pried. Police said the resident did not think anything was missing and it did not appear that entry to the garage had been gained.

Marijuana arrest

Police say a group of Sharon residents were stopped after a witness saw the driver drop a "marijuana blunt cigar" out the window of the Ford Mustang on Government Island.

An officer was in the vicinity and pulled the car over on Government Island. There was a man and three women in the car. Police said there was some "crumblings" of marijuana outside the car when it was stopped.

Further investigation revealed a marijuana "joint" next to the driver's seat and a small plastic bag with marijuana in the car. The 22-year-old man was arrested and charged with possession of Class D (marijuana). His girlfriend was allowed to drive the car home.

Police said the group had been jumping off the Border Street bridge earlier.

Determination says evidence insufficient in Lewis complaint

district sought a restraining order to prevent Lewis from withdrawing her consent for special education services.

The complaint further alleged the district took adverse action against Lewis in regards to her time and attendance at her job. Lastly, the Office of Civil Rights (OCR) looked into an allegation the district failed to respond to her grievances regarding the student's educational placement.

The OCR evaluated whether the district retaliated again the Lewises and if they failed to respond to grievances. The OCR approach was systematic. They reviewed the background of the complaint, provided by Lewis and the school district, including special education records and academic records related to the student, personnel records and other documentation such as student handbooks and school policies.

The OCR visited the Cohasset schools on four different occasions, twice in March and twice in June and interviewed 23 staff members, including the student's teachers, school administrative staff and school administrators.

The Office for Civil Rights visited the Cohasset schools on four different occasions, twice in March and twice in June and interviewed 23 staff members, including the student's teachers, school administrative staff and school administrators.

In all aspects of the complaint, the OCR found there was a legitimate, non-pretextual and non-retaliatory reason for the actions Lewis described.

"From a superintendent's perspective, I believe in the system whether it be a request for public records or the Office of Civil Right and I respect the process," Superintendent Denise Walsh said in a phone interview this week. "The representatives from the Office of Civil Rights were very thorough…and at the end of the day, they didn't find a breach of anyone's civil rights."

Following their evidence gathering, OCR then met with Lewis to discuss their preliminary observations and provide her with an opportunity to respond to the information gathered during the investigation according to their ruling.

"The representatives from OCR left no stone unturned. As a community we can be assured the OCR did their job and we're doing ours," Walsh said.

Lewis stands by her story and does not agree with the OCR's conclusions.

"I wouldn't have done a single thing differently. All of my concerns are true and I think they are legitimate complaints but, once again, they are not being addressed," Lewis said in a phone interview.

Federal laws could change

Following the decision of the Superior Court where a judge mandated the Lewises' son continue to receive special services from the Cohasset schools, Peggy Lewis told the Mariner "something has to happen because of this, parents don't know they could lose all say over their child's education."

Eight months later, something could happen. Changes in federal regulations are being proposed by the Secretary of Education to allow parents the right o remove their child from a special education program.

One of the proposed changes to special education federal rules would "permit parents to unilaterally withdraw their children from further receipt of special education…by revoking their consent."

In the Lewises' case, they tried to have their son removed from an individual education plan, dubbed an IEP, when he was finishing the seventh grade. But, the school believed the Lewises' son would be denied a "free and appropriate education" if he was removed from the special education plan. The school appealed the Lewises' denial of consent all the way to Superior Court where the judge ruled in the district's favor and the Lewises' son remained in his IEP.

A free and appropriate public education, often referred to as FAPE, is the responsibility a public school system has by law to provide all students eligible for special education with the services they need. Federal and state law ensures that all students with disabilities receive a free and appropriate public education at no expense for the family. A free and appropriate public education differs from each student because each student has unique needs.

In the new law, if parents refuse special education services then the school would not be in violation of providing, FAPE. One of the reasons Cohasset schools pursued the special education plan for the Lewis boy, then in eighth grade, was because if they weren't able to give him special education services they would have not been providing a free and appropriate public education to the student.

While no direct cause and effect relationship can be made between the Lewis case and the proposed changes to special education laws, Lewis believes her case and her advocacy for her son played a role in bringing attention to the issue.

"If someone wants (their child out of special education), it's a big battle. The only way to do it is if the law changes," said Lewis, who commented in support of the proposed regulation.

The comment period for this proposed regulation change ended Monday, July 28. Hundreds of parents, teachers, education advocates and school districts responded.

The proposed regulations can be viewed at www.regulations.gov by searching for docket ID: ED-2008-OSERS-0005.

Schools balance the books

As is typical at the end of the fiscal year, several transfers needed to be made from accounts in the black to accounts in the red for the School Department. A balance of $299,435 was spread over 14 different school accounts; six accounts had deficits totaling up to $104,608. Due to the fairly mild winter, all three schools showed balances in their heat, electric and water line items.

The largest account with a deficit was the special education legal expenses with a negative balance of $57,158. A total of $40,000 had been appropriated to the special education legal expenses for the fiscal year 2008.

Vice Chairman Alfred Slanetz expressed concern at the number.

"People should try to avoid suing each other…(the cost for legal bills) is a couple of teachers," said Slanetz.

In addition to making the $104,608 in transfers to cover the accounts in deficits, the committee made $122,221 in special purchases such as surveillance cameras, entryway mats, food lunch program supplies and materials and instructional supplies for all schools. The remaining balance ($72,606) was used to pre-pay special education tuition for the fiscal 2009 school year.

Sen. Hedlund named to transportation bond bill conference committee

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, has been named to the conference committee that will negotiate a final version of a $1.38 billion transportation bond bill currently before the Legislature.

Hedlund was appointed to the committee due to his role as the ranking member of the Joint Committee on Transportation. He has sat on the committee since first being elected to the Senate in 1990 and is currently the panel's longest-serving member.

"Being a member of this special committee gives me a better opportunity to advocate on behalf of the projects important to my district," Hedlund said.

Both the Senate and House versions of the bond bill contain $1.75 million for the reconstruction of Rockland Street in Hingham, $150,000 for repairs to the Pemberton Pier commuter boat float in Hull and $43 million for the construction of a connector road from Route 18 in Weymouth to Route 3 in Rockland.

In addition, the House version also contains funding for, among other projects, $200,000 for the widening of Route 139 in Marshfield, and $3.5 million for the reconstruction of Route 123 in Norwell.

Both versions contain legislation for the South Weymouth Naval Air Station redevelopment, however, the Senate draft contains language sponsored by Hedlund that provides additional protections for taxpayers.

Joining Hedlund on the conference committee are Sens. Steven Baddour, D-Methuen, and Stephen Brewer, D-Barre, and Reps. Robert DeLeo, D-Winthrop, Joseph Wagner, D-Chicopee, and Elizabeth Poirier, R-North Attleboro.

Are you prepared for an emergency?

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Do you have a family emergency plan, meeting place? Do you have a three-day supply of food and water? Do you have an evacuation kit ready to go?

According to emergency preparedness officials, these are just a few of the things every household should have at the ready in the case of an emergency. Unfortunately, many Americans are not prepared for the unexpected, whether it is a chemical spill down the street, a house fire, a pandemic or a hurricane.

On Tuesday morning, representatives from the Region 4B emergency management group of which Cohasset is a part of, came to Town Hall to present simple ways residents can be prepared.

"How can we better deliver the message such that it becomes a community effort?" said Garrett Simonsen, coordinator of training and communication in Region 4B. The answer, he said, is to make the process less overwhelming by breaking it into easy to accomplish tips.

Despite recent large-scale disasters in the U.S. like Hurricane Katrina most have not been propelled to action when it comes to emergency preparedness. Recent national surveys indicate less than on-third of Americans have a basic emergency plan and supplies and while 47 percent believe there will be a major disaster in their area in the next five years, 43 percent are not doing anything to prepare.

Simonsen said it's likely much of what needs to gathered for an emergency can already be found in homes and the remaining items can be bought without a large investment of time or money.

"Identify what you have and put it all together," said Simonsen. A three-day supply of food and water, a first aid kit, prescriptions medications, basic hygiene products, tools (flashlight, battery powered radio, extra batteries) and copies of important documents are the very basic items.

"Helping an individual identify the basics and what they will need to stay safe in an emergency enables them to feel confident," said Simonsen. Depending on the type of emergency, residents may be required to shelter-in-place (stay where they are) or they may need to evacuate to a safe building. In the case of the latter, an evacuation kit with light essentials should be packed and ready in your home or car (or both).

He encouraged those present, which were mostly members of the medical reserve corps, to remember neighbors who may need a helping hand to prepare. The medical reserve corps are volunteers — some are nurses, doctors, pharmacists, but others are lay people — who would be called on to act in the event of an regional emergency.

An emergency could happen at any time and your family may not be together when it does. Simonsen explained the importance of having a plan to contact each other. He suggested the family include an out-of-state contact for family member to check-in with as local phone lines may get bogged down in a regional emergency.

"Know how you will communicate and where you will meet outside the house or outside the neighborhood," said Simonsen. He suggested an out-of-neighborhood meeting place proximate to public transportation or a government building where more information may be available.

The emergency plan should be reviewed and updated about every six months to ensure the plan is accurate and food has not expired.

"It's a process that must be continually be maintained and thought about," said Simonsen.

Simonsen gave all present an assignment to prepare their own homes and families, then spread their knowledge to others.

"Community success is very much dependent on what each of us does individually," said Simonsen.

Starter kit supplies of with basic items were handed out to get attendees started on their emergency preparedness kits. Granola bars, water, heat pack, water bag, battery powered flashlight, hand sanitizer, poncho, first aid kit and emergency blanket were distributed.

The presentation was one of several done across region 4B, which includes 27 cities and towns in metro Boston.

For more information about how to prepare for an emergency, contact the Board of Health at (781) 383-4116.

'ICE' your cell phone

If you can't tell paramedics who you are, your cell phone can help emergency responders and healthcare workers to identify you and notify your loved ones.

Program your cell phone's telephone book with the codeword "ICE," which stands for "in case of emergency." Open your cell phone telephone book to create a new entry. Instead of entering the name of a person, enter the word "ICE."

Enter the phone number of the person you would want contacted in an emergency. To list multiple contacts, name the entries ICE1, ICE2, and so on.

Emergency workers look for the codeword ICE when they turn on your phone.

Quick Tips

Planning ahead for an emergency will give you peace of mind and can keep your family and friends safe. Local and state officials preparing for a range of possible emergencies, from hurricanes and blizzards to a flu pandemic and acts of terrorism. There are simple steps you can take to prepare:

- Develop a family communication plan. Know how your family will contact each other and where you will meet.
- Have a three-day food and water supply for each person in your home. Remember individual diet needs and plan for your pets.
- Have a first aid kit with health products and prescription medicines.
- Put together an evacuation kit and put it in an easily accessible place in your car or in a backpack. Pack lightly and include basic supplies for 24 to 48 hours.
- Review your plans and supplies every six months with everyone in your home. Replace expired food, water and medicine. Update your communication plan.

ly well, the pump out numbers are up over past years," said Gibbons. Pumpouts are provided to boaters at no charge.

The mooring list was a hot topic and Gibbons said she is always looking for more places to put moorings, but the harbor is tight. Currently, there are approximately 500 names on the mooring waiting list and the wait is between 15 and 20 years long. However, with more moorings come additional questions of parking spaces and dinghy tie-ups.

Gibbons said there has been more transient (out-of-town boaters coming in to the harbor) traffic this year. Some nights, the harbor has hosted as many as six transient boats.

On shore, Gibbons said one of her concerns right now is the town boat ramp.

"The boat ramp is a problem," said Gibbons. The bottom of the ramp has eroded and can only handle one boat at a time.

"It's the only ramp we have in town and if there was a hurricane and boats needed to be taken out, we could only take out about 350 over three days, 24 hours a day," said Gibbons. Although a temporary fix in place, Town Manager Bill Griffin asked Gibbons to be put in a capital request for an engineering study to design a more permanent fix.

Enjoy the month and send in your news and photos when you can to share what you are doing with family and friends.

KUDOS

We have a nice big shout out to give here in town to the Tree & Park employees as well as Brian Adams, who handles the facilities in Cohasset. Last week, at the Playground at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum and the Paul Pratt Library, the men came to work on spreading some new playground mulch and clean up the space in and around the area. They worked in the rain throughout the day to complete it and get it done for the families who come to enjoy the playground. The comments that have been made from children and adults alike have been so positive and it is wonderful to know that the town employees work to give us safe and clean spaces all around. They also have been working at the Osgood and Deer Hill school fields and areas around them as well. Thank you from the community to you all!

Adrian Morris goes green

Lemon Lime salon opens in coming week

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

We follow the fruit. That simple motto has guided the Adrian Morris Salon to a goal that will come to fruition in the coming week. The same people who have gained a loyal following at the village salon will open the doors to a new, environmentally conscious salon under the name Lemon Lime.

Located in the King Jewelers building on Route 3A, Lemon Lime is the result of many years of dreaming and two years of hard work by owner Adrian Morris and his entire staff.

From the get-go, Adrian knew he wanted to build a salon that incorporated an environmental awareness in nearly every part of its operation.

"We want to be a happy, fruitful, giving organization," Adrian said of his new venture while standing amid the noise of construction in his nearly complete salon on a recent morning. "It's all a bit overwhelming and exciting."

The "green" aspects of Lemon Lime are complemented by a naturally inspired color scheme. Lime green styling chairs, green vine wallpaper and a rich reddish brown tiled floor stands out against the contemporary, yet inviting space. Natural wood desks and furniture and unadorned mirrors complete the sleek space.

"Every single product used is the most environmentally conscious product that could be used," said Adrian.

The furniture is constructed of recycled materials. The lighting will all be energy efficient LED lights. The hairdryers and other styling essentials will be hanging from the ceiling to reduce the amount of furniture needed. A special chemical holding tank has been installed for the rinsing of all chemical treatments like hair color and texturizers (perm and straightening treatments) will be kept separately from regular wastewater.

The environmentally friendly infrastructure will be complemented by a culture of conservation, Adrian explained. The staff, 18 in all, is trained to be careful about not leaving the water running when washing their hands or leaving the hair dryer on for longer than need be.

"People will support a culture they helped create, conservation just become part of your life," said Adrian. In the salon when co-workers see another committing "an environmental act of kindness," they say, "we follow the fruit."

The new name, Lemon Lime, is more reflective of what Adrian sees as the vision for the salon. Over the seven and a half years he has been in Cohasset Village, he says the success of the salon was due to a team effort by all his stylists and staff. By shedding his name, he recognizes how it has taken a team to build success. While the name itself evokes the cheery colors of bright yellow and lime green while harkening to the natural fruits of the environment.

Although the cost of build-out is nearly double what a standard salon would cost, Adrian firmly believes it was the right way to go.

"The return in being able to give back to the community and the environment is quadruple," said Adrian. "It is a huge investment, but not doing it would be a huge travesty to the environment itself…If change has to happen, why not at a local salon? We want to help keep the environment in our corner of the world as clean and safe as possible."

Adrian has a plan to make the Cohasset Lemon Lime the first of five Aveda "lifestyle salons" in the local area. Lemon Lime is co-branded with Aveda, an international hair company whose mission aligns with Adrian's environmentally conscious attitude. Lemon Lime will be one of the company's 350 flagship lifestyle salons in the country.

"Our mission and Aveda's mission is operate sustainably, give back to the environment and the local community," Adrian said, making the partnership a fateful one. For the past few years he and Theresa Breen, director of operations, traveled to other successful Aveda salons before putting together the Lemon Lime business plan.

Despite the change in location, Adrian said the quality of service would remain the same, if not better. Lemon Lime will be open seven days a week for convenience. The color mixing station is set behind the styling chairs and clients can watch the color mixing process. Guest services will still greet clients with their favorite beverage, just the way they like it, and complimentary stress relieving rituals will still be performed with every shampoo. The complete line of Aveda products will be available in the front of the store.

"We go way beyond a cut and color," said Adrian.

Many of his clients have been coming to him since he opened seven years ago and plan to move with him to Lemon Lime.

"He is a great talent when it comes to hair, but his philanthropy stands out to me. He wants to give back to his clientele, the community and the environment. He is very much aware how he can make a difference," says long-time customer and Cohasset resident Mimi Maich. Adding, "he has a good heart."

Over his seven-year presence in Cohasset, Adrian Morris Salon has given over $400,000 to local community groups through gift certificates, products and funds. "We've strictly focused on Cohasset," says Adrian.

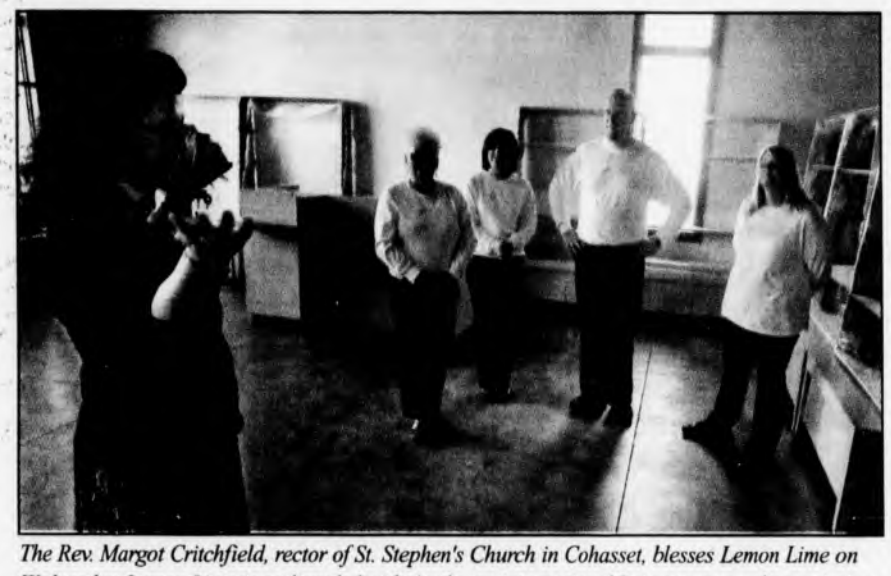
The salon has also supported Learn, Live, and Love Cancer Outreach Organization, a local group dedicated to providing financial assistance to women and family on the South Shore who have been touched by cancer. Since its inception in 2005, Adrian Morris Salon has helped raise over $300,000 for the cause.

His heart and passion for everything he does is evident. Long-time client and friend Julie Maguire of Hingham said his generous spirit and emphasis on women's cause and local groups sticks out in her mind.

"He's done a lot of good for people," she said.

Despite Adrian's excitement over the new space and new era for his business, he is going to miss the village.

"I have an amazing connection with the village. I'll always love it, there's nothing like it. We wouldn't be able to be here if we weren't there," says Adrian.



Although not able to stay in the village, he was happy to find an opportunity to grow the business while remaining close to his roots in 02025.

"I love that (in Cohasset) everyone knows each other by first name and phone numbers can be given out by the last four digits. Where else can you do that?" says Adrian. "I finally understand the saying, becoming a staple in the community," Adrian noted to his "lifesaver," Breen. "And there's no better community to be in."

This year, the CSCR numbers mean a little bit more at two sample sites. The state authorized a reduction in sampling required for Little Harbor (a sample taken near Cunningham Bridge) and Sandy Cove. Tradd sends samples to G&L once a month, but Marcus still tests the water every week.

If tests reveal a one-time "spike" of more than 104 colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters of water beaches are closed or a geometric mean over 35 colonies of enterococci spread over a five week period.

The system isn't perfect, but it is the best the state and town have available at this time, said Tradd. Several times she has taken a sample on a Tuesday and then when the results came back she found the enterococci levels were high. She rushes to the beach to close the beach, post signs and talk to any residents on the beach.

For a slideshow on the water sampling program visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset

This week's results*

Results indicate the number of colonies of enterococci per 100 milliliters (cfu/100mL).

Bassing's Beach/Sailing Club	47
Yacht Club	8
Sandy Beach	2
Black Rock Beach	2

Samples taken at Sandy Cove and Little Harbor were tested by Marcus Charles of CSCR. The town is only required to do state lab testing of these locations once a month. The Mariner was unable to get his results by press time. The most recent state results from samples taken on July 15 were 6cfu/100mL at Little Harbor and 2cfu/100mL at Sandy Cove.*

At the same time, she takes another sample and typically the sample comes back fine.

"We're closing the beach when it's okay to swim and leaving it open when not okay," said Tradd. Yet, the system is the best method available right now. A rapid indicator for enterococci is still being developed, she said.

Health effects related to swimming in polluted waters could include ear infections, conjunctivitis and rashes. The most common ailment is gastro-intestinal disorders, stemming from swimmers, especially children, swallowing water.

Tuesday morning was bright and sunny and the tide was nearly high as we set off shortly after 8:30a.m. Sailing lessons had already begun at both the Sailing Club and Yacht Club. At each site, Tradd and Marcus take the temperature of the water as well as the sample. They also note anything out of the ordinary like birds, jellyfish, boats, swimmers, seaweed that may or may not impact the results.

Along the way, Tradd explained a heavy rainfall — and the first flush of stormwater that comes with it — impact the bacteria levels of the inner harbor especially. As a precaution, after a half-inch of rain the harbor/Bassing's Beach is automatically closed for swimming. This summer, Bassing's Beach has been closed twice due to high level of enterococci. All other beaches have done "swimmingly."

"It's been a really good season overall," said Tradd. The temperatures have gotten warmer over the summer, the water temperature at the beaches on the ocean were 65 degrees, while the harbor was 69 degrees. Beginning with the Sandy Cove, Marcus donned high waiters to wade into the ocean to get the sample. The water sample must be taken about waist deep.

While all of the beaches were relatively quiet, Sandy Beach was already populated with several families settling in for a beach day.

As we go from beach to beach, the samples are kept cool in coolers until they can tested.

Shortly before 10 a.m., Tradd drops Marcus back off at CSCR to do his testing. Tradd must then head straight back to Town Hall because the courier arrives to pick up the samples at 10a.m.

"I like working in the lab," said Marcus, but plans to study business in college.

When he gets back to CSCR, typically the other project groups have already set out to do their fieldwork, so he has the lab to himself. He wipes down the table with alcohol and gathers his equipment. Each sample is diluted to 10 milliliters of sample to 90 milliliters of distilled water solution. He pours in a bacterial food, shakes the sample and it turns a pale yellow color. Then, he places each sample in an "IDEXX" tray, a plastic tray with large and small squares where water goes in. The tray is then sealed and he places it in an incubator for 24 hours.

Marcus returns the lab on Wednesday and runs the IDEXX tray through a UV light. He notes how many large and small squares "light up." He consults a chart to determine the level of enterococci present, then multiplies the number by 10 because of the dilution.

The CSCR method is different from what is done at the G&L lab, but the results are similar.

"For the second year in a row, we have been able to demonstrate that our results are very closely aligned (with the state's lab results)," said Jack Buckley, CSCR director and high school social studies teacher.

All the samples came back under the limit this week and the beaches are open for swimming and recreational activities.

The most up-to-date water quality reading results are available online. Visit the Massachusetts Department of Public Health website at www.mass.gov/dph/. Click on a link on the right hand side for "beach water quality."

Marcus Charles measures out 10mL of sample water using a pipette while getting them ready to be tested.

Public Heath Nurse Mary Goodwin settles in the public about local health concerns to emergency management, her job is a big one.

"I know I have big shoes to fill, people really loved Judy. The good news is she left (the department) in great shape and she's still around so I can call her with questions if I need to," Goodwin said.

A nurse for 30 years, Goodwin has served as a visiting nurse in Boston, worked and researched at Boston Medical and organized immunization records for a local pediatrician. She was a stay-at-home mom for 10 years, raising two girls, now 17 and 15, in Cohasset. Three years ago she started filling in for Fitzsimmons during vacations or sick days.

"It's nice to be close by when you have teenagers, but it's nice to go back to work too. It's a great balance," said Goodwin.

With a lot of energy and a friendly smile, Goodwin is trying to bring her own personality to the role of public health nurse. She'd like to make the office more family-friendly and is expanding the offerings at the annual September Health Fair to attract more families (see sidebar).

"When it comes to public health, it really affects the whole family. It starts with the babies getting their immunizations right up to caring for the elderly," said Goodwin.

Down the line, she'd like to start a walking group to get people moving.

"I'm a big advocate of walking," she said, adding she walks every morning.

Meanwhile, her office is one of the busiest in Town Hall. She has been somewhat surprised in the number of people who come in during her office hours held Monday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 8:30 to 11a.m.

"There is a steady flow of people who come in for a variety of reasons," said Goodwin, at times there is even a line outside her first floor Town Hall office. Many regularly come in for blood pressure checks, dressing changes after surgery and routine injections of arthritis medicine or B12. She can save many trips to the doctor for these routine items, provided at no charge to residents.

Health Fair Sept. 16

The Annual Health Fair, held this year on Tuesday, Sept. 16 from 1 to 5p.m. at the Second Congregational Church, will have many new and different activities.

"We really want to broaden the appeal of the event and attract families," said Mary Goodwin, public health nurse. Representatives from South Shore Hospital will be on hand to give car seat checks and bike helmet fittings, as well as talk about senior fall prevention. A Children's Melanoma Prevention representative will talk to kids and parents about the dangers of the sun and how to be safe in the sun.

Other highlights include a Scituate pharmacist who will go over all your medications and explain the side affects, a chiropractor, a masseuse, a skin damage analyzer and a bone density screening.

"Put it on your calendar because it's coming up fast," said Goodwin.

"Dealing with the people of the town and working with the public is by far the best part of the job," said Goodwin.

One of the challenges of her job is keeping up to speed in emergency management. Over the past few years, plans have been put in place in the event of dozens of different disasters from a pandemic flu to a hurricane. There are state, region and town plans.

This coming Tuesday, July 29 a presentation put on by the regional emergency management group, "Home Preparedness 101," will be given from 10a.m. to noon in the Town Hall lower meeting room on how residents can get ready for a emergency.

Getting to know and maintaining the extensive response and action plans Goodwin names as one of the challenges of her job because of their complexity and need for thoroughness.

"It's hard to prepare for emergencies because there are so many unknowns," said Goodwin.

Goodwin does a lot of work with the senior citizens of the community. She hosts monthly "keep well" clinics at the Harborview apartments at 60 Elm St. (the fourth Thursday of every month) and the Senior Center (the second Thursday of every month).

While the public health nurse used to receive and distribute all the vaccines for Cohasset doctors, both pediatricians and general practice, now the doctors deal directly with the state and vaccines are delivered to their door. Some vaccines, like tetanus and flu shots, are still distributed from her office.

Yet, Goodwin still must maintain communication with doctors in town. She follows up on all reports from doctors and hospitals about communicable diseases found in Cohasset (gastrointestinal, strep, pneumonia, lyme disease, hepatitis etc.), while maintaining the confidentiality of the patient.

All in all, Goodwin is enjoying her new position and the variety it offers.

"In a single day I deal with all kinds of issues…I like it," said Goodwin.

Public Health nurse Mary Goodwin can be reached at by phone at 781-383-2210 or by e-mail at mgoodwin@townofcohasset.org. Office hours are Monday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8:30 to 11a.m.

Student key in daytime solar tube installation

Jack Buckley, president of the Center for Student Coastal Research, announced recently the upcoming installation of daytime solar tubes at the Parker Avenue facility. This breakthrough technology will greatly reduce the need for standard lighting in the conference room that houses meeting space, computers and lab instruments. The tubes reflect sunlight into the building causing significantly less reliance on electricity.

"The tunnels will greatly reduce the electric bills for CSCR, Buckley said." "The innovation will also add to Cohasset's growing reputation as an early adopter of green technology. But the most important characteristic of this small green project is that it was conceived, nurtured and executed entirely by a student – Evan Deutsch."

Evan Deutsch, a Class of 2008 CHS graduate, proposed the project after seeing the concept work effectively at a test site in Maine. Buckley and CHS science teacher David Magnussen both backed Deutsch as he pushed the project over a 10-month period through the stages of design selection, approval by Town Manager Bill Griffin, and selection of local contractor Robert Gledhill for installation.

To fully complete the project, Deutsch has calculated that CSCR will need to raise approximately $2,000. The nonprofit organization will gladly accept tax-deductible donations to support material and installation costs. Checks can be made payable to CSCR and mailed to Buckley at the Parker Avenue building.

Each tube, 13 inches in diameter, extends from the roof to the ceiling below. An opaque dome on the rooftop captures the sunlight while keeping out rain and snow. The light then travels through the reflective tubing until it casts an ambient light throughout the room below.

"Even on a very bright day in the middle of the afternoon, lights are often needed in the conference room," said Buckley. "It will be great to work in natural light, and the sun pipes will be one more example that illustrates the significant improvements that a dedicated and motivated student can make in our community."

OPINION

Polling data

In the political arena, we are certainly a nation of polls. One cannot turn on a news channel without being told about the latest poll on the presumptive presidential nominees for their respective parties, Sen. Barack Obama and Sen. John McCain.

We can honestly say that we do not pay that much attention to those polls, which seem to be changing daily.

However, here at the Cohasset Mariner, we have the ability to conduct polls through our Web site: www.wickedlocal.com/Cohasset

It is a relatively new tool for us.

We have conducted two polls so far.

The first asked visitors to our web site what police should do to curb jumping off the Border Street bridge.

Following up on a story about the problem with dog waste on Sandy Beach, last week we asked our Web visitors why people do not pick up after their dogs.

Admittedly we are new at "polling" and have received some feedback about our poll "voting options." For example, in the bridge jumping poll, readers let us know we did not include options "none of the above," "bridge jumping is OK," or "bridge jumping is a non-issue."

Reacting to that feedback, we may have over compensated last week and included too many options in our "dog-doo" poll. Results were "all over the map." And some readers let us know the poll was biased because 80 percent of people do pick up after their dogs.

We welcome the feedback and suggestions for more polls.

This week we are asking your opinions on the plans to renovate the old part of Town Hall (see box below).

So far, our "dog-doo" poll has received 85 votes as follows:

"Dog doo has been a problem on Sandy Beach and other areas around Cohasset. Why don't people pick up after their dogs?"

- Ignorance about the pollution and health hazards caused by dog waste (14 votes or 16.47 percent)
- Not enough Mutt Mitt dispensers around town (3 votes or 3.53 percent)
- Forget to bring plastic bags on walks (11 votes or 12.94 percent)
- Lack of enforcement by authorities (17 votes or 20 percent)
- Desire to keep other walkers treading carefully (1 vote or 1.18 percent)
- Their dog is out of sight (and out of mind) as he/she does his/her business (13 votes or 15.29 percent)
- Belief that dogs should have the same rights as wild animals (2 votes or 2.35 percent)
- All of the above (15 votes or 17.65 percent).
- None of the above (9 votes or 10.59 percent).

These polls are not meant to be scientific. They just provide a quick snapshot of some readers' opinions. Please email editor, Mary Ford, at mford@cnc.com with suggestions.

Join the debate and take our on line poll!

Support for tennis benefit appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit Committee would like to thank those who made last weekend's tennis tournament a great success for Children's Hospital. The tournament would not have been possible without the gracious hospitality of those who donated use of their spectacular tennis courts. For that we thank Leah and Peter Roy, Ellen Roy and Bruce Herzfelder, Jane and Gary Vanderweil, Laura and Todd DeSisto, Whit and John Leffel, Marita and Joel Carpenter, Carol and Paul Davis, Susan and Dennis Meikleham, Debbie Thaxter, Diane Johnston, Patsy and George Rabstejnek, Sue and Paul McHugh, Leila and Brian Hill, Genevre and Charles Higginson, Pat and Richard Chute, Ruth and Whit Knapp, Esther Williams, Amy and Shapur Naimi, Jane and Peter Goedecke, and Annellen and Jim Walsh.

Interfaith service of Memory and Solidarity

By the Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Sunday morning, July 27, amid a children's musical performance at the Tennessee Valley Unitarian Universalist Church in Knoxville, a man with a shotgun, bent on violence toward "liberals," entered the sanctuary and opened fire.

In the aftermath of the violence targeting a Unitarian Universalist church in Knoxville, Tennessee this past Sunday, four Unitarian Universalist congregations on the South Shore will host a Service of Memory and Solidarity this Friday evening at 7 p.m. in the Meeting House of First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset. Children are welcome. The larger community is invited. Invitations have been sent to the other religious bodies in Cohasset.

Sunday morning, July 27, amid a children's musical performance at the Tennessee Valley Unitarian Universalist Church in Knoxville, a man with a shotgun, bent on violence toward "liberals," entered the sanctuary and opened fire. Two are dead; six are critically wounded. One of the dead was an usher at the church who courageously placed himself between the gunman and the congregation. The other is a member of the nearby Westfield Unitarian Universalist Fellowship, a woman who was there to enjoy the children's performance. Rev. Bill Sinkford, Unitarian Universalist Association President, traveled immediately to Knoxville, met with congregants and led a service there this past Tuesday evening. Members of the Unitarian Universalist Trauma Response Ministry are on site.

The Friday evening service is sponsored by four area Unitarian Universalist congregations: First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset, First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Norwell, First Parish (Old Ship) in Hingham, and Second Parish Unitarian Universalist in Hingham.

Our hearts break at this outpouring of hate directed toward a religious community for the values and principles of their faith. Our hearts open to people of faith who are hurting profoundly and moving through grief and trauma. When violence strikes any religious community, it strikes us all. This is a time to be together in the spirit of love and peace that gives hope to us all.

The Rev. Jan Carlsson-Bull is pastor of First Parish, Cohasset.

Traffic detours ahead for Beach St.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Little Harbor Project – This week we received additional information about the next steps for the Project. There are two culverts that need to be replaced under Beach Street. A large culvert near Atlantic Avenue is a major project, which will require Beach Street to be closed during construction. The large culvert must be constructed during the dry season according to the Project's environmental permit. That time of year is here, so here comes the construction. Due to the road closure, parts of Beach Street will be accessible only from the Common area or Atlantic Avenue. The other culvert is much smaller can be installed at the Project's convenience, since it requires that only one-half of the road to be closed at a time. Consequently, traffic will be able to continue on Beach Street when this culvert is installed.

During the month of August, other changes will begin on North Main Street and the Common area. Starting around mid-month the Little Harbor Project will start installing temporary water lines on N. Main Street and around the Common area. These temporary lines are necessary since this project will totally replace the water lines on N. Main Street from Green Street to Depot Court as well as those on Highland Avenue. These temporary lines, which will serve all buildings and fire service, will be located on the residential side of the respective streets, not on the Common, itself.

Immediately after Labor Day, work will start with water and sewer lines running approximately from Red Gate Lane to Depot Court on Main Street and Highland Avenue. Current plans, call for the Beach Street culvert to be completed before digging starts on Main Street. This is essential for emergency vehicle access during work on N. Main Street. We have already been in contact with the Farmer's Market organization, since they might want to relocate their operation during construction. It is expected that the water and sewer work will be completed before winter so that the roads can receive their base coat of paving before the asphalt plants close for the season. It also allows the roads to be better maintained during the winter.

A meeting has been set up for all of the residents of the area, as is the custom, before the project starts and is scheduled for Saturday, Aug.16th at 10 a.m. at Town Hall. This will give everyone a chance to ask any questions and get an understanding of what will be happening and how long it will take.

Engineers study wall collapse.

Jerusalem Road surprise – This past Monday we were greeted by a small problem on Jerusalem Road between Steep Rocks and Bow Street, but on the opposite side of the road. It seems that after the pipes were laid and the trench was backfilled, the rains last weekend destabilized the road and caused a small section of stonewall to collapse.

LM Holdings is currently repairing the stonewall to provide additional support for the road in this area. The fact that the sewer trench area was paved this week also has added to the roadway stability. You may notice that traffic will be a bit restricted in this area to keep it a safe a distance from the wall. Please be careful when driving in this area.

Greenbush stuff – After we spent quite a few words extolling the virtues of the new bike path into Wompatuck Park, we now find out that the path does not go into Wompatuck, just yet. Consequently, we have a bit of egg on our faces! Apparently, there are some environmental issues on the Wompatuck side of the path that are of concern to the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR). This is due to some lingering issues created when this was an active ammunition depot. There is a closed gate at the end of the bike path barring entrance to the balance of the park. DCR has told us that they have a group actively working on how to get from our new path into the balance of the park. We'll keep you posted when we find more information.

We get continuing questions about the new bike path from the Greenbush Station into Wompatuck. Several residents have asked us about parking in the Greenbush lot in order to use the bike/walking path. If you use the lot Monday through Friday, you must pay at one of the self-pay kiosks. On weekends there is no charge to park in the Greenbush lot.

This Bud's not for you

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Let me make one thing perfectly clear . . .

I have never been a fan of Budweiser beer, despite the best faux nostalgic efforts of the Clydesdales or the commercial pleas of Ed McMahon or even the blandishments of the talking frogs at half time in the Super Bowl.

In the opinion of my taste buds, it just wasn't good beer.

As one who had his first drink in a back booth at Joe Bardetti's bar on Pearl Street at the age of … well, let's forget that; statute of limitations you know … if I were given a choice of a Bud or Gatorade, I'd have to give it serious thought.

But that was then and this is now and I have given up beer as well as the 6-to-1 martini since realizing that, in the words of Ernest Hemingway, "they mount swiftly to my head." Hell, after 60-odd years, even golfers hang them up.

Nevertheless, I had a feeling of loss the other day when I learned that Anheuser Busch had sold the Budweiser name and all that went with it, Clydesdales, talking frogs, everything, to a Belgian beverage conglomerate.

Say what you will about the quality of the brew, but Budweiser has long ago joined apple pie and motherhood as symbols of the American way, and its sale is a little like selling the Red Sox to the Bavarian Motor Works.

The Belgians pledged to keep the same American crew brewing and bottling Budweiser in St. Louis, even though they could introduce enough European innovations to make it drinkable to sensitive palates.

I don't know if Busch still bottles and brews Bud at a branch brewery in Merrimack, New Hampshire, but I don't think it did sales much good when word got out it was made with Merrimack River water.

My last beer of choice was a tasty, full-bodied imported Dutch brew called Grolsch, although the German beer Beck's was an adequate substitute more readily available in American restaurants.

Best of all was Amstel, another Dutch beer I once sampled in Amsterdam since it is available only on the European continent. You can imagine my delight when I found it on sale in a Weymouth packie only to have my hopes dashed when it turned out to be Amstel Light.

A few years ago, a writer of my acquaintance, Merilyn de Vos, was making her annual trip to Europe and she asked me if she could bring me back a little something. I opted for a six-pack of Amstel. I got one bottle.

She bought the six-pack, she told me, but three of the bottles got misplaced. She arrived at Amsterdam airport with the three that were left. There, she found her luggage overweight by the equivalent of two bottles.

So, right in the middle of Amsterdam International Airport at 8 o'clock in the morning, Merilyn sat down and drank two bottles of warm Amstel beer rather than let it go to waste.

Like I say, I got one bottle. It wasn't as good as I remembered.

HEALTH NOTES

Car exhaust is no idle matter

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Board of Health is upset about the way we're treating our idle time. Specifically, we're worried about some of the habits we've adopted when we're behind the wheel of our cars. Despite the fact that we're all curtailing their use, getting about by other means, we still retain some curious habits from the time gas was a less expensive commodity. Among the worst is idling. The American Lung association, with whom the Board partners in being upset about idling, has initiated a campaign called "Idle Free – you hold the key to cleaner air." Here's their list to save fuel and improve the atmosphere (while reducing your child's risk of contracting asthma):

- Reduce warm-up idling. Start driving after no more than 30 seconds of idling even in freezing temperatures, assuming your vehicle's windows are clear.
- If you are going to be stopped for more than 10 seconds (except in traffic), turn off your engine. Idling your vehicle for longer than 10 seconds uses more fuel than it would take to restart the vehicle.
- Avoid using a remote vehicle starter. This device encourages you to start your vehicle before you are ready to leave, which means wasteful idling.
- In temperatures below 32°F, use a block heater to warm the engine before you start your vehicle. This will improve fuel efficiency and reduce exhaust emissions.
- Talk to your family, friends and neighbors about the benefits of reduced idling. Encourage them to join you in saving money, protecting the environment and contributing to a healthier community, Events in Cohasset have created an environment particularly bad for lungs. Aside from cost, vehicle fumes are unhealthy and particularly dangerous to young growing lungs of children. Since early spring, the town has been covered by a cloud of dust and emissions from heavy equipment in the largest public works activity in our history. Despite the fact that the prime contractor for this $20 million renovation of our infrastructure has exercised considerable vigilance by preventing vehicles from idling for more than five minutes when not moving (Fines can be as much as $500 per offense), still we see cars all over Town idling waiting for a pickup, high speed starts, violations of speed signs, etc., all symptoms of wasting energy. About a year ago, a friend told me that this country needs a 100 percent gas tax. to solve the transportation problem. People would have to conserve. Well, he got his wish and we're in the midst of learning how.

As a result of the increased price of fuel, the actual fuel efficiency of motor vehicles has improved and the amount of fuel used per vehicle has been reduced. The high price of a tank of gas has been with us only a short time and yet the public is not slow to adapt to the new conditions. People are driving less, and using more public transportation. Perhaps the movement toward better pedestrian routes and bike paths will also have an up tic by permitting those inclined, including our children, to exercise more by walking. And, there's always the train. Everywhere we look, incentives are appearing to lessen the dependency on oil.

Since there is no national policy on conservation of oil, it's up to each of us to figure out how to conserve the stuff. We at the Board of Health worry about the effect of trace contaminants — in our water, in the air and on the surfaces that we touch. It isn't as if we're clean freaks, but it's always good to be aware. So, one of the things we are considering is to develop a system whereby we can identify hot spots of unhealthy conditions. An example is uncovered dumpsters where rodents are likely to gather – and idling when cars are picking up their children is really dumb. But other, subtler factors may merit investigation; for example would it be possible to map the sites where levels of diesel fumes are highest or where children might be most affected? – using instrumentation already available, simple and easy to use. What about, for example, areas near the train tracks, or where parking school busses are idling? We'd be helping the environment as well as saving fuel. Maybe, we'll see.

And while we're on this self-improvement kick, can we do something about talking and texting on cell phones while driving. Multitasking may be OK, but – in cars?

KING STREET FLOCK

COURTESY PHOTO

In Hingham pink flamingos are turning up in people's front yards all over town. It is a fundraiser by the Hingham Gridiron Club and folks, who have been flocked, have to pay to have them removed! Here in Cohasset, it's the real thing. Flocks of turkeys are roaming around town. They usually leave on their own but provide a wonderful sight for the homeowners lucky enough to get a visit.

Time to stop idling around

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

I am hopeful that as the price of gas keeps rising, that more of us will become increasingly aware of the wastefulness of unnecessary idling.

Imagine being able to save nearly $250 annually just by changing a single habit for five minutes a day.

Automobile engine idling: it's long been a pet peeve of mine, but more importantly to you, it's an incredible waste of gas. Americans waste 3.8 million gallons of gas every day through idling.

Some idling is unavoidable, for instance, if you're stuck in traffic on the Southeast Expressway, or if you need to defrost your car windows on a cold day. But too often I see cars left idling outside of convenience stores, or while someone is charging a cell phone.

Some of us leave our engines idling due to outdated thinking. Modern engines don't need to "warm up" for more than 30 seconds before driving as they did back when I was fixing them for a living. Batteries don't drain nearly as quickly as they used to. And drivers actually waste more gasoline if they leave their cars idling for more than 10 seconds, than if they turned the engine off, and started it up again.

A recent study shows that families could save between $113 and $241 annually in gas costs, depending on the size of the car, if they just reduced idling time by five minutes a day.

One easy avenue for some parents may be to start turning car engines off while waiting outside of schools, churches, or ballfields.

In fact, it soon may be illegal for anyone – bus drivers included – to idle on school grounds. The Senate recently approved a bill that I co-sponsored that would prohibit the idling of car engines on school property as of Aug. 1, 2009.

Every school day, more than 9,000 school buses and 770 school vehicles start up and transport nearly 750,000 children to school in Massachusetts. Buses left idling can waste 1.35 million gallons of gasoline annually, at a cost to taxpayers of more than $4 million.

Aside from the financial benefits, eliminating idling will also prevent the emission of thousands of tons of diesel fumes onto school playgrounds, into school ventilation systems, or into the buses themselves.

The millions of tons of exhaust that our vehicles emit every year fill the air we breathe with harmful gases and particulates. Direct links have been shown between poor air quality and the frequency of severe respiratory ailments, such as asthma.

Obviously there's nothing wrong with idling a car in order to keep the heat on during the winter. But I am hopeful that as the price of gas keeps rising, that more of us will become increasingly aware of the wastefulness of unnecessary idling.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Hingham.

House passes Environmental Bond Bill

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D – Hingham, announces funding for three local projects in the Town of Cohasset totaling $4.65 million. The funding was included, at the request of Bradley, in the recently passed Environmental Bond Bill.

The projects include:

• $4 million to create upstream retention of storm water to reduce flooding to Jacobs Meadow and Cohasset Village.

• $600,000 for the rehabilitation of the Jacobs Meadow outfall channel wall.

• $50,000 to re-establish and increase tidal flow through the enlargement of the Parker Avenue and Border Street culvert.

In addition to these projects, Bradley was able to extend the funding for the Water Pollution Abatement Trust Grandfathered Drinking Water Contract that directly affects thousands of ratepayers in 22 different water districts throughout the state, including North Cohasset. This funding was stopped in February because it was originally established for 10 years. The language in the bill continues the funding for another 10 years.

"These projects are all of great importance to Cohasset and I thank House Ways and Means Chairman Bob DeLeo for recognizing that and including them in the final bill." said Bradley "Furthermore, I am very pleased that the funding for the drinking water contract has a chance to continue. This will save Cohasset taxpayers money in these tight economic times. The bill still needs to pass the Senate, and be authorized and signed by Gov. Patrick as well. The Governor can only authorize about half of the projects in the bill under the state bond cap."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on five roll calls and local senators' votes on three roll calls from the week of July 21-25.

TWO-DAY SALES TAX HOLIDAY IN AUGUST (H 4995)

House, 140-15, Senate 31-6, approved and sent to Governor Deval Patrick a bill allowing consumers to buy most products that cost under $2,500 on Saturday, August 16 and Sunday, August 17 without paying the state's five percent sales tax. Supporters of the bill said that the holiday would boost retail sales and noted that consumers over the past four years have saved millions of dollars during similar tax-free holidays. They argued that the state's sales tax revenue loss would be offset by increased revenue from the meals and gas tax revenue generated by shoppers on those two days. Some opponents of the bill said that the holiday actually generates little additional revenue for stores because consumers would buy the products even without the tax-free days. They said that the Legislature should be looking at broader, deeper tax relief for individuals and businesses and not a tiny tax-free holiday. Others said that legislators should not vote for this tax holiday when they have not yet restored all the local aid, education and other program cuts made over the past few years. The House in April had overwhelmingly rejected a similar proposal on a 20-134 roll call. At that time, some opponents argued that establishing the holiday too far in advance would hurt sales over the next four months because consumers would delay big purchases until August. The Senate roll call from last week is listed. Both House roll calls are listed. The first is from April and the second is from last week. (A "Yes" vote is for the tax-free holiday. A "No" vote is against the tax-free holiday).

ALLOW DIFFERENT RATES BASED ON GENDER (H 949)

House 96-57, approved a bill that would allow Savings Bank Life Insurance (SBLI) to charge different rates based on a policyholder's gender. Current law prohibits this practice by SBLI. Supporters of the bill said that SBLI is at an unfair competitive disadvantage because companies that sell other types of life insurance policies in Massachusetts are allowed to charge different rates based on gender. They argued that SBLI's gender neutral policies are not cost effective for women in this state and in fact cost women more than if gender was allowed to be used. Opponents of the bill said that it is outrageous for the House to turn the clocks back hundreds of years by repealing a law that prohibits discrimination against women. They noted that the way to eliminate the competitive advantage that non-SBLI companies have is to prohibit all life insurance companies from discriminating against women. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill allowing SBLI to charge different rates based on a policyholder's gender. A "No" vote is against the bill).

PROHIBIT DIFFERENT RATES BASED ON GENDER (H 949)

House 56-97, rejected a proposal prohibiting all insurance companies from charging different rates on the basis of gender. Supporters of the proposal said that it is time to wipe out current law that violates civil rights and gender equality by allowing some insurance companies to discriminate against women and charge them higher rates. They noted that women should be included under the current law that prohibits discrimination based on race and religion. Some opponents of the proposal said that that prohibiting rates based on gender would actually hurt women and cost them more money. Others argued that this is a national issue that should be addressed at the federal level. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill prohibiting all insurance companies from charging different rates on the basis of gender. A "No" vote is against the bill).

BAN GENDER-BASED ANNUITIES (S 2729)

House 115-37, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a bill prohibiting insurance companies from using gender as a factor in the sale and payout of an annuity policy. Supporters of the bill said that it is unfair that men and women purchase annuities at the same price but women receive a lower monthly payout. They argued that it is time to guarantee equal rights for women and prohibit this type of blatant gender discrimination. Opponents of the bill said that this is not an equal rights issue but simply a consumer one based on the fact that women generally live longer than men. They noted that women may receive a lower monthly payout but their lifetime payout is in most cases equal to or more than a man's lifetime one. (A "Yes" vote is for making annuities gender-neutral. A "No" vote is against making them gender-neutral).

MAKE INFORMATION ON FILM TAX CREDITS AVAILABLE TO PUBLIC (H 4874)

House 52-101, rejected an amendment to a bill that would offer tax credits to film companies that build permanent studios in Massachusetts. The bill itself was approved on a voice vote without a roll call. The amendment would require that the names and information about the companies that receive the tax credits and the amount of each tax credit be a public record. Amendment supporters said that the public has a right to see who is receiving these tax credits and how much they receive. They noted that the Providence Journal checked out which companies were receiving film tax breaks in Rode Island and found out that only $1.9 million went to companies from Rhode Island while $9.1 million went to out of state companies that employ out of state workers. Many supporters of the amendment also opposed the tax credits and argued that Massachusetts taxpayers, not wealthy movie studios, should be offered tax relief. Amendment opponents said that the amendment goes too far and would actually violate the state's public record laws. They argued that this anti-business amendment would set a bad precedent and lead to proposals to make individual and other business tax records available to the public. (A "Yes" vote is for the amendment requiring that the records be made public. A "No" vote is against the amendment).

PERMANENT SALES TAX HOLIDAY (H 4995)

Senate 5-32, rejected an amendment establishing a permanent annual two-day sales tax holiday in August. The Department of Revenue would choose the dates of the holiday and announce them by July 15 each year. Amendment supporters said that it is time to make this successful holiday a permanent one and noted that similar tax-free holidays over the past four years have helped both shoppers and consumers. They noted that a permanent holiday would give consumers the opportunity to plan purchases in advance and not have to sit around each year and see if the Legislature decides to approve a holiday. Amendment opponents said that it is fiscally irresponsible to approve a permanent holiday without regard to the economic situation of the state during a specific year. They argued that the Legislature should look at the state's economy and decide one year at a time whether the state can afford a sales tax holiday. Some noted that a permanent holiday would hurt year-round retail sales because many consumers would hold off until August to make big purchases. (A "Yes" vote is for establishing a permanent annual two-day sales tax holiday in August. A "No" vote is against establishing it).

TAX DEDUCTION FOR WINTER HEATING COSTS (H 4995)

Senate 9-28, rejected an amendment providing tax relief to consumers who will face the skyrocketing price of heating their homes this winter. The amendment allows up to an $800 tax deduction for the winter purchase of home heating oil and natural gas by individuals who earn less than $50,000 per year and families that earn less than $75,000. The deduction was approved by the Legislature in 2005 but only applied to that year's winter and has not been renewed since. Amendment supporters said that this would help millions of families deal with the skyrocketing cost of heating their homes and argued that without this tax relief, many people would have to choose between heating their homes and buying food. They noted that it helped more than 900,000 families in 2005 and cost only $27 million. Some amendment opponents said that the state cannot afford the revenue loss that the tax deduction would cause. Others said they agree that many consumers need help with heating their homes this winter but argued that the help should be in the form of direct assistance rather than tax deductions. The Senate defeated a similar proposal in January on a 7-31 roll call. Both roll calls are listed. The first vote is on the January roll call. The second vote is on last week's roll call. (A "Yes" vote is for the tax deduction. A "No" vote is against the tax deduction).

This photo shows the Cat Dam gates in the "closed" position. Neighbors in the area disagree on how much flushing should be allowed through the dam, which is town-owned.

Cat Dam study needed

ConComm requires notice of intent; money is an issue

The opening and closing of Cat Dam on Nichols Road has been under close scrutiny for the past year. Neighbors in the area disagree on how much flushing should be allowed through the dam, which is town-owned. The Conservation Commission recently got involved and the hope is the question of the operational schedule at Cat Dam will be settled once and for all.

The Past

The operational schedule of Cat Dam has been the topic of much discussion before the Board of Selectmen over the past year. The town-owned dam has historically been operated and maintained by the residents of the neighborhood of inner Little Harbor, which includes homes on Nichols Road, Jerusalem Road and Little Harbor Road.

The issue had two distinct sides, with one side advocating for increased flushing and the other pushing for the schedule to stay much the same as it has been for years. To resolve the issue, Selectmen appointed a resident committee consisting of representatives from both sides of the issue. Before Selectmen could approve the schedule they developed, it was changed. The change triggered a hearing before the Conservation Commission.

The Present

After several meeting with residents, concerned citizens and state officials regarding the status of Cat Dam, the Conservation Commission has determined the Town of Cohasset needs to submit a Notice of Intent for the operation, maintenance and tidal gate schedule for the town-owned dam.

The Conservation Commission said there were several reasons why there needs to be a notice of intent filed. Before any tidal gate schedule is changed there must be a filing under the Wetland Protection act and Conservation Commission regulations. An operation and maintenance schedule does not exist, putting the town at risk from state and federal agencies. Lastly, the observational evidence of Inner Little Harbor are symptoms of a greater water quality problem that needs to be addressed.

The Future

In order to complete the notice of intent filing, the town must hire a consulting engineer, among other things.

"Money is going to be a factor," said Griffin at the July 21 Selectmen's meeting and advised it may take more than two months (the time allotted by the Conservation Commission to hire the professionals) to secure funding and solicit a request for proposals.

An estimate as to the cost of the requirements for the notice of intent is still being worked out. In an e-mail, Griffin said he is working on determining how much information and testing data already exists that can be provided to the consultant rather than having to have the consultant develop that information or data from scratch.

'Old' Bates House has new quarters

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The first new apartments in the village in quite some time are now available for rent. The apartments are a part of the completely renovated 1811 Samuel Bates House at 35 South Main Street. Although residences have nearly always been a part of the property, current property owner Wayne Sawchuk gutted the building that is now the home of Carmela Drew Fine Foods and Accessories and Bia Bistro.

"The two units have been completely renovated with everything new, including granite counters, cabinetry, bathrooms, and new windows, roof and chimney," said Sawchuk. The apartments are each two bedroom, two bathroom units. One unit is 1400 square feet on a single level with a home office, fireplace and small deck overlooking the village. The second unit is 1700 square feet split between two floors with a large deck off the kitchen/dining room.

The apartments are the last phase of work that started nearly two years ago. The addition of Carmela Drew, interior expansion of Bia Bistro and the outdoor patio were also part of the renovation.

Sawchuk, who has developed the property under the name of Cohasset Village Partners, LLC, is holding an open house for the apartments this Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. According to the apartment's online listing on Craig's List, the rent is $2,495 per month.

Sawchuk is now looking to improve the rear of the property. Developing the property facing the town parking lot is one of the objectives of the re-vamped village zoning bylaws passed at the 2007 fall special Town Meeting.

"We'll be adding landscaping and will be preparing plans for two new mixed-use buildings to face the parking area, with a landscaped courtyard behind the new and existing buildings, and a new community walkway connecting the Town Parking Lot with South Main Street, between Carmela Drew's and Atlantic Bagel," said Sawchuk.

Teague, Flibotte, Bowdoin bound this fall

McKenna Teague will head to Bowdoin College in the fall to play field hockey and lacrosse.

Star athletes look to make good first impressions on top Division 3 program

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

There will not be a lack of Polar Bears from Cohasset in the great state of Maine this upcoming school year.

Both McKenna Teague and Mark Flibotte will be attending Bowdoin College in Brunswick, ME, this fall to play sports. Teague will make her debut on the field hockey and lacrosse teams, while Flibotte will bring his game to the lacrosse field.

Both athletes left their mark at the respective high school programs they played for. Teague leaves Notre Dame in Hingham as the school's all-time leading scorer in lacrosse with 250 career points. Flibotte did the same at Cohasset High School, where he scored a record 352 points while earning US Lacrosse All-American honors twice.

McKenna Teague

Teague wanted to play two sports in college and D-3, she decided, would be her route.

"It is going to be tough but I will have the winter off," Teague said. "Both [field hockey and lacrosse] coaches support it."

Teague could have gone Division 1 in field hockey and was recruited by Lafayette, but decided that Bowdoin was her best option. To get ready for the grueling pace, Teague is lifting three days a week this summer at Body Studio in downtown Cohasset. She is also on a college prep running program.

Teague, who is just fine juggling a number of duties, is also a camp counselor at Black Rock in Hingham and a server at the Dell's Lemonade stand in Cohasset.

Adding pressure to what should be an exciting first few weeks of college, the Polar Bears are the reigning D-3 National Champions in field hockey.

"It adds pressure, yea," Teague said. "I talked with a lot of the players at the overnight. Coach Nicky [Pearson] is intense but friendly. It's going to work out, I'm sure."

Teague's goals for this season are actually pretty singular in nature—get a goal.

"I'd like to get some playing time and go into the [field hockey] season in shape," she said. "I want to score one goal, that is all I want."

And in lacrosse?

"Yea, pretty much the same thing."

Mark Flibotte

Flibotte got back from the National High School Senior Showcase at Benedictine University in Chicago in the end of June, where he helped the North topple the East 15-14 in overtime to capture the championship game. Flibotte scored three goals in the first game and

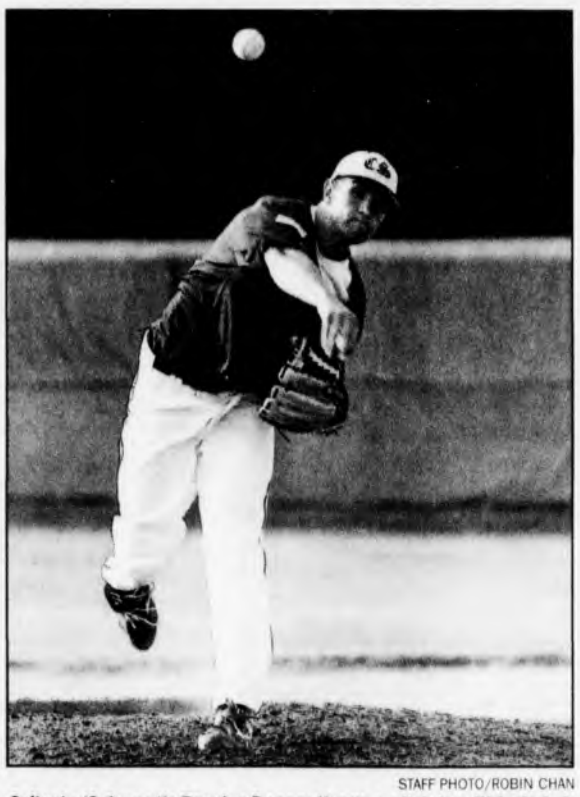
Post 118 talented when together

Legion team should return nice core for next summer



By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

Cohasset really made up the bulk of the Cohasset/Scituate Legion baseball team this season. From the Doonan brothers to Tommy Chase and Brian Hill, much of the pop at the plate, on the mound, and in the field came from the fella's who live north on 3A.

Sam DeGiacomo, Ken Muir, John Cavanaro, Robbie McCunney, Dave Snowdale, Kyle Pinkus...Cohasset kids, made up the strength of this team. A lot of the success this summer stemmed from the Cohasset High baseball team making the tourney for the first time since the Clinton administration, and the BC High team that won the state tile.

A good portion will be eligible to come back to the playoff team; according to coach Greg Taylor and general manager Scott Arnold, Tommy Chase, Tim McGrath, Brian Hill, Kyle Pinkus and Marcus Joyce have played their final Legion games for Post 118.

"We have a very good starting roster for next year's team," Arnold said. "We are very enthusiastic to build with these guys."

Scituate/Cohasset's Brendan Doonan throws a pitch to a Walpole batter in the top of the third inning of their game Tuesday.

Post 118 had all the talent in the world to make the District 6 East playoffs. The fact that they barely made it can be chalked up to usual Legion problems—summertime stuff. Either way, the boys got in for the first time in four seasons; only to lose to undefeated Walpole twice in a best two-out-of-three series.

"We had an up and down season," Arnold said. "We were a lot stronger than our record showed. Everybody working and rushing to games was our downfall. We lost to a lot of teams we should have beaten."

Jackson helps sail Windfall to first place

In an exciting finish to the 2008 Stone Horse Builder's Cup Race sponsored by Edey & Duff of Mattapoisett, the top three Stone Horses were within two boat lengths with only a bow sprit, about 4 feet, separating the top two boats, Windfall and Young America.

Windfall, sailed by Tom Kenney of the New Bedford Yacht Club and G. Robert "Bob" Jackson of Woodland Drive in Cohasset, took 1st Place, edging out 2nd Place finisher Bob Sachetti of Boston, who was single handing Young America. In third place was Pegasus, owned by Edey & Duff and captained by Dan Rowe of Mattapoisett with a crew of three.

Bob Sachetti in Young America was first over the starting line followed by Pegasus and Bewitched, skippered by Tom Browne of Woods Hole. Young America held the lead for the first two legs followed closely by Pegasus. A slow starting Windfall advanced into 3rd Place by the end of the one in the championship.

After working at Prime Time Lacrosse Camp at Babson College as a councilor, the former Skipper star is "playing here in there."

CHS coach Stew Curran and Bowdoin coach Tom McCabe are good friends. "Stew had only good things to say about [coach] McCabe," Flibotte said.

Flibotte understands that the D-3 schedule is a year-round deal.

"I'm working out a lot this summer. I've go to get bigger and faster," he said. "I also have to work on my shooting and stick skills, the college game is much faster."

Teague leaves Notre Dame in Hingham as the school's all-time leading scorer in lacrosse with 250 career points. Flibotte did the same at Cohasset High School, where he scored a record 352 points while earning US Lacrosse All-American honors twice.

Last year Bowdoin made the NCAA's where they lost to Middlebury. The Polar Bears also made the NESCAC Finals, where they fell to Williams. Flibotte hopes the team continues its success.

"I want to get a good amount of playing time," he said. "And hopefully we have a successful season."

Cohasset run ends in slugfest loss

Williamsport all-star teams made strides during tourney

Cohasset's Williamsport all-star Little League team ended its tournament run at the hands of Stoughton at Braintree's Hollingsworth Fields last week. Stoughton started the scoring binge in the first, with a solo home run. In the bottom of the first, Cohasset's Liam Burke answered with his second home run of the tournament, and knotted the score at 1-1.

Stoughton scored three more over the second and third frames, and Cohasset entered the bottom of the third trailing 4-1. In the bottom of the third, Max Montgomery worked his way on with a walk, and Terrence Doonan and Brendan O'Connell followed with singles.

With two outs and the bases loaded, Mickey Barry drew a walk to plate one, and Cohasset cut Stoughton's lead to 4-2. Cohasset's Jack Kuppens then strode to the plate, and promptly blasted a grand slam to center field. After three, Cohasset now led 6-4. Kuppens retired the Stoughton nine in the top of the fourth, and Cohasset plated another run in the bottom of the inning, sparked by base hits from Chris Haggerty and Tom Gilliatt, and Cohasset led 7-4 after four.

In the fifth, Stoughton rallied, as its number three hitter blasted his second home run of the game, and Stoughton took a 10-7 lead.

But the Boys in Blue rallied again in the bottom of the fifth, as Barry slammed a two run dinger to cut the lead to 10-9, and Tommy Powers blasted a clutch two out, two run home run to vault Cohasset into the lead by one entering the sixth and final frame.

But it was not to be as Stoughton rallied in the sixth with their own grand slam, and held Cohasset at bay in the bottom of the sixth. The final score was Stoughton 15, Cohasset 11.

The boys did Cohasset proud - in a District of twenty-four teams, the team made it to the final six before bowing out. And they wrote a lifetime of memories into one great post-season run. Congratulations to all team members on a great tournament: Mickey Barry, Liam Burke, Chris Cohen, Terence Doonan, Thomas Gilliatt, Chris Haggerty, Jack Kuppens, Ryan McKeon, Max Montgomery, Tommy O'Brien, Brendan O'Connell, Tommy Powers and Tommy Ryan.

first leg.

Pointing higher than the lead boats on the second leg and with right of way on a starboard tack, Windfall rounded the windward mark just ahead of Young America and Pegasus. Windfall held the lead for the entire final leg, though the separation from Young America was never more than a boat length and most often a matter of feet. Bob Sachetti made several attempts to get to windward of Windfall, but Tom Kenney was able to hold him off by the slimmest of margins and squeak out his first win in the Stone Horse Builder's Cup series.

London's West End is theater lover's draw

Frank Scheck
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

There's something about visiting London's West End that stirs excitement even in a theater critic like me who routinely sees hundreds of shows a year in New York.

This year there is even more cause for celebration, as the district celebrates its 100th anniversary.

While the West End, also dubbed "Theatreland," increasingly resembles Broadway with its emphasis on splashy, audience-friendly musicals, there is also a dizzying array of provocative new dramas and imaginative revivals of classic works on display this year, thanks to a highly encouraging commercial and artistic climate.

The scene features musicals, ranging from the homegrown "Billy Elliott," adapted from the hit film and featuring an Elton John score; "The Sound of Music," a revival of Rodgers and Hammerstein's classic; and "Dirty Dancing," based on the sexy 1987 movie; to such Broadway imports as "Jersey Boys," "Hairspray," "Spamalot," "The Lion King" and "Wicked." (In general, tickets for these shows seem to be easier to come by in London than for their U.S. productions.)

One of the most intriguing shows in town is "Brief Encounter," the Kneehigh Theaters' acclaimed multimedia adaptation of the Noel Coward story that inspired the classic David Lean film. It is being performed in the Cinema Haymarket, the very same movie theater where the film premiered more than 60 years ago.

Another to seek out is "Marguerite," now receiving its world premiere at the Haymarket Theatre Royal (where Oscar Wilde's "An Ideal Husband" premiered in 1893). This musical melodrama set in occupied Paris during World War II was co-written by "Les Miserables" creators Alain Boublil and Claude-Michel Schonberg, and features a gorgeous musical score by Michel Legrand.

The West End theaters themselves boast an intimacy and venerable history that lend immeasurable atmosphere (if not necessarily comfortable legroom) to the overall experience.

But the theater scene in London is not limited to these venues. The National Theatre, the sprawling, multi-theater complex on the South Bank of the Thames, could arguably be described as the world's most important single theatrical venue. Highlights of this summer's programming include "Never So Good," a historical drama starring Jeremy Irons as British Prime Minister Harold MacMillan, and "Afterlife," the newest work by Michael Frayn, the award-winning playwright of "Noises Off" and "Copenhagen."

Nearly as important are such famed smaller venues as the Almeida, the Royal Court, the Donmar Warehouse and the Old Vic, the influence of which cannot be overstated. The latter, now under the artistic direction of actor Kevin Spacey, is showcasing a well-received revival of Shaw's "Pygmalion," while the Donmar has a production of the modern classic "The Chalk Garden" starring the beloved British actress Penelope Wilton.

Some of the city's best theatrical experiences are available only in the warmer months. The Open Air Theater in Regent's Park, for instance, is an outdoor showcase for Shakespearean productions. This summer, in addition to such plays as "Twelfth Night" and "Romeo and Juliet," it will be presenting a revival of the musical "Gigi" starring the Oscar-nominated Topol ("Fiddler on the Roof").

Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, an architecturally faithful recreation of the venue in which most of the Bard's plays premiered, is presenting "King Lear" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," among other works. It also offers a wonderful permanent exhibition dealing with the working life of Shakespeare and his contemporaries in London.

As part of its anniversary celebrations, the West End is serving up a series of special events. Of particular note are "Kids Week in the West End" (Aug. 15-29), offering free tickets and various events for children; and "Open Rehearsal" (Sept. 27-Oct. 2), featuring free backstage tours. (For more information, go to www.officiallondontheatre.co.uk/theatreland at 100.)

While the West End has a discount TKTS booth located in busy Leicester Square, you might want to avoid the lines and the hassle by procuring tickets in advance of your trip through companies including Keith Prowse Agency (800-669-8687; www.keithprowse.com). You can also, surprisingly, sometimes buy day-of tickets at the theaters. Regular prices run from about $40 to $120.

There are tours available that showcase the West End itself, the best being "Through the Stage Door," a highly entertaining look at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, the world's oldest operating playhouse. The tour is conducted by actors in costume and constitutes a show all by itself. It's offered twice daily except for Sundays, and at a mere $18 ($14 for kids) it's the best theatrical bargain in town.

Cohasset native soloist at Hatch Shell

Cohasset native and opera singer Meredith Hansen will be one of four featured soloists in a free concert at the Hatch Shell on the Esplanade as part of the Landmarks Festival on the Shell series at 7pm on Wednesday, Aug. 6. Boston Landmarks Orchestra will be accompanying the Boston Lyric Opera (BLO) artists in an open-air performance of highlights from BLO's captivating 2008-2009 Spellbound Season.

Hansen grew up in Cohasset and fondly remembers years of performing in school musicals and singing at church. She attended Cohasset High School (CHS) where she was in the chorus under the direction of Bryan Marks and studied voice with Maureen Hague of Plymouth, starting in the 10th grade. She also played goalie on the field hockey team and swam with the CHS swim team as well as a local team.

The well-rounded student and soprano received her Masters of Music from Boston University in 2002 and has gone on to receive many prestigious awards including first place in the Charles Lynam Competition, the Violetta DuPont Vocal Competition, and the Opera Birmingham Competition. She was honored to be chosen for the Final Rounds of The 45th Annual Francisco Vi-as Singing Concert in Barcelona, Spain and she was a District Winner and Regional Finalist in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Awards. She has performed extensively with opera companies, orchestras, and choral societies throughout the Northeast and beyond.

Hansen is excited to sing at the Hatch Shell with two of Boston's renowned performance companies. "Having grown up here, I am really thrilled to be performing this concert at one of Boston's quintessential musical venues! It's so exciting to have the opportunity to share some of BLO's wonderful upcoming season and I hope that the audience on the 6th will be truly 'Spellbound.'"

The concert's program will highlight BLO's upcoming productions of Offenbach's Les contes d'Hoffmann (The Tales of Hoffmann), Dvoøák's Rusalka, and Mozart's Don Giovanni, all tales of obsessive love and otherworldly fantasy. Unitarian Universalist Assoc. honors South Shore resident

From all 50 states and several foreign countries, 3,000 Unitarian Universalists gathered from June 25 through 29 in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for the 47th annual General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association. One of the highlights for South Shore congregations was the presentation of the President's Award for Volunteer Service by the Unitarian Universalist Association to Eric Kluz, longtime member of First Parish Unitarian Universalist Cohasset and a resident of Scituate. It is an award designated by the UUA President for persons who have offered "extraordinary and vital service to the UUA as volunteers."

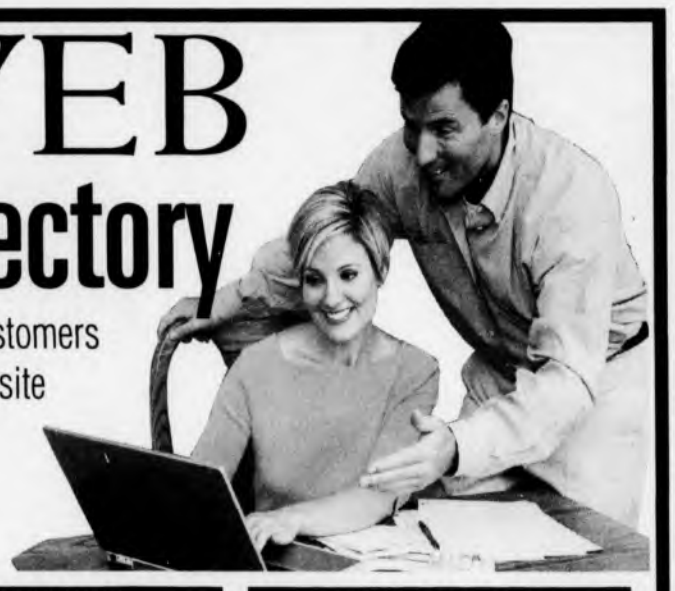
COURTESY PHOTO/HELIO FRED GARCIA

Eric Kluz receives award from UUA President Rev. William Sinkford.

"He embodies a commitment to Unitarian Universalism and to our larger world that draws on our religious belief in the interconnectedness of all life."

— Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, minister of First Parish Unitarian Universalist

In his remarks and engraved on a plaque given to Kluz, the Rev. Sinkford said, "Eric was the president of the Ballou Channing District from 2003 to 2006 and was the national president of the District Presidents Association. At his home congregation, First Parish in Cohasset, Massachusetts, Eric served as president for three years and moderator for six." Sinkford cited Kluz's groundbreaking contributions to green architecture: "In his professional life, Eric is one of the leading green building designers in the country, if not the world. As a practicing architect and a principal in the firm of HKT Architects, Eric's current work is focused primarily in the areas of sustainable design and the environment." Sinkford called attention to a recent lecture given by Kluz at the Tongji University College of Environmental Science and Engineering in Shanghai, China. Titled "Footprints on Black Snow," Kluz traced his environmental consciousness back to his childhood memories of the belching steel mills literally turning the snow black. "Now," remarked Sinkford, "the association is benefiting from that lifelong passion – he has spent the last two years guiding the association along a path toward greening its historic buildings on Beacon Hill in Boston. He has overseen the development of an energy master plan, coordinated the design and planning for a future energy-efficient heating and air-conditioning system for 25 Beacon, and has helped assess the steps necessary to bring the buildings up to LEED certification. The UUA has benefited from countless hours of guidance from one of the leading green design architects in the country, and is deeply grateful that he has done this as a volunteer."



"We are thrilled that Eric received this much deserved recognition," said the Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, minister of First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset. "He embodies a commitment to Unitarian Universalism and to our larger world that draws on our religious belief in the interconnectedness of all life."

The General Assembly of the UUA concluded its five-day meeting by adopting resolutions on a broad slate of social justice issues, with six resolutions on urgent social issues. Known as "Actions of Immediate Witness," these included Single Payor Health Care; End Present-Day Slavery in the Fields; Oppose a U.S. Attack on Iran; Raise the Federal Minimum Wage to $10 in 2010; Extend the Tax Credit for Wind and Solar Power; and Oppose the Florida and California Marriage Protection Initiatives. Delegates also voted to adopt a Congregational Study/Action Issue on Ethical Eating: Food and Environmental Justice. The Rev. Dr. Carlsson-Bull, outgoing chairman of the UUA's Commission on Social

Unitarian Universalist Assoc. honors South Shore resident

Witness said, "A Congregational Study/Action Issue is a mega-issue, to which we as an association commit for a minimum of four years of intensive study and action." By selecting this issue, Unitarian Universalist congregations have challenged themselves to unite theology with practice and address social inequality and environmental destruction. This issue was initially proposed by the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Falmouth.

Hundreds of delegates joined local leaders from the immigrant and gay/lesbian/transgender/bisexual/transgender communities in a public witness event called "Valuing All Families."

As a featured speaker, UUA President Sinkford said, "Our vision of justice is not limited to concern for one oppressed group. It's a vision of justice in which all American families are valued. We say that the Beloved Community must have room for all of us."

In addition to tending to official business, attendees worshipped, celebrated, rallied and attended classes at "UU University" to learn how to be more effective in their home congregations. The Unitarian Universalist Association is an association of more than 1,000 self-governing congregations that hold a vision with the invitation to "Nurture your spirit; help heal our world."

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JULY 28, 2008

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) With new facts to work with, you should feel more confident in moving ahead. But continue to do so at an unhurried pace so you can spot details you might otherwise miss.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Taking on that new workplace project could be one of your smarter career moves. Expect a surprising show of support from someone who had always been a critic.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel you're too busy to undertake a new responsibility. But check it out before making any decisions. What you learn could persuade you to change your mind.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You feel quite content enjoying all the comforts of home right now. But the urge to travel grows stronger, and by week's end, you could begin packing your bags.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A hectic period begins to ease up, but that doesn't mean the Fine Feline can do much catnapping these days. You need to finish those old tasks and prepare for new ones.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect to get some good news about your financial situation by week's end. But it could still be too early to rush out with a long shopping list of things to buy.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your management skills make an impression on some workplace VIPs who might be looking for someone like you to take on an upcoming project. Good luck.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Meeting a former adversary might be unsettling at first. But time has softened hard feelings, and you could be on the brink of starting a new relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A troubling situation close to home might cause you to change your travel plans. But getting all the facts before you act might cause you to reconsider.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might be quite alone right now in deciding to support a major workplace shift. But others will join you as new information supports your bold move.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A former co-worker returns with news that could persuade you to reassess recently made plans. Be sure to consult with a trusted colleague before you act.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your motives behind a recent decision could be called into question by a rival. But once you present the facts, all doubts will be resolved. Enjoy an arts-rich weekend.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Company Theatre's 'Millie' is frothy fun

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Hit movies don't always translate into big Broadway hits — just ask the producers of "The Goodbye Girl," "Big: The Musical," and "The Wedding Singer." Smaller, sometimes lesser-known movies often fare better when adapted for the stage. Mel Brooks' original 1968 film version of "The Producers" and the 1988 John Waters cult comedy "Hairspray" have been turned into huge Tony Award-winning musical mega-hits.

In 1967, director George Roy Hill had only little success with his musical comedy, "Thoroughly Modern Millie," despite a cast that included Julie Andrews and Mary Tyler Moore. But when Richard Morris and Dick Scanlan turned the movie into a 2002 Broadway musical, with new music by Jeanine Tesori and new lyrics by Scanlan, audiences reacted much more favorably to the 1920s-set story of a small-town single girl who comes to New York City looking to marry for money. Opening on April 15, 2002, the show went on to win six Tony Awards, including Best Musical.

Having seen "Millie" twice during its two-year New York run, once on its national tour stop at Boston's Wang Theatre in October 2003, and just last summer in Dennis, where the venerable Cape Playhouse mounted a top-shelf regional production, I had to wonder if I needed to see one more re-telling of the tale of Millie Dillmount. The Company Theatre's current production of "Millie" showed me that there is truth in even the most timeworn adage — maybe you can't ever really get enough of a good thing.

That said, don't come to "Millie" looking for the great American musical — just come looking for some frothy fun.

Kelly Rice of Kingston, Becky Geggatt as Millie of Bridgewater, Alexandra Tripp of Plymouth and Juliana Dennis as Mrs. Mears of Norwell perform in "Thoroughly Modern Millie," playing now at The Company through Aug. 17.

As the story unfolds, Millie (Becky Geggatt) has moved to New York from Kansas with the dream of becoming "thoroughly modern" and marrying for money instead of love. In short order, Millie meets the attractive but cash-poor Jimmy Smith (Company Theatre fixture John F. King), and lands a job in the steno pool run by the self-important Trevor Graydon (Shane Donovan), whom she sets out to marry. When she's not wearing out the ribbon on her Smith-Corona at the Sincere Trust Insurance Company, Millie makes new friends with the other residents — mostly aspiring actresses — at her home away from home, The Hotel Priscilla.

One of the show's major subplots involves the sinister doings of hotel manager Mrs. Meers (Juliana Dennis) who coerces her laundrymen, a pair of Chinese brothers, Ching Ho (Paul Brennan III) and Bun Foo (Michael Iemma), into aiding her with the kidnapping and sale into white slavery of some of her guests. One of the prospective victims is Millie's new friend, the timid heiress Miss Dorothy Brown (Kristen Huberdeau). Millie is also befriended by Muzzy Van Hossmere (Markesha McCoy), a nightclub singer whose own marriage for money makes her a role model for Millie.

These plot contrivances are no more believable than Mrs. Meers' Asian accent or Oriental-inspired attire. Everything happens strictly to advance the plot, to inspire comedy and to offer the large company many opportunities to break into song and dance. And, before anyone can get offended by some of the more blatant stereotyping, it is made clear that Mrs. Meers is really a has-been American actress and her Chinese partners in crime are actually the heroes who ultimately save the day. Brennan and Iemma are terrific throughout, especially when their characters sing in Chinese, complete with overhead subtitle translations, about the mother they want to bring to America to the tune of "Mammy." Jeanine Tesori's new songs and additional music, most notably Millie's splashy second act number, "Gimme, Gimme" add bounce to the proceedings. In Norwell, Michael Joseph does a terrific job with an 18-piece pit orchestra that, thankfully, never overwhelms the on-stage performers.

Foremost among the Norwell production's considerable assets is Becky Geggatt, making her Company debut, who brings appealing pluck and a strong voice to the starring role. Geggatt is ably supported by an exuberant cast that includes Weymouth's always charming King as Millie's suitor, Jimmy; a game Dennis as Mrs. Meers; and the spirited and appealing McCoy as Muzzy.

Directors Zoe Bradford and Jordie Saucerman deftly maneuver their cast through the multiple plots. Choreographer Sally Ashton Forrest does a wonderful job with the many dance numbers, including a type-and-tap that may remind some of the number from "The Producers" that has old ladies using walkers as dance props. The entire production benefits greatly from Shirley Carney's bright, beautiful and perfectly period-appropriate costumes. Set designer Marc Ewart's Art Deco-inspired ode to Manhattan circa 1922 provides an attractive backdrop though it occasionally proves distracting when actors struggle with colliding set pieces.

"Thoroughly Modern Millie" will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, through Aug. 17. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com

Elder Affairs eyes new home at 'Garage'

Has outgrown space at Community Center

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We have a dream."

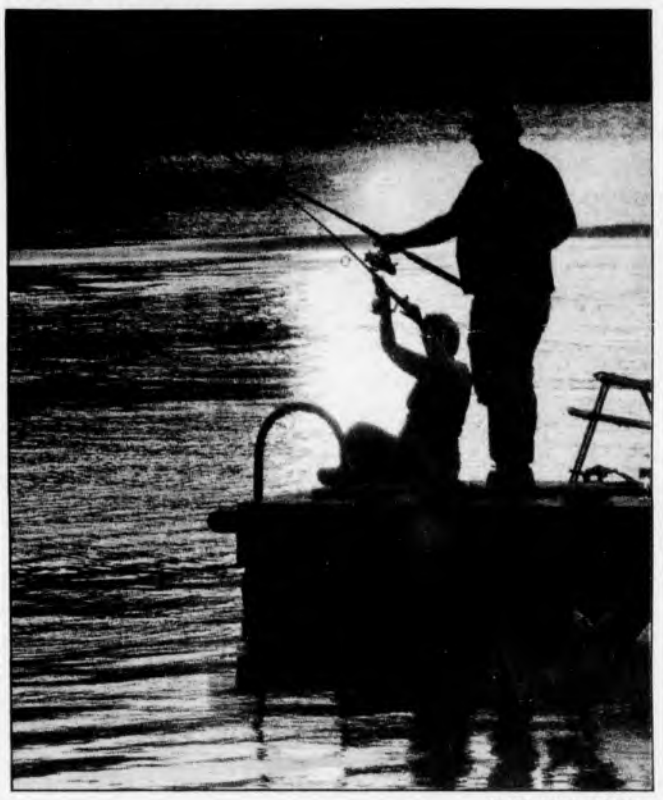
Director of Elder Affairs Linda Elworthy said to introduce the topic of a new location for the Senior Center at the Board of Selectmen's meeting Monday night. With the demand for expanded services through Elder Affairs and renovations at the South Shore Community Center, the Senior Center is poised for a move. But, where?

"The seniors are in dire need of more space," said Joe Nedrow of the Board of Directors and one of the members of the sub-committee looking into an alternative space. "We've looked at every possible space and the most under-utilized town-owned building is by far the Teen Center, or 'the garage."

The Senior Center has been in the South Shore Community Center for about 18 years and pays for the utilities and maintenance of the space, approximately $14,000 per year.

"We are two agencies that are growing and we are choosing to find alternative space," said Elworthy in a phone interview. Parking in that area is at a premium and seniors often have to find a space on Highland Avenue in order to park for a morning or lunchtime program.

The garage is nestled between the Red Lion Inn and the town parking lot in the Village. The building, which formerly served as the highway department garage was transformed into a place to have fun and hang out for mostly middle-school aged children in town roughly 10 years ago. The building itself is about 65 years old.



There were two options presented. The first would be to renovate the space to be appropriate for the type of activities the Senior Center regularly has. A kitchen would be a needed asset. The second option, and it seemed the preferred, was to knock down the current building and build an entirely new two-story building. In addition to the first floor shared space, with a kitchen, four units of affordable housing could be included on the second floor.

"It would be a win-win for the community," said Nedrow, adding with the affordable housing component the project would qualify for Community Preservation funds.

Nedrow said Elder Affairs board members have talked to various organi-

Historical Society lecture on pre-historic Cohasset

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Did you know Boston Harbor sits on a volcano? Did you know the word Massachusetts is named for Blue Hill? Did you know at one time Cohasset was depressed 3000 feet below sea level under ice?

If not, a lecturer at the Cohasset Historical Society can tell you all about those facts — and many, many more — at a presentation next Wednesday, Aug. 13. Ronald Nunn, a professor at Montgomery College in Maryland, will speak on the period of New England history when the Conohasset Indians lived off the land.

Nunn, who is from LaFayette, Georgia, is a trained anthropologist with a specialty in archaeology. What brings him to Cohasset is his wife, Kay Marten, a Cohasset native. Nunn and Marten, along with their son and daughter, are visiting with Kay's mother and father, James and Shirley Marten. Nunn did a similar presentation on the Native American history in his hometown last summer.

While in Cohasset on vacation he has been spending much of his days researching and analyzing the Historical Society's collection.

Nunn has organized and categorized the Historical Society's collection of Indian tools, many of them are projectile tools used for hunting.

"It's an interesting set of artifacts...it's quite a good collection," said Nunn. Many of the artifacts have been in the society's possession for over 100 years. Some of the original labels written by Rev. Victor Bigelow, author of the first volume of Narrative History of Cohasset published in 1898.

Stage set for 2009 Triathlon

Mark your calendar for Sunday, June 28

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Next year on Sunday, June 28 the Cohasset Triathlon will make a splash on Sandy Beach once again. For the foreseeable future, Cohasset residents should look forward to the triathlon annually on the fourth Sunday in June.

Race Director Bill Burnett came before the Board of Selectmen Monday night to talk about the success of this year's Cohasset Triathlon and to gain approval for next year's date.

"The race brought a lot of credit to the town."
— Selectman Paul Carlson.

"Each year after the race we step back and look at what we did," said Burnett. This year, he said, he and the town had a lot to be proud of.

The event raised over $280,000 for its charitable partner, the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), making it the largest volunteer-driven JDRF event in the country.

"Being number one in just two short years is something I'm really, really proud of," said Burnett.

Burnett read several e-mails he received from racers singing the praises of the race and their experience in the town.

Burnett talked about the exposure the Triathlon gave to the town. He played a radio commercial that played on major stations in the weeks leading up the race describing Cohasset a "perfect setting"

This week the Mariner caught up with lifeguards, Kayla Farren and Max Kirby, at Sandy Beach.

Name: Kayla Farren and Maximillian "Max" C. Kirby.

Occupation: Sandy Beach Lifeguard (Kayla). Student at Miami University of Ohio and Assistant Manager and Senior Lifeguard at Sandy Beach (Max).

Best day of your life: Winning the Division 4 Basketball State Championship (Kayla). The day I met Tyler Kelly (Max).

Best vacation: Going to Turks and Caicos with my family (Kayla). Sailing the Caribbean (Max).

Favorite season: A tie between winter and summer (Kayla). Autumn (Max).

Favorite holiday: Christmas (Kayla and Max).

Favorite junk food or meal: Dipping Oreos in peanut butter (Kayla). Junk Food: Entenmann's "Pop 'ems;" meal: chicken curry, or sushi (Max).

Best book: "My Sister's Keeper" (Kayla). Tough one to decide — either "The Heart of Darkness" or "Where the Red Fern Grows" (Max).

Best Actor: Shia LaBeouf (Kayla). James Bond played by Sean Connery — but the new guy is pretty good (Max).

Best TV show: "The Office" (Kayla). "Frasier"... no, wait, "Mythbusters"...ok, fine, I admit it, "Beauty and the Geek" (Max).

Favorite music, song, group or artist: I like all music except for country (Kayla). Song: "Broken Hallelujah" by Rufus Wainwright — the one from Shrek; artist: John Mayer's new notes are good (Max).

Most embarrassing moment: When I was in eighth grade, I was the new kid in public school, and when the teacher asked for my name I thought she wanted my last name first (for alphabetization purposes, of course), so I said "Kirby," but then she didn't say anything so I reiterated, "Max Kirby" — little did I know the way I said it seemed like I was impersonating Bond, James Bond. It was pretty embarrassing to do that on my first day (Max).

Dumbest thing I have ever done: Once when I was skateboarding to class, some nice looking girls waved at me, I waved back and proceeded to collide with a bush. I didn't come out of that bush until they were gone (Max).

Fun fact about yourself: My favorite animal is the killer whale (Kayla). I can wiggle my ears (Max).

Pet peeve: Arrogant people (Kayla). Answering questions in the wrong form, for example: "Are you hungry?" "Well, I ate a few hours ago." "... sooooo are you hungry?" (Max).

Goal: Live life to it's fullest (Kayla). To someday be able to look back on life and smile (Max).

Person you'd most like to meet: Chris Farley (Kayla). Hmm. Definitely Batman (Max).

Biggest worry: Not getting into my dream college (Kayla). People on the beach who underestimate the danger of lightning (Max).

Best part of Cohasset: The water (Kayla). Thomas Pecca (Max).

Selectmen support 40-B moratorium

The Norwell Board of Selectmen has taken a strong stance against the state's affordable housing law, Chapter 40-B. To demonstrate their exasperation, residents of Norwell launched a modern "tea party," sending tea bags to the Governor with messages supporting the overhaul of Chapter 40B. Other local communities, like Marshfield and Walpole, have jumped on board the campaign.

The Cohasset Selectmen reached a consensus to write a letter in support of Chapter 40B moratorium and overall rewrite.

Selectman Paul Carlson said the Chapter 40B was written in 1968. "It might be time for some review…I'm in favor of at least a review and re-write of the law."

Selectman Karen Quigley agreed, "(The law) should be not so powerful for the developer and exclude the town from the project."

Under Chapter 40B, a state law, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects.

Town Manager Bill Griffin will draft a letter to the state for the Board of Selectmen to review.

Chairman Ted Carr, who in his day job has some oversight to the Department of Housing and Community Development, offered some input explaining Norwell officials recently met with state DHCD officials to discuss the issues. Currently, Norwell has 10 potential 40B projects in the works, which have heightened their concerns over the law, said Carr. However, he did not take a position either way on 40B or how Cohasset would respond.

Couple having sex in Sandy Beach lot charged

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 57-year-old woman and a 58-year-old man, both from Medford, are facing charges of lewd behavior after police found them having sex in a convertible parked in the Sandy Beach parking lot Saturday afternoon.

The caller reported that a man seated in a black Audi convertible with the top up appeared to be masturbating. The call came in at 4:56 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 2).

The officer who went to the scene and walked toward the vehicle realized there were two people in the car. The man, who was in the driver's seat, was nude from the waist down, as was the female passenger. They both pulled their clothing back on and said they were sorry, police said.

Police obtained the couple's identification and determined neither had a criminal record.

Police spoke to the caller and thanked her for contacting police. She had not realized there were two people in the car.

The couple is being summonsed to court on the charge of open and gross lewdness.

Housebreaks

• Police are investigating an apparent break-in at a house on Sohier Street. The resident reported the incident on Monday (July 28) and told police that his house was broken into sometime over the weekend when he was away. Missing from the finished basement were two paintball guns, a BB gun and $60 in cash. The resident checked the rest of the house and it does not appear anything else was missing. However, a Nintendo was missing from a previous break-in at the house which the resident reported at the same time as the more recent incident, police said. Chief Hussey said detectives processed the scene for evidence.

• A Schofield Road resident reported he came home from work on Monday (July 28) to find screens from sliding doors to a porch had been removed and access was gained to the house by smashing a bedroom window. Numerous items of jewelry were taken from a metal container. Police have processed that scene.

• Also on Schofield Road, another resident reported a break-in on Tuesday (July 29). A watch, rings, and $800 were missing. Detectives have also processed that scene.

Attempted break-in

An Atlantic Avenue resident called police the Sunday morning (Aug. 3) to report that someone had attempted to break into her house the night before. She could hear someone outside her window and then noticed the garage door was open about two feet. She reported when she asked "who is it?" the person ran away. Police said the garage door appeared to have been pried open. The matter is under investigation.

MV crashes

• On Tuesday (July 29) at 4:50 p.m., a 2002 Volkswagen, operated by a Cohasset woman traveling west on Summer Street attempted to pass on the left, a 2002 Chrysler traveling in front of her that had slowed down to make a left into a driveway. The Volkswagen struck the Chrysler, which was being driven by a Scituate woman. There was damage to both vehicles and they had to be towed, police said. The Cohasset woman was cited for crossing marked lanes.

• At just past 1 p.m. on Thursday (July 31), a 2004 Ford, operated by a Cohasset resident, was traveling south on Margin Street. There were numerous cars parked along Margin Street for the Historical Society house tour. Police said the Ford pulled over to the right as a pickup truck came in the opposite direction and made contact with a 2006 Buick, that was parked on the side of the road, scraping the car. There were no injuries and no tows. The operators exchanged papers, police said. The Buick was also registered to a Cohasset resident.

• At 10:04 a.m. on Friday (Aug. 1), a 1999 Nissan being driven by a Hanover resident, was headed south on Route 3A and attempted to turn left onto Beechwood Street when it collided with a 2008 Toyota, operated by a Scituate resident, that was traveling north through the intersection. The operator of the Nissan was given a warning for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. There were no injuries and one of the vehicles had to be towed.

• On Saturday (Aug. 2) a few minutes before 3 p.m., numerous 911 callers reported a crash on N. Main Street. Police said a 1994 Volvo, operated by a Cohasset resident, was headed south on N. Main. The driver took his eyes off the road and veered slightly, striking a 1991 Acura owned by a Cohasset resident. There were no injuries. The driver of the Volvo was cited for failure to use care.

Stolen bike

A purple and white girls' Trec mountain bike was taken from the bike rack and the swim center sometime overnight Monday (July 28) to Tuesday (July 29). The bike had been left there along with a bike helmet and life vest. The helmet and life vest had been turned in and were found in the swim center's lost and found collection. The bike was brand new, police said.

The incident was reported by a walk-in who explained when they returned to pick up her daughter's bike, it was gone.

False calls

Someone has been making false calls to area police departments about a woman being held hostage. Police received a 911 call stating "a male party is holding a woman hostage in Cohasset" at about 2 p.m. on Wednesday (July 30). Police have reviewed the tape and are tracking the call that came from out of town because the address did not appear on the enhanced 911-system screen.

"It was a false call and we have determined that this call and those to other jurisdictions have come from the city of Boston," Chief Hussey said.

No strike

A district manager from Shaw's alerted police on Saturday (Aug. 2) about the potential need for a detail officer should Shaw's employees go on strike starting Sunday (Aug. 3). As it turned out, Shaw's employees ratified their contract.

Chief Hussey explained that anytime there is a potential strike, police details are needed to make sure everyone's rights are protected from the picketers, to those that make sure the store is open for business to the customers.

No domestic

A call about a fight between a father and son on Jerusalem Road at about 7:15 p.m. on Saturday (Aug. 2) turned out to be unfounded. The caller reported that the fight was "getting vicious." Police reported there was no problem, the father was not home and in fact, both parents were at a Scituate concert. There were young people horsing around in the pool and they were advised to bring the noise level down.

Arrest

An officer observed a pickup headed south on King Street slow down, speed up and weave, police said. The officer pulled the truck over, which had been exceeding the speed limit, and saw empty beer cans and a cooler with beer in the bed of the truck. The officer made other observations and determined that the driver, a 22-year-old Pembroke man, was operating under the influence of alcohol and placed him under arrest. He was also charged with operating to endanger and speeding. His passenger, a 23-year-old Pembroke man, was placed in protective custody because he was heavily intoxicated.

Police said a few hours later when the 23-year-old man was being released he became combative because police would not return the cooler of beer that was being held as evidence. The man struggled with the officers and broke a mailbox that was on the wall. He was then arrested for resisting arrest and vandalizing property.

Customer

A man showed up at a local restaurant who was under the influence and was refused service. An argument ensued and police were called. The 27-year-old Weymouth man was placed in protective custody.

New contract for solid waste

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The town's solid waste disposal contract with Coventa (formerly SEMASS) will be expiring this fall. At present, the town is paying a net disposal fee of approximately $92 per ton. Town Manager Bill Griffin negotiated a new contract with a reduction in that fee to approximately $80 per ton based on a 10-year contract extension. The contract would provide for a 2.9 percent annual adjustment.

Griffin received another proposal from the Town of Bourne for five-year contract for approximately $75 per ton. However, he recommended staying with Coventa despite the lower cost for a few reasons. Coventa is a waste-to-energy facility, while the Town of Bourne is operating a traditional landfill.

"I believe the Coventa facility is more environmentally friendly and consistent with Cohasset's focus on sustainability," said Griffin. The length of contract was also a factor and lastly, there is some uncertainty with respect to how long the Bourne facility will maintain capacity and continue to accept solid waste.

"Our relationship with Coventa has been very good," said Griffin. In 2014, many Massachusetts communities contracts with Coventa will expire, then band together to get a better contract. While Cohasset will still have their 10-year contract, Griffin said when the time came he could try to negotiate Cohasset's contract to stay in line with the other communities.

Based upon the amount of solid waste Cohasset delivered to Coventa last year (approximately 1,800 tons), the reduction in the tipping fee will save the town approximately $21,000. Yet, that savings could be tempered by rising transportation costs.

The Selectmen endorsed signing the Coventa contract unanimously.

Mark your calendar for 2009 Triathlon

for the three-sport race.

"It's an example of what this race does for the visibility of the town and for its economy," said Burnett. He plans to collaborate again with the Chamber of Commerce to capitalize on the thousands of people who come to Cohasset to participate or watch the race.

"The race brought a lot of credit to the town," agreed Selectman Paul Carlson. The Selectmen encouraged Burnett to continue to work with the Chamber and the Economic Development Committee on ways to take advantage of the thousands of people who flock to town for the triathlon.

Burnett noted the entire race is self-sufficient with the race paying for police and fire assistance. "No town funds were used, with the exception of street cleaning before the race."

Burnett praised the Cohasset emergency response team, "The medical and police staff were absolutely incredible." County, state and South Shore Hospital assets were brought in to assist with the race. Despite having the resources available, there was no need for any medical transport or major first aid.

One of the critical decisions made by race organizers and safety officials is to keep the number of participants at the race relatively the same into the future.

"We did have a large waiting list this year, but we're going to keep the numbers as is," said Burnett, due to parking and emergency response restraints. With that being the case, Burnett expects when race registration opens in the early winter the race will sell out in a week or two.

One of the issues that gave organizers near panic attacks on the morning of the race was the dense fog sitting off of Sandy Beach.

"Now, we have a fog plan," said Fire Chief Robert Silvia. If the fog is too dense or surf too big to have the racers take to the ocean, the triathlon will become a duathlon with a run-bike-run.

"Planning for the '09 race started the day after the race," said Burnett.

In addition to the $280,000 donation to JDRF, the Cohasset Triathlon Association also gave donations to the Sandy Beach Association and the Cohasset Education Foundation.

Burnett estimates in addition to the nearly 1000 triathletes, close to 3000 spectators watched from Sandy Beach and throughout the course. Both the South Shore Music Circus and MBTA parking lots were filled to capacity on race day.

Cohasset native travels to Senegal to do missions work

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When Jessica Wheelwright left for Senegal on June 19, she didn't know what to expect from the experience. When she returned on July 12, she brought back more than she could have ever imagined.

Wheelwright, who will be a junior at Gordon College in Wenham, Mass. in the fall, went to Senegal, located on the west coast of Africa, on a short-term missions trip.

The 20-year-old Cohasset native and 2006 CHS grad immersed herself for three weeks in the Senegalese culture in an effort to achieve a greater understanding of both the people and themselves.

"The purpose of our trip was to share the love of Jesus Christ and to serve where we were called. Our trip was also geared for us to learn about another culture, country and part of the world. It was a cultural learning experience for us to learn a more global understanding of Christianity," said Wheelwright. Gordon is a non-denominational Christian college.

The journey to get off the 24-hour plane trip to Senegal was a months-long process.

From nearly the moment Wheelwright heard about the trip, she felt a strong sense she should go.

"It totally was down my alley," explaining the trip combined her long desire to visit Africa and her two college majors — French (Senegal is a French-speaking country) and youth ministry. Her experiences on four trips with the Appalachia Service Project contributed to her desire to do more missions work.

Yet, she didn't immediately apply for the trip. It wasn't until the day before the applications were due she made the fateful decision to sign up. After an interview with the trip supervisors, she was accepted onto the trip.

The short-term mission trip included eight Gordon students, one recent Gordon grad who served as the team leader and one professor.

The trip wasn't cheap — even missionary groups have to pay airfare — so she and her fellow students raised money through support letters to friends and family and small fundraisers at Gordon College. At least 10 percent of the trip's budget went toward local community groups in Senegal.

As they prepared their wallets, the students also prepared their minds in the months leading up to the trip by taking a course to prepare for the mission trip. They went on a retreat, held meetings to discuss the positive and negative impacts missionaries could have on the place they are visiting and even cooked a Senegalese dinner together.

When they arrived in Dakar, the capital city of Senegal, everything was different and a bit overwhelming. The crowded highway had people trying to sell things through the window. It was very hot. The sights, sounds, and smells took some getting used to. Being the only white people in sight was also a bit shocking.

Over the next week where the group visited local villages and churches, Wheelwright began to see why she came to Senegal.

"Nearly everywhere we went we were swarmed with children," said Wheelwright, sometimes as many as 100 kids would gather. Excited to see a white person, Wheelwright said they wanted to hug them and touch their hair. Accompanied by members of local churches and translators they would visit and talk with the people in the villages.

"Each one was a really different experience," said Wheelwright. The scenery in the villages was drab mostly brown as the rainy season was just beginning and that stark background stood in contrast to the colorful clothes the people, especially the women, wear.

"The Senegalese are extremely hospitable and they are open to talk about religion and politics, two topics very taboo here in America," said Wheelwright. Many of the young Senegalese they visited with would ask them tough questions about their beliefs, but in an open and curious manner.

"We were able to learn a lot from each other," said Wheelwright. Senegal is a primarily Muslim country, but there are some Christians. Many of the young adults they bonded with have stayed in touch with through e-mail. "I was pleasantly surprised at how open they were to talk to us."

During the second week in Senegal, Wheelwright and her group helped a group of Florida Baptist missionaries with a basketball camp. They made home visits with the children after the day at camp.

After roughly two weeks of ministry, they spent a few days de-briefing on the coast of Senegal.

"We talked about how we wanted this trip to affect the rest of our life," said Wheelwright. The group also went on a safari.

Wheelwright speaks with a lot of passion and excitement about her experience and it's clear her short trip to Senegal will continue to influence her life for years to come. She said however scary it was to travel to a new place; it was even harder to return back to her life in Cohasset.

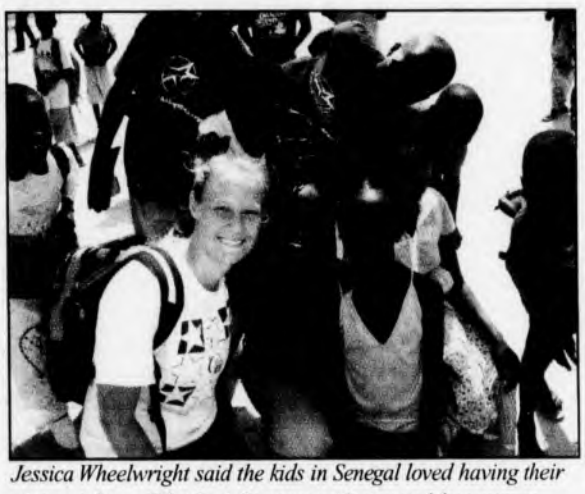
"I was surprised coming back how distracted a life you can lead (in the US)," said Wheelwright. Time is more fluid in Senegal, where arriving within an hour of a set time is considered okay. There isn't the hustle and bustle of everyday life in the US. "I felt God's presence more (in Senegal) because I depended on (God) more. To be honest, it was harder coming back (to the US)."

She has settled in to a regular 9-to-5 summer office job. In the fall, she will head to Aix-En-Provence, France to study abroad for the year. But, Senegal and her trip are still very much on her mind.

"I'm still trying to process it," she said although she found a Christian is a Christian anywhere, her lifestyle is vastly different than a Senegalese. "They live on less money in a year than I make in a week."

The trip has ignited a passion on her and is thinking about going back to Senegal for a longer period next summer.

"Part of me wants to give up my American lifestyle and go live fully trusting in God and doing missions work," said Wheelwright. "Sometimes I expect things I really shouldn't expect just because it seems so normal here. It takes such simplicity to live."



COURTESY PHOTOS

During the first day of village ministry in Selegal, Jessica Wheelwright met with members with a local church in Thies. The missions group from Gordon College had their first opportunity to talk about Christianity with interested Muslims.

Jessica Wheelwright, a Cohasset resident, traveled to Senegal in late June on a short-term missions trip. One of the weeks she was there she helped with a basketball camp in the capital city of Dakar. Here she poses with some of the young adults from the camp.

Jessica Wheelwright said the kids in Senegal loved having their picture taken. Wheelwright poses with some of the younger participants at a Dakar basketball camp.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Sharing and caring

We are intrigued by the potential of turning the "Garage" (a.k.a. the Teen Center) in the Town Parking Lot into a combination Teen Center/Senior Center.

There is no question that the Senior Center has outgrown its home at the South Shore Community Center.

Anyone who has visited the Council on Elder Affairs' office – the heartbeat of the Senior Center — knows how cramped it is!

"Senior" numbers speak for themselves: nearly 22 percent of Cohasset's population is over 60 and 4 percent is over 80.

As the "baby boomer" generation continues to advance – those populations are only going to grow.

At the other end of the spectrum, Cohasset will also see increases. While Avalon will not likely attract dozens of children, there are bound to be some in the two-bedroom units.

Much of the reason why Cohasset housing is expensive is that the town is such a desirable place to live. That desirability translates into families with children.

We believe that quality-of-life issues in a town that cares about its residents include buildings. A Town Hall, schools, recreational facilities, and so on are often the first place the prospective residents see or visit. They are also locations that continue to play a role in their lives after they move into town.

We can see lots of possibilities for a combined senior/teen center either in a renovated "Garage" or new structure.

One of the truly wonderful side effects could be intergenerational. By sharing the space, it is possible that more programs could be built "for two." So many young people today live far away from their grandparents and could be missing out on contact with older people, who have so much to give. Those who are "getting on in years" are often not as bothered with all the rushing around that the teens' parents are likely doing and would have time to sit, chat and share stories.

The proposal for a potential Senior Center at the Teen Center is in the beginning stages. There will likely be a lot more newsprint on the subject as the proposal progresses. We will keep you informed.

We have described Cohasset seniors in the past as the "gray guards" looking after our democracy. One sees a sea of gray heads at every town meeting. Many of our seniors attend because they care about the town, want to share their wisdom, and want to have a voice.

We think uniting the town's seniors with teens and preteens could have benefits that go way beyond shared physical space.

Our "gray guards" would be more interactive with our youth – the benefits of which would continue to pay off well into the future.

Join the debate and take our on line poll!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Treasuring the beach

TO THE EDITOR:

This morning dog walkers were very conscientious about picking up after their dogs as well as picking up old food, cans, bottles, trash and used condoms left on the beach. One morning I picked up more than 100 tampons that had washed ashore, putting recycled plastic bags to good use. We treasure the beach and try to keep it as clean as possible.

Paving: a race against time

MAKING TRACKS

COURTESY PHOTO

The last spot on Nichols gets paved.

COURTESY PHOTO

Warning sign at Steep Rocks.

Little Harbor Project-Nichols Road – What change a bit of paving makes! The Nichols Road residents can finally have the pleasure of driving down a paved road once again. The paving was started on Friday, Aug. 1st and was completed this past Monday, Aug. 4th. Getting Nichols Road paved turned out to be a race against time. The paving contractor needed to be lined up about two weeks ahead of time. We had to make this commitment before the road grading and pressure testing of Nichols Road were complete. Everyone was literally keeping their fingers and toes crossed that all would be ready when the paver arrived. With the cooperation of LM Holdings, our project contractor, last minute grading was proceeding just ahead of the paving contractor on portions of Nichols Road. But, in the end it all worked out. The photo shows the paving crew working on the last little bit of paving required to complete the paving on Nichols Road.

We might remind everyone that this is only the base course of asphalt. The topcoat will be placed on Nichols Road next year after all of the trenches and filled areas have had ample time to settle.

Also, don't be surprised if at one time or another some of the new paving is dug up and then patched. This sometimes happens in the normal course of a construction project for a variety of reasons. Most of the side roads off of Nichols have not been paved yet because either the construction itself has not been completed or the new water or sewer lines have not been tested to assure that they are fully functional.

Little Harbor Project-Jerusalem Road – Last week we mentioned that a small section of the wall supporting Jerusalem Road had collapsed. After examination by the project engineer, it was decided that several things should be done to prevent the situation from deteriorating and creating a further hazard. First, the contractor immediately rebuilt the two small sections of the wall that had collapsed. The project engineer then had the contractor rebuild the small area between the two collapsed spots and then extended the reconstruction about twenty feet on either side of the failed area. So, now the retaining wall stones in a major section of the roadway have been restacked.

However, the actual load carrying ability of the road in this spot is unknown and needs to be determined. The project engineer is arranging for geotechnical engineering specialists to assess the wall and road situation and make recommendations to the Town. (Geotechnical engineering is the branch of civil engineering concerned with the engineering behavior of earth materials.) In the mean time, the jersey barriers employed by the contractor will be located to keep vehicles a safe distance away the wall.

Early this week the DPW added flashing traffic warning signs at Steep Rocks and Bow Street to notify approaching traffic of the narrowed roadway. As a courtesy, we called the nearby residents to inform them why the signs were installed and that they could call us with any concerns or questions about the warning signs. (While we were there setting up the "SLOW" warning signs, drivers were zipping by at speeds clearly way in excess of the speed limit.) Please, please slow down be very careful when driving on Jerusalem Rd., especially between Steep Rocks and Bow Street. You can't see this area of Jerusalem Road when approaching from Bow Street, since it is totally blind for approaching traffic due to the curve and hill.

One of the subsequent options we may face is restricting the road to a single lane in this area, depending on the engineer's assessment. If this is necessary, we have discussed the possibility of deploying a special traffic signal at either end of the construction area that will allow measured traffic to flow in either direction. These lights were used when the Border Street seawall was repaired last year. Most resident as well as the safety forces were pleased with their operation as a safety compromise, as opposed to closing the road at its pinch point. We'll keep you up to date as we get more information.

Yes Ma'am, it's time for that mammogram

THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

I sat in my car, took a deep breath and thought of my late best friend Jill. One of the healthiest people I knew, Jill had passed away at 34 years old from some rare form of fast-moving cancer that had gone undetected.

When I turned 40 last year, it wasn't a huge deal. In fact, a few of my business colleagues thought I'd passed the big 4-0 several years earlier. This was the direct result of my adding a few years to my age back in my 20s, when it was bad enough being a "girl" vice president, but a young one to boot. Thus, as I passed into the fourth decade of my life, the only dark cloud on the horizon was the scheduling of my first mammogram.

Fortunately for me, I was low priority (40 years old, no family history), and I couldn't get an appointment for a full year. So it was just last week, on my 41st birthday that I finally had to face up to M-Day. When I mentioned it to friends, they flinched; some even shuddered; others emailed me messages that simply said "ouch."

For those of you who have yet to experience M-Day, or are fortunate to be of a gender that doesn't have to be subjected to this torture, it's similar to the childhood game of "mercy"; except you are putting your breast in the equivalent of a vise clamp and someone else tightens it (and no, you don't get to cry "mercy").

When I woke up on M-Day, I remembered the mammographer's instructions: "do not use deodorant or powder." Well, that's just great. It's 85 degrees with 90 percent humidity. But, rules are rules, so I cranked the AC and hoped to make it through until my appointment without offending anyone. Next, I put on my nicest bra (sort of like wearing one's best undies for the OB/GYN). Sigh. What was the point? I'd have to take it off long before anyone would notice.

Hmmmm. If the bra wasn't going to make me feel better – or braver – what would? Ah ha. I kicked off my flip-flops and pulled out the new fancy, schmancy, Sarah Jessica Parker-worthy sandals I scored in France the week before. It's my birthday; I can wear what I want to.

As I drove up to the building, I got a sick feeling. What if they find something? I always advise my son not to ask questions to which he didn't really want to know the answer. What if this was one of those questions? I know I'm low risk, but these things happen. Did I really want to know?

I sat in my car, took a deep breath and thought of my late best friend Jill. One of the healthiest people I knew, Jill had passed away at 34 years old from some rare form of fast-moving cancer that had gone undetected. One week she was planning to come and visit me, the next she canceled due to a backache. One month later, while I was in the hospital giving birth to my son, she passed away. Jill wasn't lucky enough to have an M-Day or whatever they could do to detect other types of cancer. Damn it. Let's do this thing.

Surprisingly, it wasn't as painful as my friends had made it out to be. But, then again, maybe fearing for the worst dulled the pain. Or perhaps it was the mammographer's perky attitude and constant banter that made me feel like Miley Cyrus in a Vanity Fair shoot. "Beautiful. Just beautiful. That's a great shot. Turn a little more this way. That's it. Got it. Beautiful." I comforted myself with the knowledge that these topless shots weren't going to show up anywhere other than on the desk of a radiologist.

When it was over, I booked my next year's appointment, and tried to put it out of my mind. But, as I passed through the waiting room, I noticed the worried looks of the women seated there, nervously paging through old issues of US Weekly and People. I gave them what I hoped was an encouraging smile, though I knew that not everyone there was likely to be as low-risk as me. I couldn't imagine what was going through their minds; so, when one of them made a motion to ask me something, I had a brief moment of panic.

"Excuse me. I couldn't help noticing your shoes. Where'd you get them?" she inquired.

A wave of laughter and shared camaraderie filled the room as we all realized that even while facing up to our potential messenger of doom on M-Day, we still wanted to be wearing fancy, schmancy shoes.

HEALTH NOTES

Health Fair to offer prostate screening

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...prostate screening by a simple blood test is beneficial under many conditions.

In a few weeks, the Board of Health will sponsor its annual Health Fair where local vendors and practitioners publicize their latest developments. In addition to the regular testing of sight, hearing, cholesterol, osteoporosis and blood pressure, etc, we expect to have several new tests available. A recent trend is for pharmaceutical companies, hospitals, and practitioners of all sorts to advertise their wares on public TV, newspapers, magazines, mailings, email and every other conceivable means of outreach. Quite frankly, the very act of advertising implies bias, and many health advertisements, along with carefully scripted warnings, imply that all's well if you just see a doctor and follow the instructions on the label. Generally, all medical treatment is a far more personal process which calls for reflection and gathering more information than is available on one doctor visit, reading of a label and selection of treatment. Such a decision certainly shouldn't depend on the quality of an advertisement. For this reason, if not for any other, a visit to the Health Fair (those participating are free from bias) is a good thing to do.

This year, it's important to meet Board of Health members and our excellent staff, led by Dr. Joe Godzik, Tara Tradd and Mary Goodwin, our new public health nurse, as well as many other health care professionals covering a variety important medical and support activities. This year, we're going to unveil several new initiatives. One will be in the area of mental fitness, complementing the other counseling in the areas of depression, anxiety and sleep by Peggy Chapman, RN CS, the Chairman of our Board of Health.

Later, in another article we'll describe the complete list of Health Fair activities. Today, because it's in the news, we'll talk about prostate screening. Each year over a 100,000 individuals in the US contract prostate cancer and nearly 30,000 die. And yet it's detectable and treatable in most cases.

We've all seen the ads about "going" often, etc. Life was better when such talk was done in the bed or bathroom or in the doctor's office, but now that it's out in the open, we'll explain prostate problems. For men under 50, the most common prostate problem is prostatitis, caused by bacteria or inflammation from another organ, treatable by a doctor. For men over 50, the most common prostate problem is prostate enlargement that causes some of the symptoms described in the ads. Screening for prostate problems is conventionally done by a PSA test.

Recent news items indicate that using the common PSA for (prostate specific antigen) test to screen men for prostate problems is controversial because it is not yet known if this test actually saves lives and that the benefits of PSA screening are certain to outweigh the risks of follow-up diagnostic tests and cancer treatments. For example, the PSA test may detect small cancers that would never become life threatening.

However, prostate screening by a simple blood test is beneficial under many conditions. If you're a man over 50 and have started having problems urinating, the reason could be an enlarged prostate and a simple blood test can save many from later more radical treatment. Treatment options can vary, depending on when it's detected, from lifestyle changes, "watchful waiting," drug therapy, non-surgical procedures to major surgery. The screening provided free at the Health Fair can help tell which would be indicated.

For this reason, the Board of Health has obtained a small number of prostate screening kits and will offer to administer the test. In the expectation that women also read this column, the BoH respectfully requests that you nag your husband to go to the Fair and ask about prostate screening.

Then work with your doctor to find a treatment that's right for you.

Surprise, there are athletes!

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I was mildly surprised the other day to learn that there were athletes involved in the 2008 Olympic games in Beijing.

I was sure that what used to be a competition to decide every four years who was the best at his or her sport had become a method of embarrassing China into giving up its bad habits and adopting those embraced by the rest of the world.

The big question appears to be how many athletes will lie gasping in the streets of Beijing, overcome by fumes from the primitive, coal-fired furnaces and boilers that make the Chinese economy run.

The Olympics have come a long way since Jim Thorpe, the winner of the decathlon and pentathlon in 1912...

"My lungs stopped working," said Adam Craig, of the U.S. biking team, after a training race. "It started with a routine deep breath on a descent, which produced a sharp pain and a fit of hacking, then progressed rapidly to a state where I was unable to take more than a quarter breath."

The Olympics have come a long way since Jim Thorpe, the winner of the decathlon and pentathlon in 1912, was stripped of his gold medals when it was discovered that he had played baseball in North Carolina for a semi-pro team that slipped him a couple of bucks after passing the hat.

Now the government of the Philippines, which has never had a gold medal winner, has a standing offer of $340,000 to the first citizen who wins one and the combined NBA pay scale of the American basketball team probably will equal the gross national product of its first opponent.

All of which leads to the words that most frequently appear in the same sentence with the word Olympics these days —"performance-enhancing drugs."

Already, U.S. swimmer Jessica Hardy has withdrawn from the team after testing positive in the trials, Italian fencer Andrea Baldini has been banned after testing positive in the European championships, and the men in the lab coats haven't even taken up their stations at the finish line.

The search for drugs is so widespread that the International Olympic Committee had to go back to the 2000 games in Sydney to snatch the gold medals from around the necks of the U.S. 1,600-meter relay team because one of them used a human growth hormone.

The media covering the Olympics has been at loggerheads with their hosts, who have departed from their earlier pledge of press freedom to permit censorship of articles deemed by Chinese authorities to be "not games-related."

Add to this morass, the ban (later rescinded) of the Iraqi Olympic team for government interference — hello, there, Saddam, wherever you are!

"With 100,000 soldiers and police looking over everyone's shoulder, the 2008 Summer Olympics are shaping up to be the No-Fun Games," wrote Victor Mallet in the Financial Times.

The Business of being born

Local mother organizes documentary viewing at Cohasset library

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In 2001, actress Ricki Lake gave birth to her second child with the assistance of a midwife in her home bathtub. She made the choice for a home birth under the supervision of a midwife after she experienced unwanted medical interventions while delivering her first child at a hospital birthing center. Lake succeeded in giving birth on her own terms and the experience was so unexpectedly empowering and life changing that she felt every woman should know what they could be missing out on.

To that end, she executive produced a documentary "The Business of Being Born" about the benefits most women could have from home birthing.

In Cohasset, one woman has decided to share that documentary with South Shore residents. Jeniffer Safarik, who has a three-year-old daughter and another daughter on the way, is passionate about promoting the idea of having a choice when it comes to childbirth.

"This movie sparked a passion in me I didn't know was there," says Safarik. While the documentary has caused controversy, particularly among medical professionals and hospitals, it also raised awareness of the alternatives to a hospital birth with the potential use of epidurals and other drugs.

Safarik, who moved to Cohasset in April, teamed up with two local companies — Norwell's Mamas Move and Hingham's Magic Bean — to bring the documentary for a viewing at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The documentary will be shown at 7p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 14.

The Cohasset viewing is part of a grassroots effort to get the film seen by a wider audience.

The documentary films several home births, including the birth of Ricki Lake's second child, as well as the director Abby Epstein's pregnancy and caesarian section. Along the way, Epstein conducts interviews with a number of obstetricians, experts and advocates about the history, culture and economics of childbirth.

It gives surprising statistics such as the US has the second highest infant mortality rate of developed countries and explores the fundamental question: should most births be viewed as a natural life process, or should every delivery be treated as a potential medical emergency?

When a friend sent the 84-minute documentary to Safarik in February, she said it was "eye-opening experience" for her. Newly pregnant with her second child made watching the film even more powerful and emotional for her.

"I knew after my daughter was born I wanted to do the (next) birth differently," said Safarik. From the get-go, Safarik and her husband have been advocates of natural childbirth. When she went into labor she had a birthing plan to have a natural childbirth with no intervention. However, when she was in labor too long, the doctors intervened and performed a caesarian section.

"Although I was happy to have a healthy newborn, I felt I was cheated out of the birth experience," says Safarik. Her daughter is now three.

She says the process of birthing a baby changes a woman and a lot of women don't know "how beautiful the process can be." The film really moved her and propelled her to action as she put together "The Business of Being Born" viewing to educate others on the choice they have when it comes to a baby's birth, said Safarik.

The viewing night will also include an informal question and answer session with a local midwife.

"I hope all types of women and their significant others come out to see the movie — if they have baby, are pregnant or are planning to have a baby. It's another point of view to consider," said Safarik.

She describes there is a spectrum of women with varying opinions on childbirth. On one end there are those who want to schedule a caesarian section for medical or personal reasons, on the other end there are those mothers who want to give birth at home, and then in the middle (where the vast majority lie) who don't realize there are other viable options outside of a hospital birth.

"There are a huge number of women who don't have the information. They go to their OB/GYN and trust them as an authority," said Safarik, adding many women heed the advice of their doctor and don't research all their options, like having a midwife oversee a home birth.

"It's about taking responsibility for birthing your own child, but it's also about having the confidence to face intimidating health care providers. It's hard to say to your doctor, "but why (do we have to do it that way)? It's about being confident enough to question…why can't you have a baby without drugs?"

The documentary has caused controversy across the US, provoking responses from the American Medical Association (AMA) and American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists (ACOG) contesting what the documentary portrays as the benefits of a home birth.

"The safest setting for labor, delivery, and the immediate postpartum period is in the hospital," or a similar accredited birthing center, read a statement released by the AMA.

The seating is limited, so interested residents are asked to RSVP with info@mamasmove.com or call 781-616-6244. Tickets are $10 at the door and all proceeds with benefit The Coalition for Improving Maternity Services.

Elder Affairs eyes new home

zations and town officials in town to get a feeling where they stand.

"Our purpose here is to give you a heads up on what we are thinking and we're looking for you to give us some direction and encouragement," said Nedrow.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said there needed to be some financial analysis of the options.

"Wee need to see the numbers," said Dormitzer, explaining there could be other obstacles beyond funding, including town sewer capacity. Nedrow said that was the next step, but they didn't want to get too far ahead of themselves. Dormitzer also mentioned the possibility of the apartment tenants being disturbed by noise generated by the evening recreation programs.

Selectman Karen Quigley said there was a need in town for a larger senior center and a need for affordable housing.

"Many other towns have more advanced senior center," said Selectman Paul Carlson, citing Hingham's senior center as an example. "This is something Cohasset needs."

Nedrow said there wasn't enough being devoted to the town's aging population — the elder services budget makes up less than one percent of the town's budget (in fiscal 2008, $194,229). Currently, $14,000 of that budget pays the rent at the Senior Center, so moving to a town owned building could ultimately be a cost-saver for the town.

"The wave of the future is intergenerational buildings with affordable housing," said Elworthy.

Selectman Fred Koed said he was in favor of an expanded senior center and affordable housing, but wanted to make sure the town was maximizing that piece of property.

"I want to be sure we have all the pieces together," said Koed.

From the audience, School Committee liaison to Elder Affairs Adrienne MacCarthy said the town and its residents needed to recognize the need for a new Senior Center.

"I'm not sure the community knows how desperately the need is for the seniors to have a center…as a town we need to lead and tell the residents what we need. There needs to be a sense of leadership saying this is a priority. I'd just like to pass that along and ask for your support," said MacCarthy.

Chairman Ted Carr asked the representatives from the Elder Affairs to continue looking into the feasibility of the project and keep the Selectmen informed.

"Every good plan has to start somewhere," said Carr.

A growing department

As part of an on-going effort by the Board of Selectmen to get to know how the different department of the town operate, they have asked each department head to come before them this summer.

Linda Elworthy, who just began her third year as Director of Elder Affairs, gave the Selectmen a brief overview of the year that was for the busy senior center.

One of the areas Elder Affairs really sees growth in is the demand for van service. Seniors call on the transportation vans to take them food shopping, medical appointments, hair appointment and lunch at the senior center.

"We are getting more and more requests for trips. The demand is really growing," said Elworthy. With more residents becoming "seniors," Elworthy says they have to continually re-invent themselves to be relevant to the younger seniors.

In the past year, Elder Affairs has focused on expanding their community education. Together with the Social Service League of Cohasset, they put on a three-session "Caring for the Caregivers" seminar. They offered an additional 20 workshops at lunch or in the evening focused on a wide variety of subjects of concern and interest to seniors in the community, including health issues, financial planning, legal issues (power of attorney, wills, and protecting assets) and mature driving. They sponsored two intergenerational programs pairing up the seniors with Deer Hill fourth graders.

Elworthy is continually surprised and grateful for the hundreds of volunteers who devote countless hours to Elder Affairs.

"There's a wonderful spirit in this community," said Elworthy.

Willing to share

For the past few years, the Teen Center has been used primarily on Friday night and Saturdays for monthly dances and birthday party rentals. With newly appointed Recreation Director Ted Carroll on more he immediately saw the untapped potential of the Teen Center.

"I do plan on using the Teen Center a good deal more," said Carroll in a phone interview. Running more classes, like a technology class, a fencing class and CPR, is just part of his plan. He hopes to transform the garage into a more welcoming "Rec Center" for all ages and drive more birthday rentals.

Yet, he has been talking to the Board of Directors at the Elder Affairs about the possibility of sharing the Teen Center space.

"I think we could co-exist in the space," said Carroll offering the option on having the seniors use the space in the morning and running recreation classes in the late afternoon and evening.

Historical Society lecture on pre-historic Cohasset

records, who donated them, where they were found and his best guess at what they were used for," said Nunn. "That type of information is lost in most places, so (the town) owes him a lot o credit."

Nunn referred to Bigelow's chapter on the "The Aborigines" often in the course of his research.

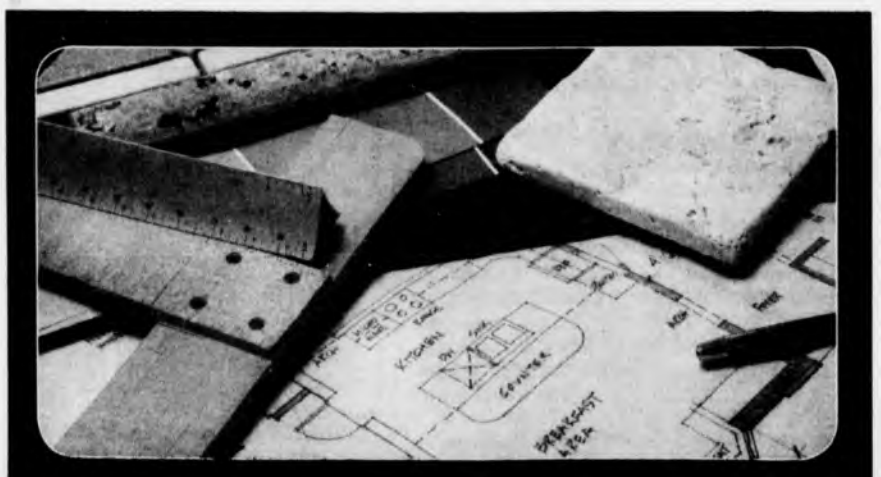
Nunn will speak about the four time periods for Native people in New England. He'll talk about what they ate 10,000 years ago, how there were hardly any humans in this area for nearly 2000 years and the "quantum leap" pottery was for the Native Americans.

What Nunn believes is the oldest artifact in the collection dates back perhaps as far as 6000 years ago, from the early to middle archaic time period based on it being similar to firmly dated projectile tools. In addition to the many projectile points (some used as arrowheads, others at the end of spears and still others used at the end of atlatls, a spear thrower) there are other Native American tools. A medicine stone, fishing weights, hammer stones, an axe are also part of the collection.

Nunn will offer some insight into what life was like for the Cohasset natives' lives were like. "I think the Conohasset had a pretty good lifestyle. They had plenty to eat and plenty of resources at the hands. Coastal Indians has a lot going for them."

Nunn will also discuss how the Native Americans made their tools and the different type of stones they used. Quartz and rhyolite (from the Blue Hills) were found in many of the projectile points. Flint, commonly found in what is now Pennsylvania, would have been a valuable stone used in trading.

"People should come to hear about pre-history of New England Indians who were here for 12,000 years before white people. They'll find out about climatic upheavals, prehistoric tools and lots of stuff about the local area they probably didn't know about," said Nunn.



Nunn encourages residents to bring any artifacts they may have at home to the event and share his archeology knowledge to determine what it is and when in history it was used.

The Planning Board is holding a public hearing on the Design Guidelines for the Village Business District on Monday, Aug. 11 beginning at 7:45p.m.

Village design guidelines public hearing Monday

Like any town center, it seems everyone has an opinion about the Village. Its old New England charm, its quirky nature and small town make it a place for residents to meet, shop and go about their daily lives. For the past few years, the stagnant nature of the village as far as development made the somewhat restrictive zoning bylaws come up time and time again. Here's a look at where we've been and what's left to do when it comes to zoning and development in the village.

The Past

Last summer and fall, multiple public meetings and workshops were held to hammer out a set of zoning bylaw changes for the village business district. The village business district roughly includes the former Carousel Antique building, Smith Place, Depot Court and Main Street down to the Red Lion Inn. It is home to roughly 50 businesses.

The vision that came along with the village bylaw amendments, which passed muster with voters at the 2007 Special Town Meeting, was to create a framework where a mixed-use (retail and residential), pedestrian friendly and economically stable business center. The Planning Board wanted to encourage growth and development in a good way by keeping the charm of the village while maximizing its potential.

The Present

With the village zoning bylaws amendments in the books, there are still some loose ends to tie up. A part of the zoning bylaw calls for a set of "design guidelines" to complement the recent bylaw changes. With the help of its consultant, Angus Jennings of Concord Square Development, the Planning Board has drafted the design guidelines this summer.

A preliminary reading of the draft design guidelines was held in early July. The design guidelines work together with the zoning bylaws and give a clear picture to potential applicants what is expected out of a project. A set of guiding principles, much like vision statements, guide the much more specific requirements on structure and landscaping.

The guidelines cover items such as rooflines, building materials, textures and colors, sidewalks, lighting, parking, screening and signage, to name a few. The document is only applicable to property within the Village Business District.

The Future

The Planning Board is holding a public hearing on the Design Guidelines for the Village Business District on Monday, Aug. 11 at 7:45p.m.

Copies of the proposed Design Guidelines to be considered at the public hearing are available in the Town Clerk's office at Town Hall.

Any member of the public, whether they are village property owners, business owners or interested citizens, are encourage to share their viewpoint on the design guidelines. The public is encouraged to comment on the design guidelines either at the meeting or by submitting comments in writing to the Planning Board office.

Because the design guidelines do not have to go before Town Meeting, the public hearing will likely be one of the last chances for residents to comment on the design guidelines before they become Planning Board regulation.

Any person interested or wishing to be heard on the application should submit any comments in writing to the Planning Board, Town Hall, Cohasset, MA 02025, or should appear at the public hearing.

ON-LINE POLL RESULTS

What should the town do about the old portion of Town Hall?

Plans are in the works to restore and renovate the old portion of Town Hall that currently houses the auditorium and a handful of town offices. The town's architectural consultants for the future renovation have drafted two options for the town to consider. Both options will update the utilities in the building, but a major difference exists between the two design plans. "Scheme A" leaves the town hall configured much the same, while "Scheme B" would return the town hall to its original configuration with the auditorium on the second floor and town offices on the first. The Board of Selectmen have supported in spirit Scheme B.

Preliminary estimates are $3.2 million to leave the general building configuration the same (scheme A) and $4.4 million to change it (scheme B). What should the town do about the old portion of Town Hall?

As of yesterday morning (Thursday) 88 visitors to www.wickedlocal.com/Cohasset had cast their votes.

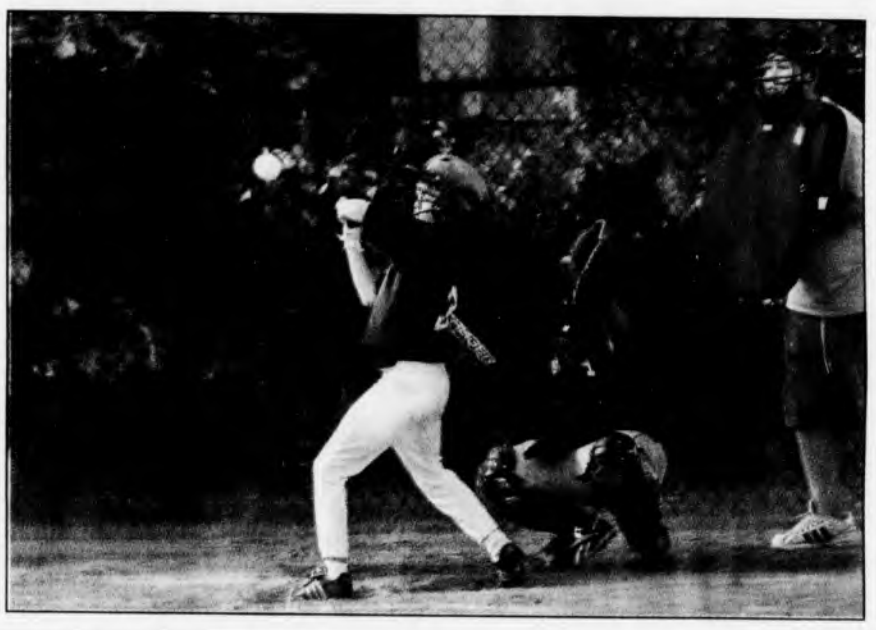
8-year olds turning into Cohasset's own Cinderella story

By Joel Racicot
JRACICOT@CNC.COM

After going 1-7 in the regular season this group continues to defy the odds.

Anybody finding any glass slippers around Cohasset just hold onto them for a couple days. The 8-year old all-stars from the Friendly League don't want to mess with their karma right now. They are on their way to the ball, or, ahem, the ball is rolling their way.

After winning only one regular season game, this group of Cohasset's favorite sons has put together a remarkable run in the playoffs. Beating Hingham, Kingston and Plymouth en route to a 4-3 league championship against Abington.



After going 1-7 in the regular season this group continues to defy the odds. After beating Abington the boys moved onto the Friendly League divisional playoffs where they played Parkview for a shot at the divisional championship. They won 5-1, Tuesday night.

"Losing seven of eight regular season games, it would have been easy for these kids to walk away and lose their focus and drive to play the game of baseball," said assistant coach Ken Greer. "But these kids did not. They showed up every game with a great attitude, ready to play and it showed in the playoffs…the town of Cohasset should be very proud of these kids. They were great."

Abington beat Cohasset 16-3 earlier in the year and came into the title game unbeaten. Parkview, who along with Cohasset and Quincy won its division, is sending its 12 and under team deep in the New England Regional for the Little League World Series. Their 8-year old team is also very good.

Abington earned a spot in the divisional playoffs with a wild card and beat Quincy, setting up another championship rematch. The winner of the Cohasset, Abington divisional title game, Thursday night, passed Cohasset Mariner deadline, plays in the state Friendly League title game, Saturday.

"You couldn't see bigger smiles on their faces," Greer said.

Baseball team wins 2008 Pembroke Invitational

Solid team play propels Cohasset 9-A boys to title

Within 24-hours of naming the eleven players to Cohasset's 9-A Summer Travel Baseball team, which included Joe Cavanaro, Timmy Chase, Michael Cohen, Taggert Eymer, Owen Gideon-Murphy, John Harzich, Kyle O'Brien, Liam O'Connell, Ben Rice, Alexander Schubert, and Dan Varney, coaches Dan Rice and Dan Varney began the groundwork to prepare their boys for a whirlwind of high level baseball.

That included 27 games in 43 days and featured competitive play in the talented Suburban League; Sandwich Summer Tournament and the Pembroke Invitational Tournament. After the dust of the infield settled, these boys ended up posting a 22-5 record that included an undefeated 6-0 run in the 2008 Pembroke Invitational with victories over teams from Whitman, Pembroke, South Boston, East Bridgewater and Plymouth.

Coach Rice scheduled skill clinics with Cohasset resident and high school standout Tommy Chase to give the team an opportunity to learn some tools of the trade. Chase spent weekday afternoons teaching the boys some of the finer facets of the game, such as middle infield play, outfield positioning, and one-on-one hitting instruction. The clinics proved to be extremely beneficial to these young players, as they would immediately put their skills to use in real-game situations. And, these skills were never more apparent than at the Pembroke Tournament, where the team continuously produced at the plate; in the field; and on the mound.

After winning their first four contests over the weekend, the team ended the regular portion play as the No. 1 seed heading into the Final Four Championship Series between East Bridgewater, Cohasset; and Whitman vs. Plymouth.

Cohasset came out firing against East Bridgewater to score six runs in the first inning with big hits throughout the lineup, including an in-the-park homerun by Ben Rice. They never looked back, defeating East Bridgewater 9-3 and Plymouth 10-0 for the title.

Rice delivered some punishing swings to send the ball deep in the championship series and caught in both winning contests earning game ball honors against East Bridgewater. Kyle O'Brien kept his hot bat alive with multiple hits and great play at first base. Liam O'Connell saw likely the most defensive action at second base and played flawlessly to keep both teams from reaching base. Timmy Chase turned his share of plays at shortstop, consistently produced at the plate and pitched a six inning shutout in the championship match to earn "game (and tournament) ball."

Owen Gideon-Murphy made the most spirit-deflating play of the tourney when he snagged a missile at third base on its way to the outfield to stifle an East Bridgewater comeback. Joe Cavanaro struck the ball well all tournament at the clean-up spot to consistently drive-in runs and land himself on a base to keep drives alive.

Zander Schubert played well at centerfield; pitched well; and hit well (from both sides of the plate). Taggert Eymer had his share of solid hits over the infield to drive in timely runs and played solid outfield. John Harzich fought off illness all tourney to help his team fight to the end and make the outs when needed most.

Michael Cohen pitched a gem against East Bridgewater and hit an enormous triple against Plymouth to put the championship in sight for his boys. And the man who always plays well beyond his size is big-play Dan Varney who defies any team to keep him off base.

Host families needed for new area hockey team

The Boston Junior Rangers Hockey Club, a newly formed AAA Midget hockey team based out of the Bavis Ice Arena in Rockland, is looking for host families for several of their players. The team is made up of players from all over the United States. They will attend local area high schools while playing for the Junior Rangers.

The host, or billet, family concept is something of a hockey tradition, and is especially important at the Midget and Junior levels. By opening their homes to out-of-state or out-of-country players, host families provide an opportunity for these young men to pursue the next step in their developing hockey careers. Lasting relationships are formed between the players and their billet families, and the host home becomes a second home — and the host town, a second hometown — to the players.

"We're bringing in some of the best young hockey players in the country," said Head Coach and General Manager Bobby Kinsella. "These young men are leaving their homes to play with and against the best players in the country. They have aspirations to play in college and our job is to help get them there."

Kinsella came to the Junior Rangers from the Sioux City Musketeers, a Tier I Junior A hockey program in Sioux City, Iowa.

Billet families are considered a very important part of the Boston Junior Rangers Hockey Program and the team provides a monthly stipend is provide to all billet families. For more information, visit the team's Web site, www.jrrangers.com; or contact Kinsella by calling 781-982-7070 or e-mailing him at bobby@jrrangers.com.

An Alaska cruise brings adventure

Fran Golden
GATEHOUSE NEWS SERVICE

KETCHIKAN, ALASKA - I was "Born to be wild." Well, maybe not. But I can now say I've been on a hog - in Alaska.

Cruising Alaska - in this case on Holland America's 1,848-passenger Oosterdam - offers options beyond sedately seeing the truly awesome natural beauty of the 49th state. There's also the opportunity for adventure.

When I first signed up for the motorcycle shore excursion ($268 driver; $142 passenger) I had two thoughts: Man, that's a cool excursion for a cruise line to offer. And, boy I hope I get a hunky, leather-clad stud to cling to.

Guide Don Harford from Panhandle Motorcycle Adventures was indeed leather-clad - and a charming, 60-year-old grandfather. But if you're going to cling to someone at 55 mph on a Harley on the Tongass Highway, he's your man.

And cling I did, as we rode with a small group of fellow cruise passengers literally to the end of the road in Ketchikan, a fishing town (turned active cruise port) surrounded by water and forest.

The others were all experienced riders (and their experienced passengers) and were excited to add Alaska to the list of places they've ridden. We paused on our ride to enjoy views including scenic islands, bald eagles, the Tongass National Forest and American Indian totem poles. But the fast patches of highway - only about 17 miles in total - were, of course, the most fun.

I similarly skipped more sedate sights for adventure during our port call in Alaska's capital of Juneau, heading into the wild for a day of fly fishing ($399 per person). It was me and six fishermen and we all put on rubber waders before climbing onto one of two small floatplanes.

We thrillingly (and loudly) soared for 20 minutes high above forests and islands and turquoise water, snow-capped mountains nearly always in view - we passed Mendenhall Glacier, too - toward our isolated fishing spot, a stream called Chicken Creek, which meets the waters of Icy Strait on remote Chicagof Island.

After our smooth water landing, our guides, Zack and Jesse, let us know this was a place that has a larger population of brown bears - also known as grizzlies - than any place on Earth. They told us this as Zack loaded lead into a rifle, "just in case." We got a lesson on what to do if a bear appears, which included forming a tight group so the bear would think we're some sort of giant creature. "Never, never run," Jesse said, "the bear can run faster."
